Nippon India Mutual Fund

Wealth sets you free

Managing risk is more important than simply taking risk.

Taking risks isn't enough. Optimizing risks, weighing pros and cons, and reducing the probability of untoward occurrence, is what differentiates falling and flying in investing.

Strong processes and risk management help you achieve your goals steadily and sustainably.

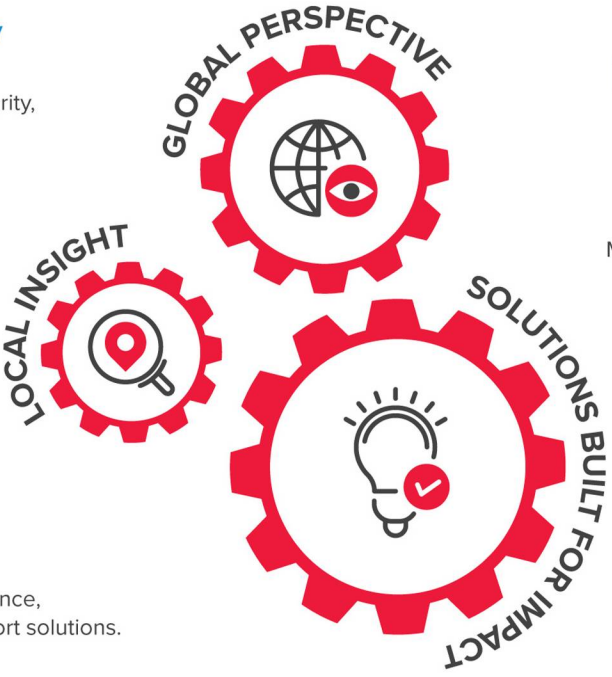
Powering progress through integrated expertise

In a business environment shaped by disruption, regulation, technology, and transformation, success is driven by more than just advice.

It is driven by agility, resilience, governance, and the ability to adapt faster than change itself.

At BDO India, we combine sector expertise, integrated advisory capabilities, and technology-led thinking to help organisations solve complex challenges, manage risk, and accelerate growth.

Tax & Regulatory Advisory



Helping businesses navigate evolving domestic and global regulations with clarity, efficiency, and strategic foresight.

Business & Deal Advisory

Supporting businesses through transactions, transformation, strategic expansion, and evolving market complexities with integrated advisory solutions focused on long-term business value.

Managed Services

Driving excellence through scalable finance, compliance, payroll, and business support solutions.

Technology & Platform Solutions and Digital Services

Enabling smarter, faster, and more connected business operations through cloud, analytics, automation, Microsoft-enabled technologies, intelligent platforms, and technology-led transformation solutions.

Leadership & Talent Advisory

Helping organisations build future-ready leadership through executive search, assessments, and board advisory capabilities.

SIP - Systematic Investment Plan | Visit https://www.hdfcfund.com/information/key-know-how to know more about the process to complete a one-time Know Your Customer (KYC) requirement to invest in Mutual Funds. Investors should only deal with registered Mutual Funds, details of which can be verified on the SEBI website (www.sebi.gov.in/intermediaries.html). For any queries, complaints & grievance redressal, investors may reach out to the AMCs and / or Investor Relations Officers. Additionally, investors may also lodge complaints directly with the AMCs. If they are not satisfied with the resolutions given by AMCs, they may raise complaint through the SCORES portal on https://scores.sebi.gov.in. SCORES portal facilitates investors to lodge complaint online with SEBI and subsequently view its status. In case the investor is not satisfied with the resolution of the complaints raised directly with the AMCs or through the SCORES portal, they may file any complaint on the Smart ODR on https://smartodr.in/login. PREFACE

The Indian public issue market has witnessed highs and lows several times over the last three decades. The highlight was 2007-08 which witnessed a huge mobilization of Rs.52,219 crore. The big secondary market crash in January 2008, however, led to a poor mobilization in 2008-09 of only Rs. 2,034 crore. The market bounced back in 2009-10 with Rs. 46,941 crore, followed by Rs. 46,182 crore in 2010-11 but was down again to Rs.23,989 crore in 2011-12. The market bounced back to Rs.34,521 crore in 2012-13, courtesy Offers of Sale through Stock Exchange Mechanism, a route opened to allow companies to meet with the public shareholding norms. 2013-14 again saw equity issuances going down to just Rs. 15,520 crore. The following year 2014-15 saw a strong recovery with equity issuances going upto 29,955 crore. 2015-16 saw a continuation of the trend with Rs.34,633 crore being raised, 2016-17 with Rs.37,449 crore being raised and 2017-18 ended with the highest ever mobilization of Rs.1,01,209 crore. The amount mobilized, however, fell to only Rs.40,024 crore in 2018-19. In 2019-20, it increased to Rs.94,146 crore. 2020-21 and 2021-22, despite being Covid years, saw all time high mobilisation of Rs.1,39,236 and Rs.1,56,656 crore respectively. 2022-23 saw the amount being mobilised drop significantly to just Rs. 71,289 crore with 2023-24 witnessing mobilisation of Rs. 1,04,628 crore. 2024-25 saw the amount being mobilised more than double to Rs. 2,32,971 crore with 2025-26 witnessing the amount being mobilised increasing further to Rs. 2,63,808 crore.

THE PRIME DIRECTORY-1994, the first edition, was an original compilation. Until then, knowing who are the intermediaries, what do they do, what has been their performance, how to reach them...was a complicated process. This Directory provided the benefits of having all this information on one's fingertips. An updated edition was released in 1995 by Shri D. R. Mehta, Chairman of SEBI and the subsequent edition by Shri J. Capoor, Chairman of UTI. All subsequent editions provided new formats, new sections and updated information.

NOW... THE PRIME DIRECTORY-2026

This new edition runs into 1,380 pages, covers 26,495 intermediaries/organizations with their 26,069 addresses (compared to 26,235 in 2025 edition and 6,427 in the 1994 edition), listed alphabetically in 46 different sections. It contains:

* updated addresses, phones, e-mail/website addresses of hundreds of organizations
* updated SEBI registration status and information on key executives
* updated performance data of each intermediary up to 2025-26

NOT JUST AN ADDRESS DIRECTORY...

Also a performance directory: The 2026 edition, like the earlier editions, is not just another address directory. It also provides, for each intermediary, easy-to-read performance data, deals and rankings over the past 5 years.

Articles by experts: Over the past 28 editions (since 1998), we have been carrying articles in the Directory by eminent personalities in the financial sector and capital market. This year, to bring more value to the readers, this Directory is carrying as many as 85 articles.

Acknowledgements: We would like to record our special gratitude to our continuing co-sponsors.

Co-sponsor's Profile

NATIONAL STOCK EXCHANGE OF INDIA LIMITED,THE

The National Stock Exchange of India (NSE) stands as one of the world's leading financial institutions and a key pillar in India's economic transformation. Established in 1992, NSE was founded with a vision to modernise India's capital markets through transparency, technology, and trust. Over the past three decades, it has played a defining role in deepening India's financial system, fostering investor confidence, and supporting the country's journey towards inclusive growth. The National Stock Exchange of India (NSE) was incorporated on 27th November 1992, recognised as a stock exchange in April 1993 and commenced operations in 1994.

During the time when NSE was founded, India was only beginning to embrace liberalisation. The idea of a screen-based, fully automated, anonymous order-matching exchange was revolutionary. NSE was the first to successfully use satellite-based communication for trading, creating India's first truly Digital Public Infrastructure well before online banking or e-governance became mainstream. In effect, NSE was India's first and to date the largest fintech before the term 'fintech' became widely used, taking markets from a handful of metros to thousands of cities and towns. Over three decades, NSE introduced dematerialisation, centralised clearing, depositories, real-time risk management, the Nifty index, equity and currency derivatives, ETFs, SME platforms, and mutual fund distribution through the exchanges amongst others - all rooted in the vision to bring world-class capital markets to every Indian.

The unique registered investor base on the National Stock Exchange of India crossed the 13-crore mark in April 2026. The total number of investor accounts registered with the Exchange stands at 25.7 crore (as of April 25th, 2026), having crossed the 25-crore mark in February 2026. This includes all client registrations done till date. As of March 2026, the market capitalisation of NSE-listed companies stood at over Rs 411 lakh crores, representing a 114-fold increase from Rs 3.6 lakh crore in March 1995.

The 3Ts: Technology, Transparency, and Trust

Technology has been the invisible foundation of this progress. From pioneering electronic trading to developing world-class market infrastructure, NSE has consistently redefined technological standards. Its system architecture - spanning six data centres, over 21,000 servers and more than 50 petabytes of storage - today rank among the most advanced globally - capable of processing nearly 2, 200 crore order messages on peak days and nearly 30 crore peak trades executed in a day, ensuring seamless market access at any scale.

Technology has also made markets more inclusive: today, a large institutional investor and a student trading on a mobile app participate on the same transparent, efficient platform. This is evident in the rise of retail investors in India. The unique investor base at NSE, having surpassed 13 crores, is now as large as the population of the 12th most populous nation in the world, having grown more than fourfold since March 2020. These investors are located across 99.85% of India's pin codes.

Transparency is the cornerstone of investor confidence. Indian markets have continually strengthened disclosure norms, risk-based supervision, and surveillance frameworks. At NSE, investor protection has been reinforced through robust financial safeguards - NSE's Investor Protection Fund (IPF) stood at Rs 2,871 crore as of March 31st, 2026, up 16.8% YoY.

And above all stands Trust - the foundation on which India's market success rests. Trust is not built overnight; it is earned through decades of integrity, reliability, and consistency. The confidence of millions of investors, from first-time participants to global institutions, is the true measure of the market's strength. Individual investors, once peripheral, are now central to this story. Trust, built through governance and transparency, is the ultimate currency of capital markets and the foundation of long-term wealth creation.

NSE conducted 17,916 Investor Awareness Programs in FY26, reaching over 9.4 lakh participants through webinars and on-ground sessions, educating investors on market risks, opportunities, and informed investing. NSE signed MoUs with several state governments and partners like Zomato, Swiggy, and the Divyaj Foundation to extend financial education to gig workers, civic staff, and under-represented groups such as working women. Outreach also included truck drivers, in collaboration with Sriram Finance and TV9 Network. NSE's Student Skilling Project (SSP) addresses the skill gap in BFSI sector by providing structured, in-person training. Through SSP, NSE partnered with state governments of Uttarakhand, Meghalaya, Assam, Chhattisgarh, Goa, Odisha, Telangana, and the district administration of Varanasi promoted financial literacy and BFSI skilling among youth. To combat fraud, NSE and SEBI launched the SEBI vs SCAM campaign via TV, print, and social media to warn investors against scams and unregulated entities, reinforcing trust and safeguarding investor interests in capital markets.

At NSE, we have implemented Cyber Security and Cyber Resilience Framework with controls across People, Process and Technology. We have built capabilities with pre-emptive security measures to anticipate and withstand potential cyber risks. During 'Operation Sindoor,' a DDoS simulation, NSE recorded an unprecedented 40 crore cyberattacks in 10 minutes, which was the highest ever. Despite this, attackers failed to cause damage due to the coordinated efforts of personnel, machines & advanced technology.

Towards Viksit Bharat: The Road Ahead

As India advances towards its vision of Viksit Bharat by 2047, capital markets will play a central role in financing this transformation. Three priorities will guide this journey: First, the democratisation of investments - ensuring every Indian, regardless of background or geography, can participate in wealth creation. Second, sustainable finance - mobilising capital toward renewable energy and climate-friendly enterprises to align with India's green growth vision. Third, global competitiveness - building market infrastructure and governance standards that attract global capital while serving national priorities.

India's capital markets are more than a reflection of economic strength; they are symbols of collective aspiration and confidence. As technology deepens, transparency strengthens, and trust endures, our markets will continue to drive India's transformation from a developing to a developed economy.

At NSE, our mission remains clear - to build markets that are larger in scale, broader in participation, deeper in integrity, and stronger in purpose. As India marches toward Viksit Bharat, our markets must remain the bridge between savings and opportunity, between innovation and enterprise, between aspiration and achievement.

NSE is truly the story of modern India, ambitious, fast-growing, and driven by technology and talent. It has helped thousands of companies grow, facilitated job creation, and enabled millions of families to secure their financial future. As India moves towards becoming one of the world's largest economies, NSE will continue to be a central force shaping the nation's financial landscape.

NATIONAL SECURITIES DEPOSITORY LIMITED

National Securities Depository Limited (NSDL) is India's first and leading depository and one of the country's most critical Market Infrastructure Institutions (MIIs). For nearly three decades, NSDL has been at the heart of India's capital market transformation, providing the secure, technology-driven infrastructure that enables investors, issuers, intermediaries, and regulators to participate confidently in the financial ecosystem. Established in 1996 under the Depositories Act, NSDL pioneered the dematerialisation of securities in India and fundamentally changed how securities are held, transferred, settled, and governed.

Today, NSDL stands as India's largest depository across several key parameters, including number of issuers, active instruments, market share in demat custody value, settlement volume, and assets under custody. With assets under custody exceeding ₹535 lakh crore, more than 4.5 crore active demat accounts, a network of over 300 Depository Participants, and a presence across more than 99% of India's PIN codes and 194 countries, NSDL has become an integral part of the nation's financial architecture (data at on June 2026).

To appreciate NSDL's role, one must revisit the Indian securities market of the early 1990s. Investors faced significant challenges associated with physical share certificates, including forged documents, bad deliveries, lengthy transfer procedures, loss or theft of certificates, and settlement delays. These inefficiencies created operational risks and limited investor participation. India's economic liberalisation, coupled with regulatory reforms and technological evolution, created the need for a modern securities infrastructure. The enactment of the Depositories Act, 1996 became a watershed moment, laying the legal foundation for electronic ownership and transfer of securities. NSDL emerged as the institution that would lead this transformation. By introducing dematerialisation, NSDL enabled securities to be held electronically, eliminating the risks associated with physical certificates and dramatically improving efficiency, transparency, and investor protection. Importantly, NSDL was among the pioneering depositories globally that directly implemented dematerialisation, bypassing the traditional two-step process of immobilisation followed by dematerialisation. This innovation accelerated India's transition to a digital securities market and established the foundation for future capital-market reforms.

Over the years, NSDL has evolved far beyond its original role as a securities depository. Today, it serves as a critical provider of market infrastructure that underpins some of the most important functions of India's financial system. Its role extends across equity markets, debt markets, mutual funds, foreign investments, corporate governance services and e-governance initiatives. NSDL has consistently worked alongside regulators and market participants to implement transformative reforms. These include the transition from longer settlement cycles to T+1 settlement and, more recently, the phased introduction of T+0 same-day settlement, placing India among the world's most advanced securities markets. Other notable market-enhancing initiatives include direct credit of securities to investor demat accounts, common contract notes, integrated e-voting solutions, and sophisticated covenant-monitoring platforms for debt-market participants. These initiatives demonstrate NSDL's broader mission: translating regulatory vision into secure, scalable, and technology-led market solutions.

Technology has always been central to NSDL's evolution. As financial markets become increasingly digital and interconnected, technology is no longer merely an enabler; it is the foundation upon which trust, scale, and resilience are built. NSDL continually invests in upgrading its infrastructure, strengthening cybersecurity, enhancing interoperability, and improving user experience. The organisation operates a 24x7 Security Operations Centre aligned with global standards and has made substantial investments in cyber resilience, capacity enhancement, and operational continuity. It has also embraced API-led integration, enabling smoother connectivity between depository participants, brokers, custodians, issuers, and other ecosystem stakeholders. From facilitating foreign portfolio investment and enabling corporate governance through e-voting, to supporting insurance digitisation, academic credential verification, and nationwide financial inclusion initiatives, NSDL has consistently demonstrated its ability to evolve alongside the needs of the economy. Today, it is not merely a depository; it is a trusted digital utility and a foundational pillar of India's financial ecosystem.

As India advances towards becoming one of the world's largest economies, NSDL remains committed to its enduring purpose: safeguarding investor assets, strengthening market trust, fostering innovation, and building future-ready infrastructure that supports the nation's growth aspirations. Anchored in trust, powered by technology, and aligned to India's growth, NSDL continues to shape the future of India's capital markets.

PANTOMATH CAPITAL ADVISORS PRIVATE LIMITED

Pantomath Group: India's Newest Home-Grown Diversified Financial Services Institution

Founded in 2013, Pantomath Group has emerged as one of India's fastest growing diversified financial services institutions, creating an integrated ecosystem that connects entrepreneurs, businesses, investors and wealth creators. What began as an investment banking platform has evolved into a diversified financial services house spanning investment banking, asset management, mutual funds, alternative investments, wealth management, institutional equities, stock broking, financial distribution, and AI & fintech.

Built on the belief that access to capital can transform businesses and create long term economic value, Pantomath has consistently worked at the intersection of entrepreneurship, capital markets and wealth creation. Over the last decade, the Group has established itself as a trusted partner for companies seeking growth capital, investors looking for differentiated opportunities across public & private markets, and advisors pursuing their entrepreneurship instincts.

Today, Pantomath Group stands as one of India's most dynamic financial services groups, combining institutional expertise with entrepreneurial agility to serve clients across the entire financial lifecycle.

At the heart of the Group's success is its ability to offer integrated solutions through multiple business verticals that complement and strengthen one another and, in the process, has built a diversified financial ecosystem, catering to multifarious strata of society.

- Investment Banking

Pantomath Capital Advisors, the flagship company of the Group, is a SEBI registered Category I Merchant Banker and one of India's leading investment banking franchises. The Organisation provides a comprehensive range of capital market and corporate finance solutions including Initial Public Offerings (IPOs), Follow on Public Offers (FPOs), Qualified Institutional Placements (QIPs), mergers and acquisitions, private equity syndication, restructuring and strategic advisory.

Over the years, Pantomath Capital has successfully managed more than 150 Equity Capital Market transactions, helping businesses across sectors raise capital, unlock value and accelerate growth. The Company has also managed more than 100 IPOs, establishing itself as a key participant in India's evolving primary market ecosystem. The investment banking platform has developed deep expertise across industries and has worked closely with promoter driven businesses, emerging enterprises and high growth companies aspiring to access public markets and institutional capital.

- Mutual Funds

Expanding beyond investment banking, the Group entered the asset management industry through The Wealth Company, one of India's newest and private equity style asset management company. The Wealth Company Mutual Fund upon receiving regulatory approval from SEBI, has rapidly built a diverse product portfolio spanning equity, debt, hybrid and alternative investment solutions. The platform is driven by a research-intensive investment philosophy that combines institutional rigour with long term wealth creation objectives. The Wealth Company represents Pantomath Group's commitment to democratizing investment opportunities and creating innovative products for retail investors, distributors, family offices and institutions.

- Alternative Investments

The Group has built a strong presence in alternative investments through Category II Alternative Investment Funds via Bharat Value Fund Series and specialized investment strategies. These platforms provide investors with access to opportunities in private equity, pre-IPO investments, real estate linked opportunities and other alternative asset classes. Leveraging the Group's extensive business network and investment expertise, these strategies are designed to identify high quality opportunities before they become widely accessible to public market participants.

- PMS & Basket Investing

Pantomath, through its group company, Asit C. Mehta Financial Services, offers a comprehensive suite of Portfolio Management Services (PMS) and Basket Investing solutions designed to meet the evolving wealth creation needs of individual and institutional investors. The PMS platform provides professionally managed, research-driven portfolios across multiple investment strategies and market capitalisations. Complementing this is the Group's Basket Investing offering (iBasket), which enables investors to participate in curated, theme-based equity portfolios, offering the convenience of diversified investing while retaining transparency and control over individual stock holdings.

- Wealth Management and Distribution

Pantomath's wealth management and distribution platform delivers customized financial solutions to high-net-worth individuals, entrepreneurs, family offices and retail investors. The business offers access to mutual funds, alternative investments, structured products, public market opportunities and financial advisory solutions. Through its client centric approach, the platform seeks to create long term wealth while maintaining a strong focus on risk management and portfolio diversification.

- Institutional Equities and Financial Services

Complementing its core businesses, the Group also operates across institutional research, market intelligence, stock broking and financial distribution. Together, these capabilities allow Pantomath to provide end-to-end financial solutions under a single integrated framework.

Founders That Inspire Growth

Founded by Madhu Lunawat and Mahavir Lunawat, Pantomath's success is rooted in visionary leadership and strong governance.

Madhu Lunawat

Madhu Lunawat has been instrumental in building the Group's wealth and asset management businesses. A finance professional with extensive experience across financial services, she spearheaded the launch of The Wealth Company Mutual Fund and became the first Indian woman to independently establish and receive regulatory approval for a mutual fund house. Her leadership continues to drive the Group's expansion into investment management and wealth creation solutions.

Mahavir Lunawat

Mahavir Lunawat is among India's most respected investment banking professionals. With more than 25 years of experience across capital markets, mergers and acquisitions, restructuring and corporate finance, he has played a pivotal role in shaping the Group's growth trajectory. Widely regarded as a thought leader in India's capital markets ecosystem, he currently also serves as the Chairman of the Association of Investment Bankers of India (AIBI), reflecting his standing within the financial services industry.

Strong Governance and Board Oversight

Pantomath Group's governance framework is strengthened by an accomplished leadership and advisory structure comprising experienced professionals from financial services, public policy and business leadership.

The Board and advisory ecosystem of Pantomath Group companies include distinguished industry veterans and former bureaucrats such as Shri Ram Sewak Sharma (Retd. IAS-1978 batch), Smt Rashmi Verma (Retd. IAS-1982 batch), Shri Krishan Kumar Jalan (Retd. IAS-1982 batch), Shri Kshatrapati Shivaji (Retd. IAS-1986 batch), Shri Hukum Chand Jain (Retd. IRS-1982 batch), Shri Hemant Bhargava (former Chairman In-Charge and MD of LIC), Shri Atul Joshi (former MD & CEO of Fitch Ratings India and Sri Lanka), and Shri Ambareesh Baliga (capital market veteran) among others.

This blend of entrepreneurial vision and institutional governance enables Pantomath to maintain high standards of transparency, compliance and stakeholder trust while pursuing rapid growth.

Scale That Sets Pantomath Apart

The true strength of Pantomath lies in the scale of its ecosystem and relationships. Over the last decade, the Group has built India's largest private business network comprising more than 7,000 businesses, creating a unique platform that connects entrepreneurs, investors and growth opportunities across sectors and geographies. The Group has served more than 600 corporate clients across over 30 industries, reflecting its ability to understand diverse business models and deliver customized capital solutions. Its team of approximately 500 professionals brings together expertise across investment banking, fund management, research, wealth management, distribution and technology. These numbers underscore not only the scale of the platform but also the trust that businesses and investors place in the Pantomath ecosystem.

GAJA ALTERNATIVE ASSET MANAGEMENT LIMITED

Building the Future Champions of the Indian Economy

Gaja Capital is one of India's leading private equity and alternative asset management firms, focused on providing growth capital to ambitious entrepreneurs building the future champions of the Indian economy. Founded in 2004, the firm has established itself as India's first institutional and independent private equity firm, distinguished by a long track record of performance and value creation and an unwavering commitment to the country's mid-market. Over more than two decades, Gaja Capital has come to be recognised as a partner of choice by emerging Indian companies and by top-tier global and domestic institutional investors alike.

A specialist in India's mid-market

At the heart of Gaja Capital's identity is a deliberate and enduring focus: the Indian mid-market. Rather than chasing scale for its own sake, the firm has built its reputation as a mid-market scale-up specialist, partnering with proven entrepreneurs and management teams to provide growth and buyout capital, deep operating support, and patient, long-term ownership. The companies Gaja backs are typically on the demanding journey from roughly ₹100 crore to ₹1,000 crore in revenue — businesses that already hold a leadership position in a clearly defined segment and are ready to make the leap from founder-led enterprise to enduring institution.

This specialisation has translated into deep sector expertise. Over two decades, Gaja Capital has invested across four core areas: Intelligent Software and Automation, Education, Employment and Employability, Consumer and BFSI.

Discipline that has held through every cycle

What has remained constant since 2004, through a period in which almost everything around the firm has changed, is a philosophy grounded in discipline. Gaja Capital has consistently prioritised disciplined underwriting, governance-first partnerships, and sustainable unit economics over momentum investing and short-term outcomes. The firm works alongside its founders and management teams through market cycles rather than optimising for any single moment, and it rarely commits capital unless there are multiple credible paths to a successful exit.

That patience is matched by a distinctive approach to value creation. Gaja's contribution begins, rather than ends, at the point of investment. The firm has built in-house capabilities in finance, talent acquisition and technology that it makes available to every portfolio company, supporting senior-level hiring, mergers and acquisitions, international go-to-market expansion, and the digital transformation that often unlocks the next stage of growth.

A track record that speaks for itself

Gaja Capital's credibility rests on results. The firm has been a pioneer of the management buyout in India — an approach still uncommon in a market long dominated by minority growth investments — with landmark buyout transactions spanning banking and, more recently, affordable-housing finance. Beyond providing capital, it works to prepare its companies for the public markets, and it has helped six portfolio companies complete initial public offerings. Its realised investments read as a roll-call of category-defining Indian businesses across organised staffing, early-childhood and K-12 education, premium consumer brands, and banking and financial services, while its wider portfolio extends into financial-services infrastructure and enterprise software. This breadth reflects the firm's long-standing conviction in scalable, cash-generative businesses built to endure across each of its chosen sectors.

Underpinning this record is one of the deepest institutional relationships in Indian private markets. Over the last two decades, Gaja Capital has built relationships with close to 300 institutional investors, including both foreign and domestic institutions, many of whom have returned to back successive funds. Such continuity is rare in private markets, and it reflects both consistency of performance and a foundation of institutional trust.

Governance and leadership

Gaja Capital's board reflects the same institutional seriousness that defines its investing. It is chaired by Mr. U.K. Sinha, the Non-Executive Chairman and a former chairman of the Securities and Exchange Board of India, whose presence anchors the firm firmly in public-market governance standards. The non-executive members of the board include Mr. Shailesh Haribhakti, Mr. Prithvi Haldea, Mr. Manish Sabharwal, Mr. Arindam Bhattacharya, and Ms. Shital Mehra — a group that brings together decades of experience across accounting and audit, capital markets, labour and enterprise, strategy and corporate governance. The executive members of the board are the firm's founders, Gopal Jain, Ranjit Shah, and Imran Jafar, whose continuity at the helm since inception is itself a mark of the firm's stability. Managing Partner Gopal Jain brings more than thirty years of investing experience across public and private markets.

The firm has also invested in the broader ecosystem it inhabits. Through the Gaja Capital Business Book Prize, its engagement with industry bodies, and its participation in the policy conversation around domestic capital and India's alternatives industry, Gaja has sought to strengthen the institutional foundations of private markets in the country — not merely to participate in them.

A defining moment, and the road ahead

Gaja Capital's ambitions now extend beyond its flagship growth-and-buyout strategy. The firm has expanded into GP-led secondaries through its East Gate business and intends to add further alternatives products over time, with a stated vision of building India's leading independent, institutional, multi-strategy alternatives asset manager. In October 2025, Gaja Capital received approval from the Securities and Exchange Board of India for an initial public offering, positioning it to become the first mainstream Indian private equity firm to list on the domestic stock exchanges — a prospective milestone not only for the firm but for the maturing of India's alternatives industry as a whole.

For the entrepreneurs it backs and the investors it serves, the proposition has remained remarkably consistent. Gaja Capital is not built around the maximisation of assets under management; its value is driven by performance, by successful exits, and by long-term capital partnerships. As India's economy continues its ascent and its private markets steadily institutionalise, Gaja Capital remains focused on the mission it set for itself in 2004 — improving the odds that a promising Indian company can scale, endure, and take its place among the champions of the economy.

Adfactors PR: The Work Behind India's Most Impactful Communications

29 years. 700 clients. One standard.
When the stakes are highest, communications cannot be an afterthought.

Adfactors PR is India's largest integrated communications consultancy. Founded in 1997, the firm serves over 700 clients across 25 sectors, employs more than 1,500 professionals across 15 cities, and operates through sector-anchored, multidisciplinary teams that combine media relations, digital, corporate reputation, crisis management, public policy, ESG communications, leadership positioning, and more. The average client tenure is over five years. Senior attrition is among the lowest in the industry.

Capital markets: a practice built over decades
Over the past decade, Adfactors PR has advised on more than 1,000 IPOs and capital market transactions, supporting offerings that have raised over Rs. 4 lakh crore across sectors and instruments. The Capital Market Communications Group is led by former equity analysts, investment bankers, editors, and corporate lawyers. They are capable to counsel on the full transaction lifecycle: from communication strategy and narrative building 12 to 24 months before a listing, through pre-launch execution, to post-listing investor relations, disclosures, restructurings, and shareholder disputes. The group also manages communications for FPOs, rights issues, delistings, NCDs, and M&A events. What distinguishes the practice is its reach beyond institutional investors: the firm has built shareholder communications for companies with between one lakh and ten lakh retail investors, a segment that most communications mandates do not adequately address.

Beyond capital markets
Consumer and brand PR, corporate reputation, crisis and risk management, ESG and sustainability communications, public policy and institution engagement, and leadership visibility all sit within the firm's practice. Campaigns have ranged from nationwide consumer platforms such as Polycab's India Ka Safe, Happy Connection, to large-scale institutional communications including the Global Fintech Fest for NPCI. The firm also served as Impact Partner to the India Global Forum NXT25, supporting conversations between global business leaders and policymakers. Across all of these, the firm's approach prioritises outcomes aligned to business realities rather than communications metrics alone.

Technology embedded across the organisation
Adfactors PR has built two proprietary AI platforms: Kalki.ai, used for narrative risk detection, stakeholder mapping, reputation analytics, and decision support, and Radar.ai, an integrated media monitoring and real-time reputation dashboard. Both are governed by an internal AI Task Force with ethical guardrails, and adoption is mandated through AI Clinics run across teams. Over 1,000 professionals have been upskilled in AI tools, research analytics, and digital content development. The design principle is deliberate: these are not tools for a specialist unit, but infrastructure embedded across the whole organisation.

People and culture
In 2024, LinkedIn recognised Adfactors PR as one of the top 15 mid-sized companies for career growth in India. The firm runs three internal development programmes: Adfactors Academy for long-term leadership pipeline building, Team Decathlon for ongoing team-level learning, and Power of One for client impact discipline. A Millennial Board shapes internal culture and succession, and DEI programmes run across all regional offices.

Recognition
Agency of the Year: ET Kaleido Awards 2026, Afaqs! CommuniCon 2025 and 2026, BW Excel 2026 (Superior PR Consultancy of the Year), e4m IPRCCA 2024, and PROI APAC 2024. Campaign awards across 2024 and 2025 include recognition at Adgully IMAGEXX, ETBrandEquity Kaleido, e4m IPRCCA, SABRE South Asia, SABRE Asia-Pacific, Mad Over Marketing, Campaign India, BW Excel, and Manifest Play.

Governance and ethics
The firm maintains a do-not-serve list covering alcohol, tobacco, gambling, arms and ammunition, and meat processing. In capital markets, all work is conducted in compliance with SEBI regulations and listing guidelines. The firm's founding principle is that reputation is built through earned trust, not paid visibility. This is a principle that has guided 29 years of work, and one that will shape every engagement to come.

As markets grow more complex, stakeholder expectations sharper, and the information environment more volatile, the need for communications counsel that is deeply integrated, ethically grounded, and genuinely forward-looking has never been greater. Adfactors PR is built for precisely that moment, and for the many that follow.

BDO INDIA SERVICES PRIVATE LIMITED

Enabling the future of business

Since its inception in 2014, BDO India has evolved into one of the country's leading professional services organisations, expanding its capabilities, market presence, and sector expertise to support and guide businesses through evolving challenges in an increasingly interconnected world.

As the India member firm of the global BDO organisation, the world's fifth-largest accounting and professional services network, the Firm combines global scale with deep local expertise across Assurance, Tax, Advisory, Digital Transformation, Technology Products & Solutions, and Managed Services. Today, BDO in India operates with a strength of 12,500 professionals, led by over 350 Partners and Directors, across 20 offices in 14 cities.

The nature of how we do business has changed significantly over the last decade. Advisory today requires far more than technical expertise—it demands a deep understanding of how technology, data, regulatory change and business transformation intersect. As organisations embrace digitalisation, adopt emerging technologies and operate in increasingly complex regulatory environments, advisors need to leverage technology-enabled methodologies, data-driven insights and robust quality frameworks to provide meaningful assurance. Businesses are increasingly seeking partners who combine technical rigour with innovation, professional scepticism and a holistic understanding of the risks and opportunities shaping modern enterprises.

At BDO India, Assurance remains a cornerstone. The practice plays a pivotal role in helping organisations strengthen governance frameworks, build stakeholder confidence, improve transparency, and enhance the credibility of financial reporting in an increasingly complex business environment.

Combining deep technical expertise with a risk-aware and forward-looking approach, the practice helps organisations not only meet statutory requirements but also strengthen trust, improve decision-useful reporting, and reinforce long-term resilience.

BDO India is also a PCAOB-registered firm, strengthening its ability to support organisations with U.S. regulatory and reporting requirements. This capability further enhances the Firm's ability to support businesses operating in increasingly interconnected global markets.

Building Trust and Recognition
BDO India has earned strong market recognition for the quality and impact of its services across key practice areas.

In the Venture Intelligence League Tables for 2025, BDO India ranked #3 in India for PE & M&A deal volume and retained the same position in Q1 2026, reflecting the Firm's continued role in supporting growth, investment, restructuring, and strategic transaction activity across sectors.

The Firm's Sustainability & ESG practice was recognised as the 'Sustainability Team of the Year' by BDO Global, amongst more than 160 BDO member firms worldwide.

BDO India has also been consistently recognised by International Tax Review and World Transfer Pricing for its capabilities across tax and transfer pricing services.

Driving Transformation Through Technology
While the Firm focuses on delivering its services across its core expert areas - assurance, tax, risk advisory, and business consulting - it has significantly expanded its portfolio backed by technology-led services through BDO Digital. The focus has been practical and outcome-driven: cloud services, analytics, cybersecurity, enterprise applications, AI-enabled solutions, automation, managed services, and operational transformation programmes that sit closer to day-to-day business requirements.

One of the Firm's more visible developments in 2025 was its recognition as a Microsoft Solutions Partner under the Microsoft AI Cloud Partner Program.

The partnership strengthened BDO India's capabilities across Business Applications, Data & AI (Azure), Infrastructure (Azure), Security, Modern Work, and Digital & App Innovation. For clients, this has translated into broader support around ERP modernisation, cloud migration, cybersecurity frameworks, analytics environments, managed cloud operations, and AI-led workflow improvement.

The Firm's work with Microsoft Copilot and Azure AI has increasingly been tied to operational use cases rather than experimental deployments. In sectors such as manufacturing, BFSI, hospitality, GCCs, retail, power & utilities, and professional services, organisations are using these systems to improve reporting visibility, simplify repetitive workflows, strengthen data environments, and manage operational scale more efficiently.

Building Capability at Scale

BDO India's growth over the last decade was built on capability expansion and exceptional client delivery. Senior leadership involvement continues to remain a pillar for all engagements, particularly across transactions, operational transformation programmes, regulatory matters, and complex advisory assignments.

The Firm continues to contribute to industry conversations through research, sector-focused insights, and perspectives on emerging business issues across areas such as AI adoption, GCC expansion, ESG reporting, digital infrastructure, evolving regulatory environments, and changing business models.

Internally, the Firm continues to build around its "People Helping People" philosophy, with emphasis on collaborative teams, long-term client relationships, and sector understanding alongside technical expertise.

In a business environment defined by constant change and growing complexity, the Firm's evolving portfolio, built on a commitment to quality, client-centricity, and continuous investment in people, technology, and capability building, empowers clients to anticipate risk, build resilience, safeguard stakeholder trust, and create enduring value for the future.

Looming Old Age Income Security Crisis in India

U.K.Sinha
Former Chairman
SEBI

Balram Prasad Bhagat
Former Managing Director
UTI Pension Fund Ltd.

India is undergoing a profound demographic transition. According to the United Nations Population Fund (UNFPA) India Ageing Report, the old-age population (aged 60 and above) in India is growing at an annual rate of approximately 3.1%. The country's elderly population (aged 60 and above) is projected to double from 10.5% (149 million) in 2022 to 20.8% (347 million) by 2050. Parallel to this shift, the Old-Age Dependency Ratio (OADR)—defined as the number of senior citizens (aged 60 and above) per 100 working-age individuals (aged 15–59 years)—is escalating sharply due to two simultaneous forces- declining Total Fertility Rates (TFR, has dropped to 1.9) and rising average Life Expectancy (71 for Males and 74 for Females). The OADR is roughly estimated to cross 30% by 2050 implying each hundred active workers supporting more than 30 senior citizens. Other dimensions of this demographic transition are that unlike developed countries, India is ageing before becoming affluent and its increased feminisation - as women live longer than men. At the same time, nearly 90% of population does not have access to a formal old age income security today. As per the latest 2025 Mercer CFA Institute Global Pension Index, China ranks 38th, Indonesia 43rd and India ranks 52nd out of the 52 global retirement systems evaluated.

2.1 Pension Architecture in India

India's pension architecture comprises a diverse set of schemes designed to provide income security to different segments of the population. It can broadly be categorised into 4 types, namely:

- 2.1.1 Old Pension System (OPS) – Unfunded but Defined Benefit pension system for eligible Government employees, which guarantee a fixed post-retirement income.
- 2.1.2 National Pension System (NPS) – Defined Contribution with Market Linked Benefit pension arrangements where individuals or/and employers contribute to retirement savings.
- 2.1.3 Employees' Pension Scheme (EPS) - Statutory payroll-linked schemes for organised private-sector workers that mandate employer and employee contributions.
- 2.1.4 National Social Assistance Programme (NSAP) - Tax-funded social assistance pensions, which support elderly, widowed and vulnerable individuals with limited or no formal income sources. Their number as on March 2026 is approximately 4.33 crores (2.91 Crores NSAP Beneficiaries and 1.42 Crores State Pension Schemes Beneficiaries)

2.2 Pension Coverage in India*

According to the latest Ministry of Statistics and Programme Implementation (MoSPI) Periodic Labour Force Survey (PLFS) and the Economic Survey, India's total working population stands at 61.6 crore individuals. Of this massive workforce, only about 10.15 crore workers (approximately 15%) are structurally locked into contributory retirement frameworks (NPS & EPFO). This leaves an estimated 51.4 crore informal and unorganised individuals exposed to long-term retirement vulnerabilities as the national demographic profile ages.

The Workforce vs. Pension Coverage Matrix

Employment Segment	Workforce Size (Est.)	Active Pension Coverage Base	Primary Regulatory Platforms	Coverage Penetration Rate
Organised Private Sector	~6.5 crore to 8.0 crore	7.98 crore active members	Employees' Pension Scheme (EPS via EPFO)	~95% - 100% (within statutory formal firms)
Govt Sector NPS	~1.05 Crore	1.05 crore NPS accounts + 68.72 lakh Central Government legacy OPS pensioners	NPS (Govt), Unified Pension Scheme (UPS) via PFRDA and Legacy Old Pension Scheme (OPS).	100% (Universal structural coverage)

Private Sector NPS comprising Corporate Sector + Private Sector Citizens Voluntary Contributors	~2.0 crore	1.13 crore NPS accounts	Corporate Sector + Private Sector Citizens Voluntary Contributors via PFRDA	55% to 60% Formal as well as informal workers
Unorganised / Informal Sector	~51.4 crore to 53.0 crore	8.24 crore active subscribers (9.00+ crore gross registrations)	7.46 Crores Atal Pension Yojana (APY), 52.99 Lakhs PM-SYM and 24.88 Lakhs PM-KMY	~14.5% (Leaves ~44 crore informal workers unprotected)
Social Welfare Net	(Non-working / Destitute Elderly)	4.33 crore senior beneficiaries	National Social Assistance Programme (NSAP) + State Top-ups	Safety net targeted purely for below-poverty-line (BPL) elderly.

Number for State Government OPS employees not readily available as 6 State Governments have discontinued NPS and reverted back to OPS

- 3 Old Pension System for government employees:

- 3.1 A substantial segment of India's pension landscape continues to be shaped by defined-benefit pension arrangements, paid to Government employees. For the Central Government, it includes more than 34 Lakhs Defence and 14 Lakhs Railways pensioners. The payout is fifty per cent of the last pay drawn, is inflation adjusted and payable to eligible family member on the death of the employee.

Consolidated Central Government OPS / Defined-Benefit Landscape
Institutional Sector	Active Pensioner Base (Coverage Vol.)
Defence (Armed Forces)	34,23,266
Indian Railways	14,95,722
Civil Ministries & CAPFs	11,91,956
Telecommunications	4,79,335
Postal Network	2,81,848
Total Central Footprint	68,72,127

*Source: https://www.pib.gov.in/PressReleasePage.aspx?PRID=2258761&reg=3&lang=1
Press Information Bureau, Govt of India and Ministry of Finance, Government of India
Similarly, employees of the State Government and some PSUs are also covered by the OPS with similar features.

- 3.2 While NPS was introduced for newly recruited employees, OPS continues for all Government employees who were on the Government rolls prior to January 1, 2004. However, in the last five years six State Governments have, under political pressure, announced reverting back to the old DB pension scheme. Even the Central Government has announced a modified scheme called the Universal Pension Scheme, effectively guaranteeing the payout similar to the old DB scheme.

4 National Pension System:

4.1 Birth of National Pension System (NPS)

Based on the recommendations of the OASIS PROJECT report, Government of India introduced a new Defined Contribution Pension System that came into effect on January 1, 2004 mandatorily for the new entrants to Central Government service, except the Armed Forces. It replaced the existing provision of Defined Benefit Pension System for the new employees. The then existing employees and pensioners continue to get the benefits of OPS. State governments took their own time to implement NPS for their employees. It was opened for all citizens of India on a voluntary basis with effect from 1st May 2009. Although the Interim Pension Fund Regulatory & Development Authority (PFRDA) was established through an Ordinance in August, 2003, it took another 10 years for the enactment of the PFRDA Act in 2013. Successive Governments were content at succeeding in capping the fiscal outgo on their employees' pension and hardly any action was taken to promote its adoption by the general public.

4.2 The PFRDA started the NPS with individual retirement accounts. Workers would exercise their individual investment choices, access their pension balances and switch from one to another permissible scheme or the Pension Fund

Manager, PFM as they liked. A strong system was provided through the NPS Trust, CRAs and the PFMs. It has undergone continuous changes in products, structure and investment guidelines. For example, the maximum exposure up to 75% in equity is permitted (for Government employees up to 25%) and each subscriber is free to choose his own investment pattern or the PFM who can manage his funds. Investments in gold/silver ETFs, REITs/InvITs, AIFs and Listed and proposed to be listed credit rated Municipal Bonds are also permissible within prescribed sub-ceilings. Efforts to increase liquidity before retirement to meet important family requirements of the subscriber have also been now provided by permitting partial withdrawal of up to 25% of the contribution made for certain needs. Another issue in the earlier years of NPS was mandatory annuitisation of 40% of pension assets at retirement. This was a disincentive in view of lower returns in annuity and lack of a fully developed competitive annuity markets. Now, up to 80% can be withdrawn either in one shot or through systematic lumpsum withdrawals by non-Government employees. This has reduced the requirement of compulsory annuitisation to 20%.

4.3 Atal pension Yojana, APY:
In 2014, Government of India launched Atal Pension Yojna through PFRDA with dual features of Defined Contributions and Defined Benefits. The subscribers could opt for a targeted Pension of Rs.1000- Rs.5000 and accordingly, contribute the indicated amount. This scheme has met with success as far as the number of Subscribers are concerned. But, it is also worth noting that more than about 85% of the subscribers have opted for a targeted pension of Rs.1000/- per month which may not be material at all in their retirement years.

Distribution of Pensioners across five Pension Slabs as on 30th November 2025 are as under:

Distribution of Pensioners across five Pension Slabs as on 30/11/2025
Pension Slab	Gross Enrolments	Percentage
1000	7,34,79,553	86.91%
2000	25,34,949	3.00%
3000	11,86,898	1.41%
4000	4,46,102	0.53%

The total number of active subscribers in APY as on 31/03/2026 is about 7.46 crores.

4.4 The detailed segment wise breakup of NPS as on March 31, 2026 is as under:

NPS in terms of Number of Subscribers and growing AUM as on 31st March, 2026#
S.No.	Segment	Number of Subscribers	AUM (Rs. In Crores)
1	Central Government NPS	27,29,408	₹ 4,06,866.00

4.5 Returns under NPS:
The returns under NPS in different Asset Classes Equity (E), Corporate Bonds (C) and Government Securities as on 31st March 2026 has been as under:

Scheme	Last 3 Year Returns (CAGR%)	Last 5 Year Returns (CAGR%)	Last 10 Year Returns (CAGR%)
NPS Scheme E Tier I	11.86%	11.18%	12.61%
Large Cap Mutual Fund Regular Category Average	11.43%	10.45%	11.73%
NPS Scheme C Tier I	7.92%	6.73%	8.13%
Medium to Long Term Mutual Fund Category Regular Average	6.17%	5.32%	6.45%
NPS Scheme G Tier I	6.42%	5.61%	7.71%
Gilt Mutual Fund Category Regular Average	5.85%	5.15%	6.90%
Returns generated for investors having Aggressive, Moderate & Conservative Portfolio
Investor ⇩	Last 3 Year Returns (CAGR%)	Last 5 Year Returns (CAGR %)	Last 10 Year Returns (CAGR %)
Investor A (Aggressive) E:C:G (75%:25%:0%)	10.88%	10.07%	11.49%
Investor B (Moderate) E:C:G (50%:25%:25%)	9.52%	8.68%	10.27%
Investor C (Conservative) E:C:G (25%:25%:50%)	8.16%	7.28%	9.04%

Source: Internal Calculations based on NAV declared by PFMs on their website and NPS Trust website: https://www.npstrust.org.in

It is important to note that NPS Schemes have mostly outperformed their competitors from Mutual Fund Industry in each asset class. The returns generated for investors with different asset allocation pattern (Aggressive, Moderate & Conservative) have been mostly superior to EPFO and PPF.

4.5 Areas of improvement:

As on 31/03/2026, the NPS assets stood at Rs.15,95,256 Crores (leaving out the assets under APY). However, only Rs.3,49,708 Crores is the non-Government sector asset, which is a true reflection of subscribers voluntarily choosing NPS for their retirement savings. The number of subscribers is 2,17,88,617 of which 1,13,37,048 belong to non-Government sector. Major efforts to increase the coverage are required. PFRDA has recently enhanced the fees for PFMs. It has also launched Multiple Scheme Framework (MSF) in September 2025. Combined with the fact that there still some special tax advantages for the NPS under the Income tax Act 2025 and the inbuilt flexibility in the scheme, its transparency and performance track record, NPS is now at the take-off stage. The Mutual Fund industry, which is now at over Rs.83 lakh crore was in 2012 at less than Rs.6 lakh crore. It took off after regulatory provisions were made more transparent, incentives were given to the distributors from smaller cities and massive awareness campaigns were launched by SEBI as well as by AMFI. The pension industry appears to be at the same stage today. The Government may also think of additional tax and policy measures targeted for low income employees.

5 Employees Pension System, EPS:

5.1 The Employees' Pension Scheme (EPS-95) is managed and operated by the Employees' Provident Fund Organisation (EPFO). It functions as a pooled social security fund designed to provide a guaranteed monthly pension to organized sector employees after retirement.

There is no Direct Employee Contribution in EPS. The fund is built through a split of the employer's statutory contribution and a small government subsidy. The Employers contribute 12% of the employee's basic salary + dearness allowance (DA) towards the EPFO. Out of this 12%, 8.33% is automatically diverted into the EPS account. The remaining 3.67% goes into the Employees' Provident Fund (EPF). The Central Government adds a contribution of 1.16% of the employee's basic wage directly to the pooled pension fund. Contributions are capped at a standard statutory wage ceiling of ₹15,000 per month. Therefore, the maximum standard monthly diversion into an individual's EPS account is ₹1,250 (15,000 × 8.33%).

5.2 An Individual's Pension starts when he/she reaches 58 years of age provided a minimum of 10 years of continuous eligible service has been completed. The monthly payout for individuals retiring after fulfilling the 10-year service mark is determined using a standardized formula:

Where Pensionable Salary is the average of the employee's monthly basic pay over the last 60 months of service (capped at the ₹15,000 ceiling unless higher contributions were specifically permitted) and Pensionable Service is the actual number of years worked. If an employee completes more than 20 years of service, they get a bonus of 2 additional years added to their service calculation.

5.3 EPS has demonstrated a robust growth, with membership expanding to 7.98 crore members as of April 2026. It reflects continued expansion in formal sector employment and compliance. However, its administration needs massive improvement. The costs are very high compared to NPS, individual accounts details are not easily available, entire corpus is invested in one uniform pattern, individual workers do not have the option to choose their own-which is available to the NPS contributors. Switch from EPFO to NPS is not permitted to a worker. The rates of returns for EPFO are artificially calculated. When EPFO was created, capital preservation of EPFO funds was the primary driver. The Government finances were under strain and a developed financial market from where the Government could borrow for its own programmes was not in existence. For decades, EPFO became the easy captive source for the Government to borrow from. As a result, EPFO corpus was disproportionately mandated to be invested in Government Securities. Corporate Bonds were also allowed. Investment in the equity markets was allowed only after 2015. Even now, only up to 15% of inflows is allowed in the equity market in the benchmark indices, resulting in subdued returns compared to NPS for the workers.

5.4 The situation is better understood by considering the returns of the Indian Benchmark Index the S&P 500 Sensex. Taking the Sensex level around 76000 as on March 31, 2026 the Compounded Annual growth Rate, CAGR of Sensex (including dividend yield) has been around 12 percent for 10 years, 15% for 20 years, 16% for 30 years and 17% for 40 years. NPS allows an individual subscriber to invest up to 75% in equity. Countries like USA, Canada etc. permit up to 75% to be invested in equity -including foreign equity.

6 The non-contributory social pensions form an important layer of income support. Central and State Governments keep launching schemes for the disadvantaged groups like old and poor, widows, persons with physical disability etc from time to time.

7 Other Pension Schemes:
SEBI registered mutual funds and IRDAI regulated insurance companies have multiple pension schemes. However, these schemes have had limited coverage and success. These are more by nature of investment schemes and have to compete with other schemes in the investment universe.

7.1 Unorganised workers:
Drivers, delivery partners, platform-based workers or other unorganised sector workers like house maids, vegetable sellers etc. do not have access to any traditional pension arrangements. The Pradhan Mantri Shram Yogi Maan-dhan (PM-SYM) scheme was introduced in 2019 for the unorganised workers having no benefit of any other pension scheme, whose income is less than Rs. 15,000 per month and who are in the age bracket of 18-40 years. It is a voluntary and contributory scheme where the worker contributes between Rs. 55 to Rs.200 per month-depending upon the age of entry, and a matching contribution is given by the Government. The worker receives a minimum assured pension of Rs. 3,000. The scheme is manged by Life Insurance Corporation of India. Investments are made as per the guidelines of the Ministry of Labour. The coverage as on March 31, 2026, is 52.99 lakhs.

7.2 The Pradhanmantri Kisan Mandhan Yojana (PM-KMY) was also launched in 2019 with same features. It was targeted towards Small and Marginal Farmers (SMFs) who own up to 2 hectares (5 acres) of cultivable land, as per the land records of the respective State or Union Territory. The scheme is managed by Life Insurance Corporation of India under the guidance of the Ministry of Agriculture and Farmers Welfare. The coverage as on March 31, 2026, is 24.88 Lakhs.

8 Recommendations:
8.1 It is close to three decades since India commissioned the OASIS report. Since then, its economic growth, developments of its financial markets , learnings from different schemes, pension reform measure for over two decades, the emerging demographic challenges and developments in other countries in this field warrant a fresh and comprehensive evaluation of steps taken and assessment of possible measures required to be taken. Government of India should commission a fresh OASIS type study and take follow up action at the earliest.

Till such a study is conducted and action taken on it, following measures can be initiated:

8.2 NPS:
8.2.1 The default option for a young worker should be the scheme with maximum permissible equity component. Of course, the option for exercising a choice should exist.

8.2.2 International diversification: The Government of India and RBI should allow gradual diversification of investment choices for NPS by permitting investment in international equities. The same is allowed with certain limitations for mutual funds. USA, Canada, Japan and many other countries permit this diversification.

8.2.3 The artificial limitation on equity investment for Government workers should be removed and made at par with those for the non-Government workers. When subscribers have the right to exercise their choice, then creating artificial limitations in the investment universe is not required. The regulator has to ensure that the PFMs disclose the inherent risks transparently.

8.2.4 Creating mass awareness of the product and active marketing is necessary. The explosive growth of the mutual fund industry took place only after targeted incentive to distributors were provided in 2012 and concerted campaigns were launched for creating awareness. PFMs and distributors need that incentive at this stage.

8.3 EPFO:

8.3.1 EPFO should change their current practice of account keeping to ensure that the individual statements of account of workers reflect the true/up to date value of their portfolio.

8.3.2 EPFO should increase, in stages, the current limit of up to 15% in equity and take it to much higher levels.

8.3.3 With the experience of NPS in maintaining and tracking individual retirement accounts, it is possible to do so in EPS as well. Workers should be given the freedom for their individual pension corpus to be managed as per their choice.

8.3.4 There should be an option provided to workers to transfer their corpus and be managed under NPS under PFRDA supervision.

8.4 PM-SYM and PM-KMY:

8.4.1 Gig workers- Where it is possible to identify an employer or aggregator-which is the case for most of the workers in the gig economy, the employer/aggregator also must make a small contribution towards pension. PM-SYM then becomes an instrument for three-way contribution - employees, employers/aggregators and the Government of India.

8.4.2 PFRDA has been able to develop an excellent infrastructure for record keeping which works very well in case of portability from one job to another. It has already got the experience of managing APY. PM-SYM and PM-KMY can be transferred to PFRDA for their administration and management according to NPS principles and practices.

NSE EGR: Transforming Gold from a Passive Asset into a Productive National Resource

Sriram Krishnan
Chief Business Development Officer
National Stock Exchange of India Ltd.,The

India's relationship with gold is unlike that of any other major economy. For centuries, gold has served not merely as a precious metal but as a symbol of prosperity, financial security and intergenerational wealth. From weddings and festivals to savings and inheritance, gold continues to occupy a unique place in the economic and cultural fabric of the country. Despite the emergence of multiple investment avenues, Indian households continue to place immense trust in gold as a store of value. This enduring affinity has made India one of the largest consumers of gold globally, with annual consumption estimated at approximately 711 tonnes in 2025.

Yet the true scale of India's gold economy extends far beyond annual consumption. Indian households are estimated to hold nearly 25,000 tonnes of gold. To put this into perspective, this stock exceeds the combined gold reserves of the world's ten largest central banks. At current prices, it is valued at approximately USD 4.5 trillion. When gold held by temples and institutions is also considered, India's total gold holdings approach USD 5.2 trillion, equivalent to nearly 125 percent of the country's nominal GDP. India therefore possesses one of the largest repositories of privately held gold anywhere in the world.

While gold remains deeply embedded in India's social and economic landscape, it also presents an important macroeconomic challenge. India imports the overwhelming majority of the gold it consumes. In FY26, the country's gold import bill reached nearly USD 72 billion, an all-time high and a substantial increase over the previous year. Gold now accounts for more than 9 percent of India's merchandise imports and remains second only to crude oil in the import basket. Every ounce of imported gold results in foreign exchange outflows and contributes to pressure on the current account. India's trade deficit widened to more than USD 333 billion in FY26, with every additional tonne of imported bullion adding further pressure on the country's external balance.

Prime Minister Shri Narendra Modi has repeatedly highlighted the need to mobilise idle gold and bring it into the economic mainstream. The message is both timely and important. India does not suffer from a shortage of gold. Rather, the country faces the challenge of ensuring that the enormous stock of gold already available within its borders can participate more actively in economic activity.

This paradox lies at the heart of India's gold economy. On one hand, the nation spends billions of dollars importing gold every year. On the other, a significantly larger stock of gold already exists within the domestic economy. The challenge therefore is not the availability of gold. The challenge is creating a trusted framework that enables this gold to circulate more efficiently and contribute more meaningfully to economic growth.

This is where NSE Electronic Gold Receipts, or NSE EGR, have the potential to play a transformative role. By combining the trust associated with physical gold and the efficiency of modern market infrastructure, NSE EGR can unlock new possibilities for investors, institutions and the broader economy.

Bringing the Demat Revolution to Gold

The evolution of India's capital markets offers an important lesson. Three decades ago, investors relied on physical share certificates, manual transfers and fragmented market infrastructure. The introduction of dematerialisation transformed this landscape by converting physical securities into electronic ownership. This reform improved transparency, reduced operational risks, enhanced liquidity and expanded participation across the country. Today, India's capital markets are recognised globally for their scale, efficiency and technological sophistication.

NSE EGR seeks to bring a similar transformation to the gold ecosystem. Just as dematerialisation separated ownership of securities from physical certificates, NSE EGR enables ownership of gold to be represented electronically while remaining fully backed by physical gold stored in accredited vaults. However, the significance of NSE EGR extends far beyond digitisation. It introduces a framework built on standardisation, transparency, regulation and trust, creating the foundation for a more organised and efficient gold market.

The credibility of any organised gold market ultimately depends on confidence in the underlying asset. Recognising this, NSE EGR has been built on five foundational pillars: purity, dematerialisation, regulation, secure custody and accessibility. Every NSE EGR is backed by gold that conforms to stringent quality standards, including purity levels of up to 99.9 percent. Gold is sourced from accredited refiners and subjected to rigorous testing and verification processes. Such standardisation addresses one of the most persistent challenges in the physical gold market: uncertainty around quality and authenticity.

NSE EGR is fully integrated with India's depository ecosystem. Similar to equities and bonds, ownership is reflected electronically in demat accounts maintained with recognised depositories. The framework operates under a clearly defined regulatory structure established by SEBI and supported by exchanges, depositories, clearing corporations, vault managers, assayers and refiners. Gold is stored in accredited vaults under stringent operational, audit and insurance standards, providing a level of security and transparency that is difficult to replicate in fragmented physical markets.

Multiple denominations further improve accessibility and enable broader participation across investor segments.

In many ways, just as dematerialisation introduced a common standard of ownership for securities, NSE Good Gold Standards seek to introduce a common standard of trust for gold. The broader vision extends beyond electronic ownership. Physical gold can be assayed, refined, standardised, vaulted, converted into NSE EGR, credited to a demat account and traded on the exchange platform. This integrated framework has the potential to connect every participant in the gold value chain through a transparent and trusted ecosystem.

Building a National Gold Ecosystem

The true potential of NSE EGR lies in its ability to create a comprehensive gold ecosystem that benefits every participant in the gold value chain.

At the centre of this ecosystem are Indian households. Generations of families have accumulated gold as a means of preserving wealth and providing financial security. While these holdings represent one of the largest reservoirs of household savings in the country, much of this gold remains economically inactive. NSE EGR creates an opportunity for households to retain exposure to gold while participating in a transparent and organised market structure. Electronic ownership can simplify transfer, succession and eventual monetisation while preserving the underlying value of the asset.

For investors, the proposition is equally compelling. India's Gold ETF ecosystem has expanded rapidly, with investor folios crossing 11 million and assets under management exceeding INR 1.3 trillion. India's Gold ETF holdings have increased to more than 116 tonnes, placing the country among the world's leading markets for financialised gold. This demonstrates that Indian investors increasingly prefer transparent and regulated avenues for gold ownership. NSE EGR represents the next step in this evolution by enabling investors to hold gold directly in demat form, with the assurance of physical backing and the option of taking delivery from accredited vaults.

The benefits extend significantly to Asset Management Companies and Gold Exchange Traded Funds. As inflows into Gold ETFs increase, fresh bullion is often procured to support these investments. A vibrant NSE EGR ecosystem can facilitate greater utilisation of domestic gold holdings, creating opportunities to channel existing gold stocks into the formal financial system before relying on additional imports. Such a development can improve capital efficiency while contributing to broader national objectives relating to import dependence and foreign exchange conservation.

Banks and financial institutions can also derive significant benefits from a standardised gold ownership framework. Gold has long been recognised as a valuable form of collateral, yet challenges relating to purity assessment, custody and standardisation have often constrained its wider integration into financial markets. NSE EGR creates a foundation that can support more efficient collateralisation and facilitate the development of innovative financing solutions linked to gold ownership.

The jewellery industry, valued at approximately USD 95 billion in 2025 and projected to exceed USD 150 billion over the next decade, can also benefit significantly from an organised and transparent gold market. Efficient price discovery, assured quality and improved inventory management can contribute to greater operational efficiency across the value chain. Bullion dealers and refiners similarly benefit from an organised secondary market and a credible exit channel that links domestic refining capacity to exchange traded liquidity.

An especially compelling opportunity exists for religious and charitable institutions. India is home to several temples and trusts that receive substantial gold donations from devotees. These holdings often remain outside the formal financial ecosystem. NSE EGR can provide a transparent framework through which such institutions can manage gold holdings more efficiently while maintaining governance and accountability standards.

The opportunities extend even further. Digital gold donations, wedding gifting in the form of NSE EGR, gold backed lending, collateral creation and innovative wealth management solutions all become possible within a transparent and standardised framework. As the ecosystem evolves, gold ownership can move beyond wealth preservation and become an active participant in economic activity.

A significant future opportunity lies in enabling gold to become an income generating asset. Traditionally, gold has functioned primarily as a store of value. As the ecosystem matures, opportunities may emerge for holders of NSE EGR to participate in lending arrangements that allow them to earn returns while retaining economic ownership. Such mechanisms can create additional liquidity within the gold market and support more productive utilisation of existing gold stocks.

Unlocking Domestic Wealth and Reducing Import Dependence

The most significant contribution of NSE EGR may ultimately be its ability to increase the economic velocity of domestic gold.

EGRs do not eliminate demand for gold. They do something more important. They allow the same gold to serve multiple economic purposes. Every gram of gold that circulates within the NSE EGR ecosystem, whether traded between investors, used to back an ETF unit, deployed as collateral or eventually utilised in lending arrangements, is a gram that does not need to be freshly imported.

This improves the utilisation of existing domestic gold stocks and lowers the marginal demand for imports. For a country carrying an annual gold import bill of nearly USD 72 billion, even modest improvements in the velocity of domestic gold can translate into meaningful relief for foreign exchange reserves and the current account.

The opportunity before India is therefore not merely to import less gold. It is to use existing gold more efficiently. If India succeeds in mobilising just 5 percent of its estimated domestic gold holdings, between 1,250 and 1,500 tonnes of gold could enter the formal financial ecosystem. This quantity is equivalent to nearly two years of India's current annual imports.

The implications are substantial. Greater utilisation of domestic gold stocks can contribute towards reducing dependence on imported bullion, conserving foreign exchange reserves and supporting current account stability. It can improve liquidity within the gold market, deepen financial markets and encourage greater participation by investors and institutions. More importantly, it can transform an idle stock of wealth into an asset capable of supporting broader economic activity.

As India progresses towards becoming a developed economy, efficient utilisation of domestic resources will become increasingly important. Gold, one of India's most trusted assets, has the potential to play a far greater role in this journey than it does today.

From Price Taker to Price Maker

India accounts for nearly one quarter of global gold demand, yet domestic prices have historically been derived from international benchmarks. The morning benchmark established in overseas markets often becomes the reference price for transactions across India. Despite being one of the world's largest consumers of gold and possessing one of its largest private gold holdings, India continues to function largely as a price taker.

A deep, liquid and transparent NSE EGR market can gradually strengthen India's role in global price discovery. Once exchange traded EGR volumes scale, India will have a continuous, transparent and market determined domestic spot reference for gold. Together with the evolving domestic spot ecosystem and broader bullion market reforms, NSE EGR provides the institutional foundation for India to move from being merely a price taker to becoming a meaningful contributor to global price discovery and, over time, a price setter.

The journey from price taker to price maker will not be completed in one launch or one financial year. However, NSE EGR represents an important beginning. The true significance of NSE EGR lies not in the creation of a new financial instrument, but in the creation of a new economic possibility.

For generations, gold has preserved wealth for Indian households. The next phase of India's economic development requires this wealth to do more. By bringing transparency, standardisation, liquidity and productivity to one of India's most trusted assets, NSE EGR has the potential to unlock dormant national wealth, reduce dependence on imports and strengthen India's financial ecosystem.

Just as dematerialisation transformed India's capital markets and expanded participation across the country, NSE EGR can transform India's gold economy. Built upon NSE Good Gold Standards, transparent market infrastructure and broad-based participation, it can help convert a traditionally passive asset into a productive national resource. In doing so, NSE EGR can support India's journey towards Viksit Bharat 2047 and unlock new opportunities for economic growth, financial inclusion and national prosperity.

Powering India's Next Billion Aspirations

At NSDL, the safekeeper of India's wealth, technology is not just about speed. It is about strengthening trust.

Vijay Chandok
Managing Director & Chief Executive Officer
National Securities Depository Ltd.

India's capital markets are entering a defining phase of their evolution. Over the past three decades, we have witnessed an extraordinary transformation, from physical share certificates to dematerialised ownership, from lengthy settlement cycles to near real-time settlement capabilities, and from a market largely driven by institutions to one increasingly shaped by retail investors.

Yet, despite this remarkable progress, the most exciting chapter may still lie ahead.

The true story of India's capital markets is no longer merely about growth. It is about scale, inclusion, trust and the ability to build infrastructure capable of serving a nation with over a billion aspirations.

As India advances towards its vision of becoming a Viksit Bharat by 2047, capital markets will play a far greater role in channelising savings into productive investments, funding entrepreneurship, supporting infrastructure creation and enabling wealth creation across households. The challenge before market institutions is not simply to manage growth, but to build systems capable of sustaining growth responsibly, securely and inclusively for decades to come.

India's Capital Markets: A Story of Scale

The scale of India's capital market transformation over the last few years has been unprecedented.

India today has more than 22 crore demat accounts, compared with around 4 crores in 2020 and approximately 2.5 crore in 2016, reflecting one of the fastest expansions of investor participation globally. The country's investor base has broadened significantly, with participation increasingly coming from Tier II and Tier III cities, demonstrating the growing democratization of investing.

The growth in market depth has been equally impressive. The market capitalisation of NSE-listed companies has reached approximately ₹411 lakh crore (US$4.8 trillion), making India one of the world's largest equity markets. In FY25 alone, more than 240 IPOs raised nearly ₹1.7 lakh crore, highlighting the ability of Indian markets to support business growth, entrepreneurship and capital formation.

For India, this is not simply a market success story. It is a development story.

Capital markets are becoming an increasingly important mechanism for converting household savings into productive investments, supporting infrastructure projects, financing innovation and creating opportunities for wealth creation across society.

From Savers to Stakeholders

A quiet but profound transformation is underway in India.

For generations, Indian household savings were concentrated in physical assets such as gold and real estate. Today, a growing number of individuals are participating in capital markets directly and indirectly through equities, mutual funds, ETFs, REITs, InvITs, pension products and other market-linked investment avenues.

The numbers illustrate this shift clearly. Monthly SIP contributions have approached ₹30,000 crore, while mutual fund assets under management have crossed ₹80 lakh crore. The number of mutual fund folios has exceeded 25 crores, reflecting increasing investor confidence in disciplined, long-term wealth creation.

This trend reflects more than improving financial literacy. It reflects confidence in India's economic future, stronger investor protection frameworks, expanding digital access and a growing recognition that long-term participation in capital markets is essential for wealth creation.

Yet, the opportunity ahead remains enormous. Despite the remarkable growth in participation, only around 5-7% of India's population actively participates in capital markets, suggesting that the country's capital market journey is still in its early stages. The next wave of growth will come not merely from metropolitan centres but from smaller towns, semi-urban regions and first-time investors entering the formal financial ecosystem.

Depositories: The Invisible Infrastructure Behind Market Growth

At the centre of this transformation lies a critical piece of financial infrastructure: the depository ecosystem.

India's transition from paper-based securities to electronic ownership fundamentally changed the way investors interact with markets. Depositories have made investing safer, faster and more transparent by eliminating risks associated with paper certificates, reducing settlement risks and enabling seamless transfer of ownership.

NSDL has been at the forefront of this transformation.

Established as India's first securities depository, NSDL pioneered dematerialisation and helped create the foundation of India's modern capital market infrastructure. Over the years, NSDL's role has evolved well beyond the safe custody of securities. Today, depository infrastructure supports equities, corporate bonds, government securities, mutual fund units, ETFs, REITs, InvITs, sovereign gold bonds and various other financial instruments.

Every demat account opened, every corporate action processed and every securities transaction settled ultimately relies on trusted infrastructure operating seamlessly behind the scenes.

As participation expands into hundreds of millions of investors, the importance of resilient depository infrastructure will only continue to grow.

Infrastructure as a National Advantage

Historically, discussions about capital markets focused primarily on returns, valuations and macroeconomic fundamentals. Increasingly, however, investors evaluate markets through another lens: infrastructure.

How secure is custody? How efficient is settlement? How resilient are systems? How effectively are investor interests protected?

In many of these areas, India has emerged as a global leader.

The transition from T+2 to T+1 settlement, and the progressive move towards same-day settlement capabilities, demonstrates India's willingness to innovate while maintaining market integrity. Technology-enabled compliance frameworks, digital onboarding and automated post-trade systems have enhanced transparency while reducing friction.

Efficient infrastructure lowers risk, reduces costs, improves confidence and ultimately attracts greater participation from investors and issuers alike. In an increasingly competitive global environment, robust market infrastructure is not merely an operational requirement. It is a strategic national advantage.

Building Trust in a Digital Era

Perhaps the most significant change in Indian markets is not technological. It is demographic.

A new generation of investors has entered the market. They are digitally native, mobile-first and accustomed to real-time experiences. They expect seamless onboarding, instant access to information and digital convenience without compromising security.

Meeting these expectations requires a complete rethinking of market infrastructure.

The convergence of demat accounts, digital KYC, mutual fund holdings, e-voting, online servicing and real-time portfolio visibility is creating a far more integrated investor experience than ever before.

Yet, while technology continues to transform markets, trust remains their most valuable asset.

Every financial transaction ultimately rests on confidence: confidence that ownership records are secure, confidence that settlements will occur as expected and confidence that systems are resilient.

For market infrastructure institutions, this means that cybersecurity, operational resilience, data governance and business continuity are now as important as traditional financial safeguards.

At NSDL, technology is not simply about processing transactions faster. It is about strengthening trust.

AI, Blockchain and the Markets of Tomorrow

The next phase of market evolution will increasingly be shaped by emerging technologies.

Artificial Intelligence has the potential to transform surveillance, compliance, fraud detection, onboarding and risk management. Beyond financial markets, AI is expected to drive innovation, create new industries and generate demand for skills in machine learning, cybersecurity, analytics and digital governance.

For India, AI represents both an economic opportunity and a market opportunity.

At the same time, Blockchain and Distributed Ledger Technology offer significant possibilities for market infrastructure. Applications such as asset tokenisation, digital corporate actions, collateral management, enhanced audit trails and near real-time settlement could improve transparency, efficiency and investor access.

The future is unlikely to be defined by technology replacing trusted institutions. Rather, it will be defined by trusted institutions leveraging technology to deliver greater resilience, transparency and confidence.

Financing Viksit Bharat

The vision of Viksit Bharat 2047 is fundamentally linked to the strength of India's capital markets. Whether it is infrastructure development, manufacturing expansion, clean energy projects, logistics networks or technological innovation, each will require substantial capital formation.

A deeper equity market, a stronger corporate bond market, greater participation from pension and insurance funds, and broader access to investment opportunities will all be critical to financing India's next phase of growth.

The continued development of India's bond market will be especially important. Long-term infrastructure and development projects require patient capital and diversified funding sources. As participation from domestic and global institutional investors expands, India's bond market has the potential to become a major pillar of the country's financial architecture.

The Next Decade

The next decade will be defined by greater participation, inclusion and trust in India's capital markets. From 2.5 crore demat accounts in 2016 to over 22 crores today, and a mutual fund industry managing more than ₹80 lakh crore in assets, India's growth story is already remarkable.

Looking ahead, India could see 40-50 crore demat accounts and an equity market capitalisation of US$10-15 trillion over the next decade, driven by financialisation, digital adoption and rising investor participation.

This growth will be powered by millions of new investors, deeper domestic capital pools and wider access to financial opportunities. As India advances toward developed-nation status, trusted market infrastructure will remain the foundation of sustainable growth. The opportunity is unprecedented, and so is our responsibility: to build an accessible, resilient and inclusive market ecosystem for the aspirations of the next generation.

From Access to Autonomy: Empowering India's Women Investors

Nilesh Lodaya
Chief Business Officer
Central Depository Services (India) Ltd.

India's securities markets are in the midst of a quiet but profound transformation, one that is reshaping not only how the country invests, but who its investors are.

Among the most defining threads of this change is the steady rise of the woman investor. Today, close to one in four investors is a woman. The shift is just as visible across the depository ecosystem, where women now account for nearly 25% of demat account holders, a steady broadening of participation in the securities market. This participation is increasingly broad-based, with women investors represented across geographies and age groups, reflecting a deeper and more inclusive expansion of India's investor base.

Yet the number, striking as it is, is not the heart of the story. What matters more is that this is not a passing surge tied to one good market year. It is a structural change that has been building over several years, changing not only the composition of the market, but also the nature of household participation.

The rise of India's women investors is less about inclusion alone and more about autonomy: of a new generation of investors taking greater charge of savings, investments and long-term financial decisions.

A Movement Rooted in Economic Participation

To understand why this shift is durable, it helps to look beneath the investing numbers at the economic foundation they rest upon.

Women's participation in the formal economy has strengthened across almost every measure that matters. Female labour force participation rose from about 23% in FY18 to around 42% in FY24. Women's literacy has risen faster than men's, from 54% in 2001 to 75% in 2024. As of March 2026, women-owned enterprises accounted for more than 39% of Udyam registered MSMEs.

Their formal financial presence has deepened in step. Women hold 55.8% of Pradhan Mantri Jan Dhan Yojana accounts as of February 2026, and their share of formal bank deposits rose from 34% in March 2020 to 40% in March 2025.

Investing is the next stage of this wider journey. Once income, savings, bank access, digital familiarity and financial confidence begin to come together, the move into mutual funds, equities and other market linked products becomes more natural – as they endeavour to become part of their nation's growth story.

That is why the rise of the woman investor is best understood as part of India's larger financialisation. Women are not only entering the formal financial system; they are increasingly using it to build wealth.

Investing with Patience and Purpose

The more telling change is behavioural.

Women, in aggregate, are showing a clear preference for structured and disciplined investing. The growing adoption of market-linked products reflects a greater willingness to participate in long-term wealth creation rather than limiting financial activity to traditional savings avenues.

The systematic investment plan, or SIP, adds another layer to this, encouraging regular participation and helping investors build investing habits over time.

This is not just participation. It is habit formation.

Within women's mutual fund holdings, the share of equity has risen sharply, from 40% in March 2020 to 65% by March 2025. It is reflective of more comfort with market-linked growth, often expressed through diversified, professionally managed products.

This evolution is evident across the securities market landscape. Female demat accounts have grown by 36% over the last eight years, underscoring that women's participation in securities market is not a short-term phenomenon but part of a broader and sustained shift towards long-term investing and wealth creation.

This is an important transition. Women are moving from being savers to becoming portfolio builders.

Beyond Metros, Across Life Stages

The rise of the woman investor is not only an urban story.

Today, 45% of women mutual fund investors come from beyond the top 30 (B30) cities. The momentum is visible in systematic investing as well: in these smaller centres, the number of women's SIP accounts grew 4.2 times between December 2020 and December 2025, and their SIP assets grew 4.46 times over the same period.

This matters because it shows women's participation spreading well beyond the traditional financial centres, into smaller cities, semi urban regions and emerging markets where the next phase of India's investor growth is likely to unfold. This broadening participation is reflected across the depository ecosystem as well, where 44% of women investors now come from Tier III cities and another 31% from Tier II centres, underlining the growing breadth of participation across India's emerging economic centres.

The age profile is just as encouraging. Women are entering the markets earlier than ever before, with investors between 26- and 35-years accounting for the largest share of female demat account holders. Growth has been particularly strong among younger investors, with nearly half of the increase in female investor accounts over the past eight years coming from the 18-25 age group, followed by 43% growth from those aged 26-35.

Women are entering the journey earlier, in their earning and wealth-building years, and the longer the runway, the greater the potential for compounding, goal-based investing and lasting financial confidence across generations.

From Participation to True Autonomy

It would be easy to celebrate these numbers and stop there. An honest reading must also acknowledge what lies deeper.

The SEBI Investor Survey 2025 makes the remaining gap plain. Awareness of securities market products among women still trails men, at 58% against 66%, and participation is lower still, at around 7% for women against 11% for men. Among non-investors who intend to enter the market within the next year, close to 70% are men.

The gap, in other words, does not begin at the point of investment. It begins earlier, at the stages of awareness, confidence, product understanding and decision making. The barriers are not only financial; they are behavioural and informational. Many who stay away cite complexity, information gaps, concerns about risk and returns, and questions of trust.

For women investors, then, the next frontier is not only account ownership. It is a genuine agency in decision making. The goal is not simply a demat account in a woman's name; it is the woman herself understanding, choosing, allocating and staying the course.

Enabling Confidence Through Awareness and Access

This is where access, awareness and market infrastructure must come together.

The policy direction is already clear. With effect from March 2026, an additional distribution incentive applies to first year investments from new women investors and from new investors in B30 cities, subject to prescribed limits and conditions, a recognition that the next phase of participation must deliberately reach first time and underrepresented investors.

Access, too, has become far easier. eKYC and eSign have stripped away paperwork and made onboarding seamless. The electronic Consolidated Account Statement (eCAS), available in 23 Indian languages, gives investors a single, unified view of their holdings across securities, mutual funds and NPS, and its integration with DigiLocker adds another secure and convenient channel to that information.

But access alone does not create confidence. That takes education, trusted information and repeated engagement. This is the work to which CDSL has committed its Investor Protection Fund (IPF). In FY2025-26, CDSL IPF conducted 3,625 investor awareness programmes across 35 states and union territories, covering 547 districts in English, Hindi and 14 other Indian languages, and reaching over 2 lakh participants. That wider effort builds on focused outreach: CDSL IPF held 750+ programmes exclusively for women, among them members of the armed forces, nursing staff, ASHA and Anganwadi workers and self-help group members. Such targeted work matters, because the task is not only to widen access, but to build the confidence that self-directed participation demands.

Our AtmanirbHER initiative is built on the same conviction. Also, the Ms. Atmanirbhar Investor campaign, launched earlier this year, rolled out in 12 Indian languages, encouraged women to begin investing responsibly, with research, planning and confidence. The premise is simple: women investors do not need generic messaging; they need relatable, accessible and trustworthy communication that meets them in their own context. The aim is never simply more accounts. It is more investors who understand what they hold, why they hold it, and how it fits into their own financial journey.

Towards an Atmanirbhar Future

If the past few years were about women arriving in the market, the next decade must be about women owning their place within it.

The next chapter of India's securities market will not be defined only by how many investors enter it. It will be defined by how many participate with awareness, confidence and autonomy.

Many of them will be women. Increasingly, they already are.

How Indian mutual fund industry is positioned for next phase of growth

Sundeep Sikka
Managing Director & Chief Executive Officer
Nippon Life India Asset Management Ltd.

India's mutual fund industry closed fiscal 2026 with assets under management of Rs 73.73 trillion, a record, and a 12.15% rise over the Rs 65.74 trillion it managed at the end of fiscal 2025. To appreciate how far the industry has come, it helps to look a little further back. In March 2020, the industry's assets stood at Rs 22.26 trillion. In six years, the asset base has more than tripled. The number of investor folios has grown from 8.97 crore in March 2020 to 27.39 crore in March 2026, with nearly 3.94 crore folios added in fiscal 2026 alone. The ratio of mutual fund assets to India's gross domestic product crossed 21% in March 2026, an all-time high.

What has changed

These numbers tell a story of scale, but the more important story is about what has changed in investor behaviour. The Indian mutual fund investor of today is a different person from the one a decade ago. The clearest evidence came in March 2026, when the Nifty 50 fell 11.31% in a single month, its steepest monthly decline since March 2020, on the back of escalating uncertainty in West Asia. In an earlier era, a fall of this magnitude would have triggered panic redemptions. Instead, net equity inflows in March 2026 jumped 56% over the previous month to Rs 40,450 crore. March 2026 also marked the 61st consecutive month of positive net inflows into equity mutual funds, a streak that has now survived multiple corrections. Through fiscal 2026, domestic institutional investors, led by mutual funds, invested a record Rs 8.09 trillion in equities even as foreign portfolio investors sold Rs 1.81 trillion worth. The retail investor, channelling money through mutual funds, has become the stabilising force in Indian markets.

The SIP engine

One of the biggest drivers of this change is the systematic investment plan. SIP contributions in fiscal 2026 rose 19% to Rs 3.40 trillion, from Rs 2.86 trillion in the previous year. Monthly contributions, which stood at Rs 26,632 crore in April 2025, climbed steadily through the year to touch an all-time high of Rs 32,087 crore in March 2026. The number of contributing SIP accounts rose to 9.72 crore from 8.11 crore a year earlier, a net addition of 1.61 crore accounts. SIP assets now stand at Rs 14.83 trillion, about a fifth of the industry's total assets. What makes these numbers significant is not just their size but what they represent: a shift from trying to time the market to committing to it consistently, month after month, regardless of where the index stands.

The other big change is who is investing. Individual investors now hold 62.3% of total industry assets. In most states, individuals account for more than 65% of mutual fund assets, and in states such as Bihar and Tripura, the share exceeds 95%. Participation is no longer concentrated among salaried professionals in metros. The state-wise data on SIP assets makes this point well. In Uttar Pradesh, Himachal Pradesh, Haryana and Puducherry, SIP assets account for more than 40% of the state's total mutual fund assets, a higher share than in Maharashtra or Delhi. Smaller states and towns are not just participating; they are participating in the most disciplined way possible.

Starting small

This widening of the investor base in smaller cities and towns, the B30 markets in industry parlance, has been helped considerably by the Choti SIP initiative, which lowered the minimum monthly investment to Rs 250. For a first-time investor in a tier-2 or tier-3 town, the difference between a Rs 500 or Rs 1,000 entry point and a Rs 250 one is meaningful. It converts mutual fund investing from something that requires a deliberate budgeting decision into something that can be tried with minimal commitment. Once the habit forms, amounts tend to grow with income. The fiscal 2026 data shows B30 cities moving in the same direction as the top 30 cities, with the share of SIP assets held for more than five years rising to 30% from 29%, and the share held for less than a year falling to 22% from 23%. In T30 (top-30 cities) cities, the share of SIP assets held for more than five years rose to 32% from 30%, while the under-one-year share fell to 20% from 21%.

Time over timing

The holding-period data deserves a closer look, because it captures the most underappreciated change in the industry: investors are staying invested longer. Within direct plans, the share of SIP assets held for more than five years rose to 20% in March 2026, while assets held for less than a year contracted to 29%. Regular plans, which come with distributor guidance, show an even stronger long-term orientation. The share of regular-plan SIP assets held for more than five years stood at 34%, and assets held for less than a year stood at 19%. This gap between direct and regular plans is worth pausing on. It suggests that the value of a distributor lies not merely in facilitating a transaction but in keeping the investor anchored to a goal when markets turn volatile. An investor who is talked out of redeeming during a correction captures the recovery that follows; one who exits locks in the loss.

This is where the case for staying invested, rather than timing the market, becomes practical rather than theoretical. Market recoveries tend to be concentrated in a handful of sharply positive days, and these days often arrive in the middle of, or immediately after, periods of extreme pessimism. Studies of equity markets in India and globally have repeatedly shown that an investor who misses just the ten or fifteen best days over a long holding period may end up with lower returns than one who simply stayed put. The trouble is that nobody can predict which days those will be, and they usually occur precisely when an investor who tried to time an exit is sitting on the sidelines. Fiscal 2026 offered a live demonstration: investors who continued their SIPs through the March correction bought units at lower prices, which is exactly how rupee-cost averaging is supposed to work. The discipline of the SIP removes the temptation to make this call at all.

Headroom and potential triggers

If the past few years explain how the industry got here, the more interesting question is what drives the next phase of growth. Despite crossing 21%, India's mutual fund assets-to-GDP ratio remains well below that of most developed economies, where the figure often exceeds 75-100%. The geographic concentration tells the same story from another angle: Mumbai, New Delhi, Bengaluru, Pune and Kolkata together account for 57.69% of the country's mutual fund assets, with Mumbai alone at 28.97%. More than half the industry's money still comes from five cities. So, there remains a huge headroom for growth for the industry.

Three forces could help the industry reach its potential growth. The first is digital penetration. Digital-based KYC, UPI-based payments and app-based onboarding now can complete a first investment in minutes. Fintech platforms and the digital arms of traditional distributors have taken mutual funds to investors who have never experienced them. The growth in passive fund folios, up 38.13% in fiscal 2026 and the fastest-growing segment in folio terms, is partly a reflection of this, since low-cost index products are the natural first purchase of a self-directed digital investor.

The second force is artificial intelligence. AI's most useful application in this industry will not be picking stocks but serving investors. Conversational interfaces in regional languages can answer basic questions about risk, taxation and product selection for first-time investors who would never read a scheme document. AI-driven analytics can help distributors identify which clients are likely to stop their SIPs during a drawdown and intervene before they do, which, given what the holding-period data shows about the value of such intervention, could meaningfully improve investor outcomes at scale.

The third force is the Open Network for Digital Commerce. ONDC's promise for financial services is to unbundle distribution from platforms. On an open network, any seller-side participant, a small distributor in a district town, a regional fintech, a cooperative institution, can offer mutual funds to any buyer-side app's users. This multiplies distribution touchpoints without each participant having to build a full technology stack. For an industry which has a huge growth potential beyond the T30 cities, an open, interoperable network that lets local intermediaries plug in cheaply could do for mutual fund distribution what UPI did for payments.

From first SIP to SIFs

None of this reduces the importance of a distributor who can guide the investor at all times. If anything, the industry's product set is widening in both directions, and both ends need guidance. At the entry level, first-time investors need someone to explain why they should not stop a SIP when the market falls. At the other end, the industry now offers specialized investment funds, or SIFs, a category that was introduced to sit between mutual funds and more sophisticated products. SIFs offer the flexibility to run advanced strategies, including long-short positions. The category's early growth has been encouraging: from Rs 2,010 crore in October 2025, when the first schemes debuted, SIF assets grew more than five-fold to Rs 10,620 crore by March 2026, with cumulative net inflows crossing Rs 11,000 crore and the number of schemes rising from four to 14. Hybrid long-short strategies dominate with over 75% of assets, and notably, the category recorded its strongest monthly inflow of Rs 1867 crore in February 2026, when market volatility drove demand for downside-protected strategies.

The road ahead

The industry's strong growth has been built on industry-wide awareness campaigns, the SIP habit and a maturing investor. The next leg, from 21% of GDP towards the levels seen in developed markets, will be built on seamless access through digital routes, smarter servicing through AI, wider distribution through open networks such as ONDC, and the patient work of distributors who keep investors invested during the market's ups and downs.

Unlocking The Power of Technology in Audit

A STRONG FOUNDATION, A BIGGER OPPORTUNITY

Statutory audit in India is built on a clear methodology: identify the highest-risk areas, draw a sample of transactions, test it, and form an opinion on the financial statements. SA 315 governs how auditors identify and assess risks; SA 530 sets the framework for sampling. Together, they form the backbone of how most audits are executed. It is a profession built on rigour – and one that has, for the most part, remained structurally unchanged for decades. That is now being tested, not because the methodology is broken, but because the world it operates in has moved on considerably.

Technology has entered virtually every professional discipline over the past two decades – redefining how work is done, what can be delivered, and at what speed. Audit has been no exception, though the pace of adoption has been more measured than in other fields. The methodology has never been the problem. The opportunity lies in extending its reach – and that is precisely what technology unlocks.

HOW TECHNOLOGY ENTERED THE AUDIT ROOM

The first meaningful intersection of technology and audit was not dramatic. It was the shift from physical registers and paper-based ledgers to spreadsheets – that began to take hold in India in the late 1990s and early 2000s. Globally, this was followed by the development of dedicated audit-support tools. By the early 2000s, firms in the US, UK, and parts of Western Europe began deploying Computer Assisted Audit Techniques tools like ACL (now Galvanize) and IDEA – that allowed auditors to import large data sets and run automated checks across entire population. By the mid-2010s, data analytics dashboards, robotic process automation (RPA), and structured audit platforms had become standard at large firms globally.

The direction of travel has always been toward doing more, with greater precision, at lower cost. India has followed this trajectory, but with a lag – attributable in large part to structural realities. The audit market in India developed at a scale and pace where the economics of technology investment took longer to justify. Equally, the client data infrastructure needed to make those tools effective – clean ERP systems, consistent master data, reliable digital records – was not sufficiently mature across the market until relatively recently. Both conditions are now changing, and the gap is narrowing faster than it has at any point before. India also has a structural characteristic that makes the technology opportunity particularly significant: the sheer volume and diversity of entities that require statutory audits. Running those audits more efficiently – and more effectively – at scale is not a marginal improvement. It is a fundamentally different operating model and an opportunity for audit firms to disrupt the market.

WHERE TECHNOLOGY CAN MAKE THE BIGGEST DIFFERENCE

Automation and Data Analytics in Population Testing

Conventional audit sampling tests a subset and infers conclusions about the whole – a method that works until the problem sits outside the sample. Technology replaces this by applying testing logic across the entire transaction population.

In interest income audits at banks and NBFCs, rather than manually verifying a selection of loan accounts, the interest calculation logic – rate, principal, day count convention – is codified and run across every account in the portfolio. Deviations above a materiality threshold are flagged automatically. The auditor reviews exceptions, not a pre-selected sample, achieving 100% coverage in a fraction of the time.

The same applies to journal entry testing under SA 240. Machine learning tools scan millions of entries and surface anomalies – round-number postings, entries outside business hours, unusual reversals – ranked by risk. Several accounting misrepresentations could involve journal entry manipulation present in the data. The tools to detect it systematically now exist.

Remote Evidence Gathering | Asset Verification

Verifying fixed assets across geographically dispersed locations is one of the most time and cost-intensive parts of an audit. Traditionally, it requires teams to physically travel to each site – a process that can take weeks for infrastructure companies, utilities, or large manufacturers. The practical constraints of time and cost mean that physical verification is often partial, with coverage limited to a selection of locations rather than the full asset base.

Drone technology changes both the economics and the reach. Aerial surveys generate geo-tagged photographic evidence of asset existence and condition, with barcode and QR-code scanning enabling direct matching of physical assets to the fixed asset register – identifying assets no longer in service and flagging discrepancies, without anyone needing to be on the ground. Evidence is uploaded directly to a cloud-based audit file and reviewed remotely. Critically, what was previously a sampled exercise can now achieve full coverage – every site, every asset – at a fraction of the time and cost of manual verification. Globally, audit firms have begun using drone surveys as audit evidence – measuring stockpiles, verifying remote assets, documenting asset condition. In India, the drone infrastructure already exists at scale. Its application to statutory audit is a logical next step, and not a distant one.

AI Agents in Continuous Monitoring | Anomaly Detection, Analytical Procedures

Beyond individual procedures, AI agents – systems capable of executing multi-step tasks autonomously – are beginning to enable a fundamentally different audit model: continuous monitoring rather than point-in-time testing.

An AI agent can be configured to run analytical procedures on a client's financial data at regular intervals throughout the year – tracking ratios, flagging unusual movements, and escalating anomalies for auditor review as they emerge. This shifts audit activity from an annual exercise conducted after the fact to an ongoing process that surfaces issues in real time. For listed companies and large financial services entities, this represents a material improvement in audit responsiveness and, ultimately, in the quality of assurance provided.

OCR in Document Vouching | Invoices, Challans, Agreements

India presents a documentation reality that many markets have largely moved past – physical and scanned records remain prevalent across client types. OCR technology extracts structured data from these documents – amounts, dates, counterparty names, reference numbers – and maps it automatically against corresponding ERP entries, flagging discrepancies without manual intervention. An auditor verifying vendor invoices against purchase orders, or cross-checking delivery challans against sales records, can now do so across the full population rather than a sample – with a more meaningful review focused only on the anomalies.

The Broader Impact: Coverage, Quality, Efficiency

Technology in audit does not improve one thing – it improves three simultaneously, which is what makes it genuinely different from previous incremental improvements.

Coverage increases because testing is no longer constrained by what is feasible to check manually. Quality improves because errors of omission – things missed because they were not in the sample – become far less likely, and documentation is more structured and defensible. Efficiency gains are significant: industry estimates consistently suggest that well-implemented technology integration can reduce time spent on routine audit procedures by at least 30 percent.

This matters because client expectations are evolving. Doing more, more accurately, in less time is not just a quality story – it is an economic necessity for firms that want to remain competitive. When audit coverage is broader, findings are more defensible, and procedures are demonstrably rigorous, the financial statements that emerge carry greater credibility – and the stakeholders relying on them have stronger grounds for the trust they place in them.

WHAT AUDIT DELIVERY WILL LOOK LIKE

The shape of audit teams will change. The traditional model – a large base of junior staff doing transaction-level testing, supervised by a smaller senior layer – will become less relevant as automated tools take on that transaction work. Leaner teams with higher average seniority become possible, and the economic case for them is strong.

The skills profile will shift as well. Data science capabilities – the ability to build and validate testing tools, interpret outputs, and manage data pipelines – will become as important on an audit team as accounting knowledge. The most effective delivery teams will combine domain specialists who understand the business and the standards with technical specialists who understand what the data is saying.

The mid-management layer – senior managers and directors – becomes more important in this model, not less. They are the people who translate audit risk into testing design, who determine where automation is appropriate and where human judgement is essential, and who are accountable for the quality of AI-assisted work. This is a more complex role than its current equivalent and building that capability is perhaps the most important investment audit firms can make.

Technology companies will increasingly enter the audit-adjacent space – selling tools, platforms, and data products to auditors. This will continue and accelerate. But the regulatory structure of statutory audit creates a durable boundary: the opinion, the licence, and the professional accountability remain with the qualified auditor. The tools are inputs. The judgement is not.

WHAT NEEDS TO FALL INTO PLACE

Client data maturity is the most fundamental enabler. Automated audit procedures are only as effective as the data they run on. A client whose ERP system is fragmented, whose master data is inconsistent, or whose chart of accounts changes every year creates significant friction for any automation effort. The encouraging development in India is that larger corporates – particularly listed companies, financial services firms, and multinational subsidiaries – are generally further along on data infrastructure than they were even five years ago. The push from clients themselves for more technology-enabled audit processes is, in many cases, driving investment in the data foundations needed to support it.

Regulatory frameworks will also need to evolve to keep pace. Audit standards should increasingly acknowledge and provide guidance on what AI-assisted evidence looks like, how population-based testing is documented, and what professional standards apply when algorithms are doing work that was previously done by humans. This is a reasonable expectation – and one the profession should be proactively engaged in shaping.

Within audit firms, the internal change management challenge is as important as any technology investment. The value of these tools is only realised if partners, managers, and delivery teams actually change how they work. Adoption has to be driven from the top.

The One Thing Technology Cannot Replicate

For all the efficiency and coverage gains that technology brings, professional scepticism remains stubbornly human. The ability to look at a set of numbers that reconcile perfectly and feel that something is not right – to push back on a management explanation that is technically coherent but intuitively unconvincing – is not something that can be fully codified.

Audit standards have always recognised this. Professional scepticism is a defined requirement, not a personality trait. But it is also something that emerges from experience, from knowing how similar businesses behave, from reading a room as much as reading a spreadsheet. A model trained on historical data will identify patterns that match what it has seen before. It may struggle with what it has not.

Some of the most significant audit failures in recent decades were not failures of process – the samples were drawn, the procedures were followed, the documentation was in order. They were failures of judgement: the willingness to look past what the numbers appeared to say, to question what was not in the sample, and to challenge explanations that were coherent on the surface but wrong underneath.

Technology narrows the space where things can go unnoticed. It does not replace the auditor's responsibility for what is done with what is found.

WHERE THIS IS HEADING

Technology is reshaping how every professional service is bought, delivered, and evaluated. Audit is not insulated from that shift – nor should it be. The trajectory is clear. Audit firms that treat technology only as a supplementary tool – something that helps junior staff work faster – will find themselves at a disadvantage as clients begin to understand what a more fully technology-enabled audit can deliver. The more interesting and more demanding question is how quickly firms can rebuild their delivery models around these capabilities, rather than fitting technology around the model they already have.

Clients are already asking the question. The firms that move first – and move thoughtfully – will define what audit is expected to look like for the next generation. The rest will be catching up.

Financing the Grid and the Highway: The Making of an Infrastructure Asset Class

Nipa Sheth
Founder & Director
TRUST Group

"There are moments in an economic cycle when the scale of an opportunity begins to change the architecture built around it. India may be at one such moment in infrastructure."

The country has moved well beyond the question of whether it can build. Highways are expanding, the power system is scaling, renewable capacity is accelerating, and infrastructure is increasingly becoming the foundation for the next phase of economic growth. Public capital expenditure has risen from around ₹2 lakh crore in FY2014-15 to ₹12.2 lakh crore budgeted for FY2026-27.

But the more consequential story lies beyond the headline spending. It is about how India finances infrastructure—and whether the capital invested today can be made available to finance tomorrow's infrastructure.

For an asset class characterized by large upfront requirements, long gestation periods and decades-long operating lives, that question is fundamental. No single pool of capital is ideally suited to finance an infrastructure asset through its entire lifecycle. Banks, development finance institutions, bond investors, private capital and infrastructure vehicles each have different risk appetites, return expectations and investment horizons.

India's financing architecture is therefore beginning to evolve from a relatively linear model—government and banks funding projects—to a more diversified ecosystem in which capital can enter at different stages and, importantly, be recycled as assets mature.

The emergence and strengthening of infrastructure-focused Development Finance Institutions (DFIs), including National Bank for Financing Infrastructure and Development (NaBFID), India Infrastructure Finance Company Limited (IIFCL) and other specialized infrastructure DFIs, illustrates this transition. Their significance, however, goes beyond the quantum of capital they provide. Development finance can provide the duration and risk-bearing capacity that infrastructure requires, while instruments such as partial credit enhancement can help infrastructure borrowers access a broader investor base.

The objective, therefore, is not for development finance to compete with the bond market. It is to help infrastructure graduate into the bond market.

That graduation begins with bankability. Infrastructure attracts capital when its future cash flows become sufficiently visible.

The roads sector provides a compelling example. Under the Hybrid Annuity Model, the government contributes 40% of project cost during construction, while the balance is financed by the developer and recovered through contractual annuity payments and interest. The significance of HAM is not merely that it changed procurement; it changed the allocation of risk. Compared with a traditional toll-based concession, the developer is less dependent on traffic volumes to service its investment.

For a debt investor, that distinction is fundamental. A project supported by contractual cash flows presents a very different credit proposition from one dependent primarily on uncertain demand.

The same principle is visible in power, although the sector remains more differentiated. The financial health of distribution utilities, historically one of the weakest links in the electricity chain, has improved materially. Aggregate technical and commercial losses fell from 22.62% in FY2014 to 15.04% in FY2025, while distribution utilities moved from a combined PAT loss of ₹67,962 crore to a profit of ₹2,701 crore. Legacy dues reported by 13 states fell from around ₹1.40 lakh crore in June 2022 to ₹4,109 crore by February 2026.

These developments do not eliminate regulatory, counterparty or refinancing risks. Nor should the improving distribution numbers be extrapolated uniformly across generation, transmission and distribution. But they demonstrate the broader principle: when reforms improve the visibility and quality of cash flows, the universe of capital willing to finance those cash flows expands.

And that creates the next opportunity: capital need not remain locked in an infrastructure asset for its entire economic life.

A completed highway, a transmission network or another operational infrastructure asset can become a source of capital for the next project. This is the logic behind India's growing asset-monetization ecosystem.

TOT and InvITs are different mechanisms, but they contribute to the same broader process. Under Toll-Operate-Transfer, NHAI monetizes the operating and toll-collection rights of completed assets in exchange for upfront consideration. An InvIT provides a structure through which infrastructure assets and their cash flows can be held by investors.

The common thread is capital recycling. Under the first phase of the National Monetization Pipeline, NHAI and MoRTH have monetized around ₹1.5 lakh crore through mechanisms including ToT, privately placed InvITs and securitization. NHIT has completed four fundraising rounds, with cumulative realizations exceeding ₹46,000 crore.

The market is also broadening beyond the traditional institutional investor base. In March 2026, NHAI-sponsored Raajmarg Infra Investment Trust became India's first public InvIT, with its issue attracting nearly 14 times subscription.

Cube Highways Trust has similarly moved towards the public market, with its ₹5,000 crore public issue launched in July 2026 as it transitioned from a privately listed to a publicly listed InvIT.

These are more than individual transactions. They signal the emergence of a financing flywheel: build, de-risk, finance, operate, monetize and reinvest.

The scale of what lies ahead makes this transition particularly important. The Draft National Electricity Policy 2026 estimates investment requirements of approximately ₹50 lakh crore by 2032 and ₹200 lakh crore by 2047 across the power sector. The numbers underscore a reality that extends well beyond power: India's infrastructure ambitions will require a financing ecosystem considerably broader than government expenditure and bank credit.

This is where the debt capital market can become part of the infrastructure itself.

The opportunity is not simply to issue more bonds. It is to create instruments that match the duration and risk characteristics of infrastructure with the needs of long-term investors—insurance companies, pension and retirement pools, mutual funds, banks, foreign investors and private capital. The same asset may require one form of capital during construction, another during stabilization and yet another once its cash flows are mature.

The policy direction is moving in the same direction. The Union Budget 2026-27 proposed an Infrastructure Risk Guarantee Fund, intended to use calibrated partial guarantees to improve lender confidence and crowd in private capital.

The larger opportunity, therefore, is not to replace public capital with private capital, or banks with bond markets. It is to make the different pools of capital work together across the life of an asset.

That is perhaps the most important evolution underway in India's infrastructure financing landscape. The first phase of India's infrastructure story was about building assets. The next phase is about giving those assets a financial life—one in which predictable cash flows can support debt, mature assets can attract new investors, and capital released from one generation of infrastructure can be redeployed into the next.

The measure of India's infrastructure-financing success will ultimately not be how much capital we deploy once, but how effectively we can make that capital circulate.

That is where the highway and the grid become more than physical infrastructure. They become part of a deeper financial architecture—one in which infrastructure is increasingly financeable, investable and recyclable, and where the depth of India's debt market can determine how continuously the country can build for the future.

India's Capital Markets 3.0: Why Rs 5 lakh crore Annual Capital Formation Is Achievable

Mahavir Lunawat
Founder, Chairman & Managing Director
Pantomath Financial Services Group

India's capital markets are standing at the threshold of what can best be described as Capital Markets 3.0 - a phase characterised by scale, depth, resilience, and institutional maturity. If Capital Markets 1.0 (the period around the 1990s) was about establishing the foundations of modern securities markets and Capital Markets 2.0 (the period around 2000s) focused on broadening participation through regulatory reforms, digitisation, and financialisation, Capital Markets 3.0 is about transforming India into one of the world's most powerful engines of capital formation.

The evidence is already visible.

Calendar Year 2025 emerged as a watershed year for India's primary markets, with total capital mobilisation through IPOs, SME IPOs, QIPs, Rights Issues and other equity fund-raising routes reaching nearly ₹1.9 lakh crore, making it the strongest years in the history of Indian capital markets.

While the first half of CY26 has witnessed a relatively slower pace of IPO activity due to global macroeconomic uncertainties, geopolitical developments, and intermittent volatility in global risk assets, history suggests that temporary pauses should not be mistaken for structural weakness. A similar trend was visible in CY25 when the initial months remained subdued before issuance activity accelerated sharply in the second half, ultimately resulting in a record-breaking year.

As macroeconomic concerns begin to ease, interest-rate trajectories become clearer, and investor confidence improves, the second half of CY26 could witness a meaningful revival in primary market activity. More importantly, the structural factors underpinning India's capital markets remain firmly intact.

The larger question is no longer whether India can sustain strong primary market activity. The more relevant question is whether India can consistently support annual equity capital formation of ₹4-5 lakh crore over the coming decade.

The answer, in my view, is increasingly becoming yes.

The Structural Shift Since 2020

India's IPO ecosystem today bears little resemblance to the market that existed a decade ago.

The post-2020 period marks a decisive inflection point in the evolution of India's primary markets. Mainboard IPO fund mobilisation has expanded at a compound annual growth rate of approximately 29% over the past decade, while SME IPO fund-raising has grown even faster at nearly 46% CAGR.

What is even more significant is that growth has not been driven merely by an increase in the number of issues.

Average issue sizes have risen substantially across categories. Mainboard IPO volumes have multiplied while average issue sizes have increased from roughly ₹1,100 crore during the 2015-2019 period to nearly ₹1,600 crore during the post-2020 phase.

This indicates a fundamental behavioural shift.

Companies are no longer approaching public markets merely for visibility or liquidity events. Increasingly, they view public markets as a strategic source of long- term growth capital, balance-sheet strengthening, and expansion financing.

This transition from episodic issuance to institutionalised capital formation is perhaps the most important development in India's primary market journey.

Domestic Liquidity Has Rewritten the Rules

Perhaps the single most important factor supporting India's primary markets is the extraordinary rise of domestic savings flowing into financial assets.

The SIP revolution has fundamentally altered the structure of Indian capital markets.

During FY26, SIP contributions touched nearly ₹3.50 lakh crore, setting a new annual record. Monthly SIP inflows that were considered exceptional just a few years ago have now become the norm.

In June 2025, SIP inflows crossed ₹27,000 crore for the first time. By September 2025, monthly SIP collections touched record highs of over ₹29,000 crore. By early 2026, monthly SIP inflows consistently exceeded ₹30,000 crore, with March 2026 establishing a new record of over ₹32,000 crore.

These numbers are not merely statistics.

They represent the emergence of a permanent domestic capital pool that continuously replenishes market liquidity irrespective of global market conditions.

For decades, India's capital markets were excessively dependent on foreign capital flows. Today, that dependence has reduced materially.

The domestic mutual fund industry, supported by millions of SIP investors, has become one of the most reliable providers of long-term risk capital to Indian equities.

This structural liquidity cushion is among the strongest reasons why India can aspire to consistently support ₹4-5 lakh crore of annual equity capital formation in the years ahead.

FPI Selling No Longer Dictates Market Outcomes

Foreign Portfolio Investors continue to play an important role in India's markets by providing global benchmarking, institutional validation, and incremental depth.

However, the market structure has changed significantly.

Recent periods have demonstrated that even substantial FPI selling does not necessarily derail India's capital markets. Domestic institutions increasingly absorb supply created by foreign outflows, thereby reducing volatility and improving market stability.

In fact, AMFI data and market trends show that robust mutual fund inflows have repeatedly helped offset significant foreign selling episodes. During periods when FPIs remained net sellers, sustained SIP flows and institutional domestic buying continued to provide support to both secondary markets and primary market issuances.

The implication is profound.

IPO demand today is being driven less by transient foreign flows and more by structural domestic participation.

This makes India's capital formation ecosystem significantly more resilient than in previous cycles.

India's Markets Are Deep Enough for Mega IPOs

One of the defining characteristics of Capital Markets 3.0 is the ability to absorb large transactions without disrupting broader market activity.

The data clearly indicates that India's market depth has increased substantially.

The primary market today accommodates a healthy mix of small, mid-sized and large offerings. Between 2020 and 2025, the ₹100-500 crore issue category expanded at nearly 82% CAGR, while the ₹1,000-5,000 crore segment grew at 71% CAGR.

Importantly, growth is not concentrated in one segment.

The market is simultaneously supporting SME issuances, mid-market growth companies, and billion-dollar public offerings.

Mega IPOs above ₹5,000 crore continue to represent only a small share of total deal count, yet investor appetite for large, liquid, institutionally governed companies has strengthened materially. Subscription levels for larger offerings have risen significantly, reflecting growing investor comfort with scale.

The successful execution of several marquee transactions over the past two years demonstrates that Indian markets are no longer constrained by size.

This maturation is essential if India is to sustain annual fund-raising in excess of ₹4 lakh crore.

Capital Formation Is Funding the Real Economy

A healthy capital market should do more than create wealth for investors. It should allocate capital efficiently to productive economic activity.

One of the most encouraging developments in recent years is the growing proportion of IPO proceeds being directed towards expansion, capacity creation, debt reduction and working capital requirements.

Data for CY25 shows that nearly 30% of IPO proceeds have been used for expansion and new projects, another 25% for debt reduction, and approximately 25% towards working capital requirements.

This is a critical distinction.

The Indian IPO market is increasingly serving as a growth-financing mechanism rather than merely a shareholder exit platform.

Whether it is manufacturing expansion, infrastructure development, financial services growth, digital transformation, healthcare capacity building, or consumer sector investments, capital raised through public markets is increasingly finding its way into productive economic deployment.

That strengthens both corporate India and the broader economy.

Multiple Capital-Raising Avenues Are Expanding the Opportunity Set

Another hallmark of a mature market ecosystem is the availability of multiple fund-raising routes. India is witnessing precisely that evolution.

Alongside IPOs, companies are increasingly accessing capital through QIPs, Rights Issues and selective FPOs.

The rise of QIPs has been particularly noteworthy. QIP mobilisation reached over ₹1.36 lakh crore in 2024 and continued at meaningful levels during 2025. Rights issues have also gained prominence as companies seek flexible capital solutions.

Rights	46,038.44	21,309.28	7,266.33	3,884.04	27,770.65	64,983.57
QIPs	72,639.94	1,36,060.33	52,349.59	11,743.29	41,997.41	80,816.24

(All amount in Rs Cr)

The significance of this trend cannot be overstated. A market capable of supporting IPOs, QIPs, Rights Issues and FPOs simultaneously is inherently more resilient and scalable.

As India's corporate sector continues to expand, diversified capital-raising mechanisms will collectively contribute towards annual fund mobilisation well beyond the ₹4 lakh crore threshold.

A Broader Investor Base Is Powering the Next Growth Cycle

The geographical diversification of investor participation is another powerful structural trend. IPO demand is no longer concentrated in Mumbai and a few metropolitan centres.

Investor participation from Tier II and Tier III cities has increased meaningfully, supported by digital onboarding, fintech platforms, financial literacy initiatives, and rising household incomes.

The democratisation of equity ownership is creating a much larger and more diversified investor base. As financialisation of household savings continues, this trend is likely to accelerate further.

The long-term implication is straightforward: a broader investor base translates into deeper markets, greater liquidity, and stronger support for future issuances.

Why ₹5 Lakh Crore Annual Capital Formation Is Achievable

Several structural factors support the possibility of India consistently mobilising ₹4-5 lakh crore annually through IPOs, QIPs, Rights Issues, FPOs and related instruments over the coming years:

First, India's GDP is expanding rapidly and creating a growing universe of capital-hungry companies.

Second, domestic liquidity through SIPs and mutual funds continues to rise steadily.

Third, India's regulatory framework is among the most robust globally, with SEBI consistently enhancing transparency, efficiency and investor protection.

Fourth, the market has demonstrated the ability to absorb transactions across issue sizes, including large and mega offerings.

Fifth, public markets are increasingly being used as growth-capital platforms rather than solely exit mechanisms.

Sixth, India's investor base is becoming broader, younger and geographically diversified.

Finally, the country's growing prominence in global supply chains, manufacturing, financial services, technology and consumption sectors will continue generating a strong pipeline of issuers seeking public capital.

Taken together, these factors create a compelling foundation for sustained expansion of India's primary market ecosystem.

The Road Ahead

India's capital markets have entered a structurally stronger phase.

Short-term volatility, temporary issuance slowdowns, geopolitical uncertainties, or intermittent FPI outflows may influence sentiment from time to time. However, they are unlikely to alter the long-term trajectory.

The developments witnessed over the past five years point towards a market that is deeper, broader, more mature and increasingly self-sustaining.

Domestic liquidity has become a powerful stabilising force. Regulatory standards continue to strengthen. Investor participation is widening across geographies and demographics. Companies increasingly view public markets as a strategic source of growth capital. And multiple fund- raising avenues now coexist within a highly evolved ecosystem.

These are the characteristics of a mature capital market.

As India progresses through the next phase of economic growth, capital markets will play an increasingly important role in financing entrepreneurship, innovation, manufacturing, infrastructure and wealth creation.

Capital Markets 3.0 is not merely about more IPOs.

It is about building a sustainable capital formation engine that can consistently mobilise ₹4-5 lakh crore annually while supporting India's aspiration to become one of the world's leading economic powers.

The foundations are already in place. The opportunity now lies in scaling them responsibly, efficiently and sustainably.

India's next decade of growth will be funded not just by banks or private capital, but increasingly by its own vibrant and resilient capital markets.

Beyond Startups and Giants: Why India's Mid-Market Is the Talent Without Capital That Could Define the Next Decade of Economic Growth

Gopal Jain
Managing Director & Chief Executive Officer
Gaja Alternative Asset Management Ltd.

For years, India's business narrative has largely been dominated by two extremes.

On one end are startups that capture headlines with billion-dollar valuations, disruptive business models and rapid fundraising announcements. On the other are large listed conglomerates whose quarterly earnings and strategic decisions influence markets and shape national economic conversations. Yet between these two worlds lies a vast segment of businesses that receive far less attention, despite contributing significantly to India's economy. These companies are profitable, entrepreneurial, deeply rooted in their industries and often serving millions of customers. They are building products, creating jobs, expanding manufacturing capacity, and providing vital services across India.

This is India's mid-market. It is ambitious, entrepreneurial and hungry for capital. It may also hold the key to India moving from a 7 percent growth orbit to the 9 percent growth orbit the country now needs.

India faces two capital allocation challenges. In some parts of the economy, there is capital without enough entrepreneurial talent to absorb it productively. This is the debate we usually hear, framed as the question of why large businesses are not investing faster. But there is a second challenge that deserves equal attention: talent without capital. Across India's mid-market, there are capable founders, professional managers and first-generation entrepreneurs with the hunger to build, the discipline to execute and the will to break through constraints. They are not waiting for perfect conditions or easier business conditions. They are building despite friction. What they need is patient capital, institutional support and the confidence to scale.

Having spent more than two decades investing exclusively in this segment, I have come to believe that India's mid-market represents one of the most compelling and underappreciated opportunities in the country's economic landscape. While startups and corporate giants will continue to play a crucial role in India's growth story, the next generation of industry leaders are increasingly likely to emerge from businesses that have spent years building quietly, steadily and often overlooked despite their contributions.

The 'Missing Mid-market' in India's Growth Story

Every successful economy is built on more than a handful of large corporations and fast-growing startups. Its true strength comes from thousands of businesses that create employment, drive innovation within industries, strengthen supply chains and generate sustainable long-term value. In India, these businesses form what is often referred to as the "missing middle" companies that have moved beyond the startup stage but have not yet achieved large-scale corporate status.

The revised MSME classification announced in the Union Budget expanded the definition of medium enterprises to include businesses with investments of up to ₹125 crore in plant and machinery and annual turnover of up to ₹500 crore. However, from an investment perspective, the mid-market extends well beyond these thresholds.

Many of the companies that are attracting growth capital today generate revenues ranging from ₹100 crore to nearly ₹2,000 crore. They have established customer relationships, proven business models, and strong operating track records. What they often lack is access to patient capital, institutional governance frameworks and strategic support required to accelerate growth.

Importantly, these are not businesses searching for product–market fit. They have already demonstrated resilience and commercial viability; their challenge now is scale.

A Segment Hiding in Plain Sight

The scale of India's mid-market opportunity is difficult to overstate. India is home to nearly 5.93 crore registered MSMEs, collectively employing more than 25 crore people. The sector contributes close to 29 percent of the country's GDP and approximately 45 percent of exports.

Behind these headline figures lies an enormous universe of businesses that have crossed the survival threshold and entered the growth stage. They have recurring revenues, loyal customers and positive cash flows. The mid-market is also India's nursery for applied innovation – IP and customer solutions that have moved from the 'lab' to delivering real customer value, at scale. Yet many remain overlooked by both venture capital investors, who typically focus on hyper-growth technology businesses, and public market investors, who often require larger and more liquid investment opportunities.

As a result, thousands of capable businesses find themselves in a capital gap. They are too mature for venture capital but not yet large enough to attract significant institutional attention.

That gap is increasingly becoming one of the most attractive investment opportunities in India.

Why Capital Flows Are Shifting Toward the Mid-Market

Several structural changes are reshaping India's investment landscape and making the mid-market more attractive than ever before.

A recent study conducted by McKinsey in partnership with the Indian Venture and Alternate Capital Association found that private equity and venture capital investment activity in India expanded 1.6 times to approximately $207 billion between the periods 2016–2020 and 2021–2025. During the same period, exits more than doubled to nearly $120 billion.

These numbers indicate a maturing investment ecosystem with greater confidence in long-term value creation.

At the same time, investors are becoming more selective.

According to Deloitte's Asia Pacific Private Equity Almanac for India, overall deal volumes declined by roughly 8 percent in FY2025, yet transaction values increased by 23 percent. This suggests that investors are concentrating capital into fewer but higher-conviction opportunities where they see significant room for growth and operational improvement.

For many investors, that opportunity is increasingly found in the mid-market.

Unlike larger businesses that have already undergone multiple rounds of institutional ownership, mid-market companies often present greater potential for transformation. Improvements in governance, technology adoption, leadership recruitment and operational efficiency can create meaningful value over relatively short periods.

This shift reflects a broader evolution in private equity itself.

Historically, returns were often driven by financial engineering, leverage and valuation expansion. Today, investors are increasingly focused on operational value creation. Bain & Company's India Private Equity Report 2026 highlights that platform-building strategies and buy-and-build models are gaining momentum, particularly among mid sized businesses, where substantial headroom for growth still remains.

In other words, investors are looking for businesses they can help build—not simply businesses they can buy.

The Rise of New Capital Sources

Another important development is the widening diversification of capital available to growing businesses. Private credit has emerged as a significant financing option for mid-market companies. Bain's data indicates that private credit deal volumes increased by approximately 35 percent in 2024, driven largely by businesses facing tighter access to traditional bank financing.

For founders, this represents a valuable alternative. Growth capital no longer needs to come exclusively through equity dilution. Flexible credit structures are allowing companies to fund expansion, acquisitions and working capital requirements while maintaining greater ownership control.

At the same time, domestic pools of capital are becoming increasingly sophisticated.

Family offices, institutional investors and pension-linked capital are showing greater interest in long-term growth opportunities. This trend is particularly significant because it reduces dependence on foreign capital while creating a more resilient investment ecosystem.

Global investors are also paying close attention.

At a time when international capital is seeking exposure to economies that combine scale, demographic strength, and long term growth visibility, India stands out as a compelling destination. The country's expanding consumer base, improving infrastructure and rising formalisation of the economy continue to strengthen the investment case.

For many investors, the mid-market offers the opportunity to participate in value creation before companies achieve their full potential.

Where the Next Wave of Leaders Will Emerge

Every generation of economic growth creates a new set of corporate leaders.

Many of India's most respected companies today began as relatively small enterprises serving niche markets. What distinguished them was not access to unlimited capital. It was the ability to scale operations, build trust and adapt to changing opportunities over time.

Today, the same process is unfolding across India's mid market. Thousands of businesses have already moved beyond the uncertainty of their early years. They have proven demand, capable leadership and clear growth opportunities ahead of them. What they need now is the support required to bridge the gap between potential and scale.

For investors willing to look beyond the obvious, this is among the most compelling opportunities in the country. Many of these companies already exist. The challenge is not in finding them, but in recognising their potential before everyone else does.

Capital Alone Does Not Build Institutions

One lesson stands out from more than two decades of investing in mid-market businesses: money rarely solves the most important problems.

The companies that successfully make the transition from regional players to national leaders almost always undergo a deeper transformation. They strengthen governance, build professional management teams, institutionalise decision-making and create systems that allow growth to continue beyond the founder.

Many Indian mid-market companies remain founder-led, which is often a source of strength rather than weakness. Founders typically bring long-term commitment, deep customer relationships and an close understanding of their industries. Yet scaling a business from ₹200 crore to ₹2,000 crore in revenue requires a different operating model from the one that helped build it in the first place.

The challenge is not simply access to capital. It is access to experience, talent and institutional capabilities.

This is where growth-stage investors can play a meaningful role. The best partnerships are not defined by the size of the cheque. They are defined by the ability to help a business recruit leadership, improve governance, expand into new markets and prepare for the next stage of growth.

In our own experience, the most successful investments have rarely been those where capital was the differentiator. They have been situations where founders and investors worked together to build stronger organisations.

Where Do the Opportunities Lie

Over the years, one pattern has become increasingly clear: some of India's most promising businesses are often the ones that receive the least attention.

Across sectors such as Digital Technology (intelligent software & automation), Consumer, BFSI and Education, there are companies quietly building strong franchises, serving large markets, and creating meaningful impact without attracting the headlines associated with venture-backed startups or large listed corporations.

For instance, some of the most important businesses in the education sector are focused on addressing fundamental challenges in learning outcomes, assessment, and access to quality education. These companies are solving problems that affect millions of students and families across the country and many of these innovations have crossed borders and are expanding internationally.

Beyond these sectors, the opportunity is evident across large parts of the Indian economy. Manufacturing businesses are gaining from shifting global supply chains and rising domestic demand. We are entering a phase of 'smart manufacturing' and India's strengths in software will result in some very innovative solutions from India for the world. Many have built impressive capabilities over decades and now stand at an inflection point, where technology, additional capital and strategic support can accelerate their growth.

Healthcare remains another area of significant potential. India has one of the best medical talent pools in the world but we are still supply constrained. Affordable, personalized and quality healthcare needs to far more accessible than it currently is. We cannot just reply on the few multi-specialty chains to serve patients across India. India can leapfrog its more developed counterparts in delivering affordable healthcare at scale leveraging technology and our strengths in pharma and healthcare delivery. Outside the large hospital networks in metropolitan centres, there are diagnostic chains, specialty healthcare providers, and regional hospital groups serving rapidly expanding markets. Many have strong business models but remain undercapitalised relative to the scale of the opportunity before them.

The Decade of the Mid Market

Every economic cycle produces its own winners.

For much of the past decade, attention has centered on disruptive startups and large corporate champions. Both will remain important pillars of India's future. Yet the coming decade may well belong to a third category of businesses—companies that have spent years building steadily, leveraging technology to deliver real customer value at affordable prices consistently – being the workhorses of India's innovation economy without seeking recognition. These enterprises are not driven by headlines; they are driven by execution.

They are solving real problems, generating employment, strengthening industries, and building long term economic resilience. For investors, the opportunity lies in spotting them before the rest of the market does. India's mid market represents precisely that kind of inflection point today.

India's next decade may well be defined by how effectively we connect mid-market talent with the capital it deserves. With the right combination of capital, governance, and strategic support, these businesses can evolve into institutions built to endure for decades. That transformation is already underway across India—and increasingly, smart capital is beginning to take notice.

How to Plan an All-Weather IPO

Ajaya Sharma
Senior Vice President
Adfactors PR Pvt.Ltd.

Context

An Initial Public Offering (IPO) is often viewed as a 'coming-of-age' ritual. Much beyond a milestone, it also marks a strategic reset and the beginning of a new journey—redefining ownership structures, imposing market discipline, and shaping long-term access to capital. For promoters and significant shareholders, the implications extend well beyond the listing day and initial performance, as the transition permanently transforms their relationship with the broader market ecosystem.

Yet, there is an inherent contradiction at the heart of IPO planning. While the process itself is deliberate, multi-year, and deeply strategic, the outcome remains highly sensitive and dependent on short-term forces. These include market liquidity cycles, global macro developments, risk appetite, investor sentiments at the point of issue, and scepticism among market participants regarding valuations, among others.

Even strong businesses can see IPO outcomes deviate materially based on timing which sometimes upset the long term planning of the key shareholders. As the market is a deeply moody and temperamental creature, one cannot change its behaviour, but promoters can certainly plan and prepare around it for an all-weather IPO.

The most resilient IPOs are those designed to minimise dependence on timing rather than maximise it. There have been several instances where well-planned IPOs have received a strong response even in turbulent markets and have also seen continued follow-on buying after listing.

From Event to Process

The first shift required is conceptual: IPOs should not be treated as a transaction to be executed when markets are favourable, but as a capability to be built well in advance. Successful public market debutants require years of internal alignment, and to ensure an all-weather IPO, companies must build readiness across several core pillars.

These include:

- Predictability in financial reporting: Stock markets demand consistent, predictable financial outcomes backed by transparent disclosures.
- Clarity of business model: The onus lies on promoters to ensure their business models are well understood by the investing community.
- Institutional governance strength: Of late, this has become a key differentiator for companies and the valuations they command.
- Depth of management beyond the founding team: Breadth of the management team is seen as a positive attribute compared to a single founder-led company, as it mitigates the 'key-man' risk.
- Consistency in quarterly disclosures: Transparency regarding material disclosures, even beyond financial reporting, is something the market appreciates greatly.
- Ability to command the right valuation versus demanding it: Collectively, these factors enable promoters to command a strong valuation, rather than merely asking for it, that is justified by performance.

These preparations reduce execution risk and, more importantly, ensure that the company is not forced into reactive decisions during a narrow market window.

The Centrality of Narrative Clarity

Public markets place a premium not just on performance, but on understandability. Promoters have to ensure that the market at large understands the company, its business model, and vision of the founders clearly. Companies, which are not well understood, will never get the right valuations. To build a robust equity narrative, promoters must proactively define their revenue model, growth levers, unit economics, and the total addressable market. Demonstrating a clear investment thesis much ahead of the IPO is foundational to a successful market debut.

Execution Meets Narrative

The promoters must also articulate the company's evolution, from the scratch to the present, including the founder's journey. How the business has navigated various market cycles and economic conditions provides credibility to the equity narrative, demonstrating to investors that the model is robust and battle ready. The future growth story should be anchored in a proven track record of execution.

Communication as Preconditioning
By the time an IPO opens, most institutional investors would have crystallised their stance; a testimony to the critical importance of pre-IPO engagement and communication. Companies that invest early in articulating a clear growth strategy and fostering investor outreach are far better positioned to capture market interest than those that do not. Hence, proactive narrative building is a highly recommended strategic step for IPO-bound promoters, as it shifts the pressure from last-minute marketing to a position of long-term strength.

Ahoy to Fresh Beginnings
An IPO marks a structural pivot for an organisation, introducing more rigorous management responsibilities, a broader investor base, and a complex regulatory framework. The post-listing and long-term demand for the stock serves as the litmus test for how effectively a firm communicated with stakeholders during its IPO run-up. So, a founder's ability to communicate effectively is essential for building credibility, before and after the IPO.

Conclusion
Markets cannot be controlled, but dependence on markets can be reduced with prior planning and preparation. An all-weather IPO is not about perfect timing. It is about structural preparedness, narrative clarity, and strategic restraint so that when the IPO window opens, the outcome is shaped less by external conditions and more by internal readiness.

India Internet Stocks: A Market in Transition

What Kotak Investment Banking's DART Gauge Tells Us About Valuations, Sentiment, and the Road Ahead

India Internet Stocks: A Market in Transition (FY26)

India's internet economy is undergoing a recalibration after a stretch of aggressive multiples and breakneck growth. Our anchor for this measurement is the Valuation gauge — a liquidity-weighted metric developed by Kotak Investment Banking to track sentiment and valuations across publicly listed Indian internet companies. Rather than reading any single stock, it blends the cohort into one signal, expressed through NTM EBITDA multiples benchmarked against steady-state EBITDA multiples. Its usefulness is not merely descriptive: the gauge has shown predictive power for forward portfolio returns, with a mean-reversion threshold that has historically flagged when the sector is stretched or oversold. When Valuation runs hot, subsequent one-year returns tend to disappoint; when it sags to depressed levels, the setup for a rebound improves.

FY2026: a year when winners were scarce

FY2026 was an unforgiving year for India Internet investors. Valuations fell and sector sentiment turned decisively negative, driven above all by a de-rating in Food Delivery and Quick Commerce (FD/QC) — the segment that had carried the cohort in prior years. Eternal (Zomato) and Swiggy bore the brunt as competitive intensity rose and the market grew skeptical about the path to durable profitability. Importantly, much of the drawdown was not India Internet-specific: a broad market sell-off, shaped by macro conditions and global risk appetite, amplified the pain. Amid the gloom, a handful of names bucked the trend — Nykaa, Delhivery and PayTM saw improving fortunes as investors rotated toward more attractively valued businesses with visible operating progress.

FY26 broke the pattern investors had grown used to. Previously valuations had been in a "bounded equilibrium" — a range within which the sector's multiples had oscillated — which gave way to sharp valuation compression, and the Valuation gauge lost its historical anchoring. Higher discount rates weighed on long-duration growth assets, and terminal-value multiples that had been taken for granted were re-examined. The result was a genuine question mark over how India Internet stocks should be valued going forward, rather than a simple continuation of the old framework.

The great rotation: from food delivery to fintech

The defining structural shift of FY26 was a rotation in investor demand from FD/QC toward fintech platforms. Fintech's contribution to the Valuation gauge nearly doubled over the year, reflecting a market re-weighting toward the segment's profitability trajectory and scale. PB Fintech anchors the listed opportunity, with a broader ecosystem — PayTM, Groww, PhonePe and RazorPay (the latter two being unlisted and waiting in the wings) — reinforcing the theme that monetizable financial-services rails are where incremental capital wants to be.

At the other end, classifieds came under pressure from AI. The rise of large language models and AI-powered crawlers threatens the core discovery-and-matchmaking business models that classifieds depend on — the risk being that generative interfaces disintermediate the platforms that historically owned search and lead generation. Names such as Info Edge, IndiaMART, JustDial, CarTrade and Matrimony.com faced a re-rating as the market prices in the possibility that tools like Google's AI Mode eroded traffic and take rates. We think this is less a temporary headwind and more a structural question about whether classifieds can defend their moats in an AI-mediated world.

A market demanding proof, not promises

Despite the turbulence, capital has not abandoned the sector — over 33% of traded value in the cohort still flows through new issuances, underscoring that India Internet remains a place where investors want exposure. What has changed is the bar. Coming out of Q1FY27 earnings, the market is no longer paying for growth narratives alone; it is demanding visible evidence of durable profitability, sustainable take rates, falling losses and steady cash flows. For instance, Nykaa's GMV growth is cited as the kind of tangible proof point investors now reward. The underlying structural story — a vast internet user base, a deepening digital-payments ecosystem, expanding financial services and rising e-commerce penetration — remains compelling. But the reward now accrues to companies that can convert that opportunity into demonstrable performance rather than projections.

Conclusion: A more discerning investor base. And an end of the honeymoon phase

India Internet has moved from a promise-driven market to a proof-driven one. The Valuation gauge, having lost its old anchoring through FY26's compression, now sits at low levels — which we read as a constructive signal for oversold, high-quality names given the metric's history of mean reversion. Beneath the headline, the cohort is bifurcating: fintech is the demand magnet, FD/QC is stabilizing after its de-rating, classifieds face an existential AI question, and value-seekers are gravitating to Nykaa, Delhivery and PayTM. For investors willing to underwrite verifiable profitability over story, the current low read on Valuation frames an attractive entry into a structurally intact sector.

Beyond the Terminal: A Calling from 'Inevitable India'

Navneet Munot
Managing Director & Chief Executive Officer
HDFC Asset Management Co.Ltd.

There is an experience every NRI knows by heart. You land in India after years, clear the terminal faster than you expected and step into a country that is somehow not quite the one you left. The airport is more tech-enabled, the billboards flashing past are increasingly aspirational. By the time you settle into your cab, the airport terminal has already given you a glimpse of a country well and truly on the move. Over the course of your stay, this feeling becomes even more vivid. New flyovers, expanding Metro lines, wide expressways and if it's Mumbai, state-of-the-art new Coastal Road, reshape the geography of the very neighbourhoods you grew up in, leaving you momentarily lost in a city you once knew by heart. Things feel different. The skyline has shifted. Again. Even the casual conversations that you have with relatives and friends here reflect this change in the nation's psyche.

Then it is time to return. You file these memories away, somewhere between pride and surprise, board your flight and carry on. And weeks later, back in your global routine, you go back to managing your wealth as though none of this ever happened.

India: A Story That Defies Simple Narratives

Recent global narratives have been dominated by economies riding the AI infrastructure wave. India does not feature in this today. But this is not new. Even during the technology boom of the late 90s, India did not invest billions in networking, fibre and internet. It put it to work and in doing so, created companies that became global names. For AI too, while India knows that it surely needs to move up the innovation curve, the first chapter belongs elsewhere. The second, where adoption drives productivity across a large domestic economy, is where India potentially stands to reap the real benefits.

Unlike economies whose fortunes are tied to a single theme like memory chips or a commodity, India is genuinely diverse. It has new-age technology companies and decades-old industrials. A financial sector serving millions of first-time borrowers and investors. A healthcare industry supplying drugs to the world and performing complicated surgeries at a fraction of the cost. A consumption story driven by a rising middle class and an infrastructure buildout that is only partially through. Exports and global themes matter, but India's first engine has always been domestic. That separates India from other Emerging Economies.

India has often been a story that defies simple narratives. It disappoints the most optimistic and also outlasts the most pessimistic. It tends to do its best quietly, when most people start looking elsewhere.

Crisis as an Opportunity

While AI-driven market euphoria and elevated oil prices have created near term headwinds, India's underlying macros have remained resilient. Benign inflation, prudent fiscal management, a manageable current account deficit, healthy foreign exchange reserves, sound corporate balance sheets and deepening capital markets have put India on a stable footing to navigate the current environment.

Importantly, some of India's most consequential reforms have emerged when the cost of inaction became too high. Introduction of GST unified the indirect tax structure. Insolvency and Bankruptcy Code brought discipline to a credit culture that had long needed it. Labour reforms streamlined a framework that had remained largely unchanged for decades. The buildout of Digital Public Infrastructure created a foundation for financial inclusion and digital commerce that is now being studied and replicated across the world. India has demonstrated, repeatedly, that it absorbs external shocks resiliently without losing the thread of its longer-term story.

Chief Ministers are actively courting businesses, both domestic and global. Cooperative and competitive federalism is no longer merely a policy aspiration; it is increasingly visible on the ground.

'Spot'light on Rupee: Looking Beyond Recent Volatility

For an NRI assessing India from overseas, the sharp depreciation in the rupee over the past couple of years may appear to be a reason for caution. In US dollar terms, returns on Indian investments have looked softer than the underlying rupee performance would suggest. It deserves a closer look though.

The Rupee, assessed on a Real Effective Exchange Rate (REER) basis, which adjusts for inflation differentials across trading partners, is currently undervalued. The reasons for the depreciation are worth understanding. Valuation differentials, AI-led investment trends, tariff uncertainty, geopolitical disruption across West Asia affecting energy prices and risk appetite, and elevated US bond yields drove FPI outflows from India and put the rupee under pressure. These are temporary dislocations due to the challenging global environment, and not structural flaws.

Historically, the rupee depreciates against the dollar broadly in line with the India-US inflation differential. That is the long-run anchor. Around it, there will always be periods of overshooting driven by sentiment, flows and global events. We are in one such period today. Importantly, with the RBI's inflation targeting framework now firmly established, the inflation differential between India and the US has narrowed considerably. Leaving aside temporary dislocations, a structurally lower inflation differential should, over time, translate into a lower rate of rupee depreciation than what investors have historically witnessed. For an NRI with a long investment horizon, an undervalued currency is not necessarily a risk. It could be an additional source of return.

The investment case therefore carries a twin tailwind for overseas investors. The structural upside of Indian equities, amplified by the currency gains that a mean reversion toward fair value could deliver going forward.

The Diaspora's Legacy: Crisis Capital Then, Structural Ownership Now

India's diaspora has historically stepped in as a meaningful source of capital during periods of external stress. Pokhran nuclear tests in 1998 drew international sanctions and 'Resurgent India Bonds' raised over $4 billion from NRIs. Similarly, in 2000, the 'India Millennium Deposits' channelled over $5 billion. After the Taper tantrum in 2013, the RBI's FCNR-B swap scheme brought ~ $30 billion within weeks. RBI has again announced measures that would lead banks to offer FCNR deposits at attractive rates now.

But this time, the argument for equity is also strong. And the context is fundamentally different.

Indian capital markets today have a depth and breadth that did not exist in any of those previous episodes. The number of listed companies, the sectoral diversity, the quality of disclosure and governance, the liquidity available to investors, all of these have improved substantially. More importantly, Indian markets are no longer primarily dependent on foreign flows. Amidst heightened volatility, monthly SIP inflows have remained resilient at approximately $3 billion in CY26, a consistency that has held through every bout of volatility. In December 2025, Domestic Institutional Investors (DIIs) surpassed Foreign Portfolio Investors (FPIs) in ownership of NIFTY 50 companies.

Indian markets are becoming, gradually and credibly, self-reliant.

That said, India's growth ambitions are vast. The investment required to sustain 7% plus growth, build infrastructure, expand manufacturing capacity and deepen financial inclusion cannot be met by domestic flows alone. Both are needed. Domestic and foreign. Policymakers have been engaging with FPIs to understand and address their concerns, and sooner or later, FPIs could resume meaningful flows into Indian equities.

The Arbitrage of Insight: What the Diaspora Sees

NRIs occupy a unique position in this landscape. They live and work in developed markets. They are exposed to varied wealth creation strategies, sophisticated financial products and bring a valuable cross-border perspective.

At the same time, they have something that institutional FPIs do not. They come home. They have conversations with family, with former colleagues, with business owners in cities that are changing faster than any research report captures. They get a pulse of India's transformation in ways that cannot be reduced to a Market-Data Terminal or a brokerage note.

This makes NRIs among the most naturally positioned investors for the India opportunity. Not because of sentiment. Because of information.

India as a Diversification Plank

For an NRI, the case for India is not only about return potential, but also about diversification. Most NRIs carry rupee linked obligations like parents being cared for back home, property held or planned, children who may one day return, and for many, the intention to eventually retire in India. These are real future liabilities in rupees. Yet the typical NRI portfolio is built almost entirely in dollars, dirhams or pounds. India exposure bridges this gap. India also offers something a concentrated global portfolio often lacks. Driven largely by domestic demand, and with a mix of new age companies, decades old industrials and a wide array of sectors, its market does not always move in lock step with the global markets like US, where much of an NRI's wealth and income is already tied up, thereby providing diversification.

GIFT City: The Gateway to Global-Indian Wealth

GIFT City acts as the gateway for the over 30 million strong Indian diaspora to benefit from the India growth story. The launch of the International Financial Services Centre at GIFT City was the first step towards bringing financial services transactions relatable to India back to Indian shores and establishing it as a preeminent international centre. This is reflected in the sustained growth momentum and rising investor participation in the fund management space, with over $15 billion in commitments raised by March 31, 2026.

For non-resident investors, GIFT City domiciled funds offer the ability to transact in foreign currency with no requirement for another bank account, demat account or PAN in India. Through GIFT City feeder funds, non-residents gain an operationally conducive and tax efficient route to invest in existing mutual funds in India with a long term track record. A simplified tax regime, easier repatriation and reduced friction compared to traditional routes make GIFT City a compelling access point for the diaspora to participate in India's growth story.

The Capital That Stays

Every NRI who visits India eventually leaves, drawn back to the life they have built elsewhere. But there is no reason their capital needs to follow them out.

India's growth story does not pause between visits. The compounding happens continuously, in the balance sheets of businesses, in the expanding consumption of a rising middle class, in the infrastructure being laid today to carry economic activity for decades.

NRIs who invest in India participate in that story from wherever they are. Their capital stays, works and grows within an economy they understand better than most foreign investors. When they land the next time and feel that familiar sense of a country that has moved forward again, they will have done more than just witness it.

They will have been a part of it.

Growth of Registry Services in India's Regulated Environment

Kishor Thakkar
Managing Director
MUFG Intime India Pvt.Ltd.

Registry services are an essential layer of India's securities market infrastructure. They support listed companies, public issues, corporate actions, depository-linked shareholder records, investor servicing, and issuer compliance. In India, the sector's growth is being aided by SEBI's stronger regulatory framework for Registrars to an Issue and Share Transfer Agents, the continued shift to dematerialised securities, rising shareholder participation, expanding corporate action activity, and higher expectations around investor protection, transparency, and digital service delivery.

The opportunity for Indian corporate registry service providers now extends well beyond traditional share transfer administration. SEBI-regulated RTAs are increasingly expected to serve as strategic partners to issuers by maintaining accurate shareholder records, supporting IPOs and other capital events, administering corporate actions, managing investor grievances, enabling board and compliance reporting, and sustaining strong governance, cyber resilience, and audit-ready controls.

At a glance

- SEBI regulation is increasing demand for trusted, control-oriented registry providers.
- QRTAs are becoming systemically important to market confidence, investor protection, and issuer continuity.
- Digital servicing, governance, data quality, and cyber resilience are emerging as key differentiators.
- Future growth will come from issuer-centric, technology-enabled service models that go beyond core recordkeeping.

Regulation is no longer only a compliance requirement; it is becoming a competitive differentiator for registry providers.

Market Context

Registry services support the official record of investors, securities holders, unit holders, transactions, entitlements, and related service events. Their importance rises as markets deepen, investor participation broadens, listed and unlisted securities ecosystems mature, and financial products become more complex.

In India, corporate registry services are closely linked to the evolution of SEBI-regulated capital markets and issuer obligations. The RTA role has changed materially with dematerialisation, online service requests, shorter public issue timelines, complex corporate actions, shareholder grievance mechanisms, board-level reporting, and tighter cyber-security expectations. SEBI's regulatory framework, supported by master circulars and investor charter requirements, is pushing the industry toward greater transparency, stronger controls, and more standardised issuer and shareholder service delivery.

SEBI Regulatory Environment as a Growth Catalyst

SEBI regulation should be seen not only as a compliance obligation, but also as a growth catalyst for high-quality corporate registry providers. A more formal, transparent, and investor-centric regime increases demand for trusted RTAs that can maintain accurate shareholder records, support listed and unlisted issuers, execute corporate actions reliably, resolve investor issues within defined timelines, and provide defensible evidence during audits, inspections, board reviews, and regulatory scrutiny.

- SEBI registration and governance: RTAs operate within SEBI's registration framework, maintain appropriate infrastructure, meet fit-and-proper requirements, appoint compliance leadership, and sustain ongoing eligibility.
- Investor charter and service standards: SEBI's investor charter expectations require clear disclosure of services, timelines, investor rights, responsibilities, and complaint-handling mechanisms.
- SCORES 2.0 and Online Dispute Resolution: Investor grievance management is increasingly formalised through company/RTA channels, SEBI's SCORES platform, and the securities market ODR mechanism.
- KYC, PAN, nomination, and folio discipline: RTAs support maintenance of clean investor records, folio-level KYC remediation, PAN validation, nomination updates, and service request processing in line with SEBI requirements.
- Cyber security and cyber resilience: SEBI's cyber-resilience expectations are resulting in stronger governance, incident response, vendor oversight, data protection, and continuous monitoring across technology platforms.

Key Growth Drivers

Key growth drivers for corporate registry services The following table summarises the main forces shaping demand for corporate registry services in India. Corporate Registry Growth Driver	Implication for Corporate Registry Services
Listed issuer compliance obligations	Higher demand for accurate shareholder records, board-ready MIS, regulatory evidence, and issuer-level service accountability.
Public issues and capital raising	Growth in IPO, rights issue, QIP, buyback, and offer-related workflows requiring reliable investor application, allotment, refund, and communication support.
Dematerialisation and depository integration	Reduced physical processing but increased need for clean demat-linked records, DP coordination, ISIN-level controls, and reconciliation discipline.
Corporate action complexity	Increased demand for accurate entitlement calculations, dividend processing, bonus issues, splits, mergers, delistings, buybacks, and post-event reconciliation.
Investor grievance transparency	Need for robust complaint tracking, issuer escalation workflows, SCORES response discipline, ODR readiness, and monthly complaint disclosures.
Cyber-resilience expectations	Higher investment in secure shareholder platforms, access controls, data governance, incident response, and vendor risk management.

Strategic Growth Opportunities

Core Registry Modernisation
The foundation for growth in India is a modern corporate registry platform that can support issuer master records, shareholder registers, demat-linked activity, public issue workflows, corporate actions, investor service requests, grievance tracking, KYC and nomination updates, and regulatory reporting.

Regulatory Technology and Compliance Services
Indian corporate registry providers are graduating from transaction processing into compliance-enablement services for listed and unlisted issuers. This includes issuer compliance dashboards, investor charter reporting, grievance analytics, KYC and nomination remediation support, audit packs, SEBI inspection readiness, corporate action compliance tracking, board packs, and evidence repositories for regulatory reviews.

Digital Investor Experience
Indian investors increasingly expect secure, mobile-first, and transparent service channels. Registry providers can unlock growth through digital service request submission, online KYC and nomination updates, status tracking, consolidated investor communication, proactive reminders, multilingual support, and seamless escalation from RTA channels to SCORES and ODR where required.

Corporate Actions and Issuer Services
Corporate actions represent a high-value growth area in India because execution errors can affect investor trust, issuer reputation, and regulatory scrutiny. RTAs can deepen issuer relationships by providing end-to-end support for dividends, bonus issues, rights issues, buybacks, splits, mergers, delistings, takeover-related activities, proxy advisory services, e-voting coordination, entitlement calculations, and post-event reconciliation.

New Asset Classes and Market Segments
Growth opportunities in India extend beyond conventional listed equity shareholder records. Corporate registry providers are evaluating capabilities in debt and debenture servicing, REITs, InvITs, employee stock ownership plans, unlisted public company records, private credit instruments, and issuer services linked to capital restructuring. Mutual fund registry may remain an adjacent opportunity, but the primary growth thesis should be anchored in issuer mandates, shareholder servicing, and capital market events.

Importance of QRTAs
Within India's RTA ecosystem, Qualified Registrars to an Issue and Share Transfer Agents, or QRTAs, occupy a distinct position because they service very large shareholder bases and carry higher systemic, operational, and investor-protection relevance. SEBI has clarified that an RTA is categorised as a QRTA if, at any time during a financial year, the combined number of physical and demat folios serviced by the RTA for listed companies exceeds two crore. Once categorised, the RTA is treated as a QRTA for the next three financial years, even if the folio count subsequently falls

The importance of QRTAs stems from concentration, scale, and market confidence. A QRTA failure, cyber incident, data integrity issue, or corporate action error can affect a large number of investors and multiple issuers simultaneously. For this reason, QRTAs are expected to maintain mature internal policy frameworks, robust risk management, business continuity capabilities, cyber-security controls, investor service standards, grievance redressal mechanisms, insurance coverage, vendor oversight, and periodic reporting on key risk areas.

Table 2: Strategic differences between QRTAs and other registrars The comparison below highlights why QRTA status can be a strategic advantage for providers serving large issuers and complex capital market events. Dimension	QRTAs	Other Registrars	Strategic Implication
Scale and systemic relevance	Service very large folio bases across listed companies, creating higher market-wide dependency.	Typically serve smaller issuer portfolios and smaller investor base.	QRTAs are better positioned for large, listed issuers and complex corporate actions, and face higher regulatory and operational expectations.
Regulatory oversight	Subject to enhanced monitoring, internal policy frameworks, periodic reporting, and stronger governance expectations.	Subject to the general RTA framework, with less systemic-risk intensity.	QRTA status can become a trust signal for issuers seeking resilience and regulatory confidence.
Technology and resilience	Need enterprise-grade platforms, cyber controls, disaster recovery, data security, and vendor oversight.	May operate with leaner technology stacks, though still required to meet SEBI obligations.	Large issuers are likely to prefer providers with proven capacity, redundancy, and cyber maturity.

QRTAs matter in three ways. First, they can become preferred partners for large, listed issuers that require scale, auditability, cyber resilience, and board-level reporting. Second, they are better placed to standardise and industrialise high-volume activities such as IPOs, dividend processing, buybacks, rights issues, mergers, grievance handling, and shareholder communication. Third, their compliance and technology investments create a platform for value-added services, including issuer dashboards, regulatory evidence packs, investor analytics, and premium service-level offerings.

Smaller registrars, however, continue to have a role where issuer relationships, regional presence, customised support, and cost efficiency are valued.

To grow sustainably in India, RTAs must design operating models that meet SEBI expectations while improving issuer and investor outcomes. Scale remains important, but regulators and clients are placing increasing weight on governance, data quality, complaint discipline, cyber resilience, service transparency, and documented accountability. For QRTAs, these expectations are amplified by their scale and systemic relevance. For smaller registrars, the priority is to demonstrate control maturity while competing through specialisation, responsiveness, and niche issuer coverage.

The Way Forward

The next phase of growth in India's registry services market will be led by corporate registry providers that can translate SEBI's regulatory expectations into trusted, issuer-centric, shareholder-focused, and technology-enabled service models.

Tokenisation – India's Demat 2.0 moment:

The way we moved from paper share certificates to digital records, we're now moving to assets that carry their own rules, settlement logic, and transferability on a blockchain. Globally, this is already happening at scale, IMF has called it one of the most significant shifts in capital markets in decades.

Fractional Shares

The future of fractional shares in India looks promising with several initiatives and proposals underway. This is expected to further democratise stock market participation, making it more accessible and affordable for a broader range of investors.

In a market where investor protection, governance transparency, and capital market activity are becoming central, SEBI-aligned corporate registry platforms can emerge as strategic infrastructure partners for India's next phase of issuer and shareholder servicing.

Commodities Derivatives Distribution – Emerging Opportunities

Praveena Rai
Managing Director & Chief Executive Officer
Multi Commodity Exchange of India Ltd.

Commodities have always remained closely connected to economic progress. The energy that powers industries, the metals used to create infrastructure, and the raw materials consumed by manufacturers form the foundation of the physical economy. While technology and services continue to transform the world, every economy still depends on efficient commodity markets for growth and stability.

As India moves towards becoming a larger manufacturing and consumption-driven economy, managing commodity price volatility is becoming increasingly important. Businesses today operate in a globally connected environment where prices are influenced by several factors including demand-supply changes, geopolitical developments, currency movements, weather conditions, and shifts in global trade flows.

For companies dealing with commodities, these price movements are not merely numbers on a screen. They directly influence procurement decisions, production costs, working capital requirements, profitability, and long-term planning. A manufacturer dependent on industrial metals, an exporter linked to international prices, or an enterprise consuming energy product faces continuous uncertainty from changing commodity prices. This makes commodity risk management an important part of business resilience.

Commodity derivatives markets provide transparent platforms for price discovery and enable participants to manage price risks. In the two and half decades of existence of the electronic modern commodity derivatives markets in India, they have created perceptible impacts in the economic landscape and resilience of entities connected to commodities. However, the future growth of these markets depends not only on product innovation and market infrastructure, but also on strong distribution.

The next opportunity lies in ensuring that solutions provided by the Exchange Traded Commodity Derivatives (ETCD) reach a wider set of participants across industries, geographies, and business segments.

Moving from Market Access to Market Adoption

Over the years, India has built strong financial market infrastructure. However, the development of any financial market depends on three important pillars — reliable products, trusted infrastructure, and effective distribution.

A product creates value only when it reaches the participants who can benefit from it.

The growth of some sections in India's financial markets demonstrates the importance of distribution. Wider participation is enabled not only by the availability of investment products but also by brokers, intermediaries, technology platforms, and investor education initiatives that simplified market access.

Commodity derivatives are positioned for a similar journey. The focus is gradually moving from providing access to increasing adoption.

A retail participant, MSME manufacturer, large corporate, and institutional investor may all participate in commodity markets, but their objectives are different. A strong distribution ecosystem understands these differences and delivers suitable solutions.

The Bridge Between Markets and Participants

Brokers have historically played a crucial role in expanding financial markets. They act as the important link between market infrastructure and end users.

In the early stages, commodity broking was largely relationship driven. Participants depended on brokers not only for execution but also for market information, price updates, and understanding contract mechanisms. This traditional broker network helped establish trust and awareness among physical market participants.

Over time, technology transformed the broking landscape. Digital and discount broking platforms simplified market participation through digital onboarding, transparent pricing, mobile applications, and easy availability of information. These developments significantly reduced barriers and expanded market reach beyond traditional financial centres. The recent increase in client participation in commodity derivatives market through digital broking, highlights the power of efficient distribution.

The next phase for brokers in ETCD market will go beyond providing trading access. It will involve becoming solution providers. For a manufacturer, the requirement may not be simply buying or selling a futures contract. The requirement may be understanding exposure, identifying price risks, and implementing suitable hedging strategies. This creates an opportunity for brokers to develop specialized commodity capabilities. The role of brokers can evolve from transaction facilitators to risk management partners and involve services such as industry-specific risk solutions, hedging support for businesses, market research and insights, digital analytical tools and education and awareness initiatives, apart from other innovative support.

MSMEs: Expanding Commodity Risk Management

India's Micro, Small and Medium Enterprises (MSMEs) represent one of the biggest opportunities for adoption of commodity derivatives. MSMEs contribute significantly to manufacturing, exports, and employment. Many operate in sectors where raw material prices directly affect business performance. A company using copper, aluminium, zinc, energy products, or precious metals may have expertise in manufacturing but may not have dedicated resources to monitor global commodity cycles. An unpredicted and adverse price movement can impact margins and business planning. For these companies, commodity derivatives can act as business protection tools. For instance, a manufacturer holding inventory or accepting future orders may already have commodity exposure, and so the risk of adverse price movements. Hedging using instruments available in the ETCD market helps manage the risk from this exposure. However, many MSMEs may be unaware about the quantum of risk they face or the mechanism of hedging. Increasing awareness among MSMEs can help them view commodity derivatives as practical business tools for hedging rather than only financial market instruments. Here, brokers and advisors can play a major role by taking structured risk management solutions closer to these small businesses.

From Execution-Based Distribution to Advisory-Based Distribution

Financial market distribution naturally evolves with maturity. In the first stage, the focus is access. Participants need platforms to enter markets. In the next stage, the focus shifts towards solutions. The same transition has been visible in equity markets, where the ecosystem evolved from basic buying and selling of shares to research services, advisory models, portfolio solutions, and wealth management.

Commodity markets have a similar opportunity. Intermediaries in the commodity markets can build specialized services around market intelligence, corporate hedging strategies, comprehensive exposure analysis, customized risk management framework and sector-focused solutions, among others. This transition can create a deeper relationship between commodity markets and the real economy.

Technology and Artificial Intelligence: The Next Evolution of Distribution

Technology has already changed how participants interact with financial markets. The next phase of transformation of the ETCD market will possibly be driven by data analytics and artificial intelligence.

Commodity markets generate large amounts of information every day — including global prices, supply-demand trends, inventory levels, weather developments, currency movements, and geopolitical events. Analysing this information can be challenging, especially for smaller participants. Artificial intelligence can help convert large amounts of data into simpler insights. The objective is not replacing human judgement but supporting better decision-making. For businesses, AI-based tools can help identify potential risks, monitor commodity exposures, and provide relevant information based on their requirements.

For example, a manufacturing company consuming industrial metals may receive customized insights based on price movements, consumption patterns, and market developments. For brokers, AI creates an opportunity to serve customers at greater scale. Instead of providing the same information to every participant, technology can enable more personalized communication and solutions. Deployment of technology like AI can support greater value addition in distribution by way of customized market insights, faster information processing, sharper use of risk monitoring tools, improved customer education and overall better decision support systems.

This, the future of commodity derivatives distribution is likely to be not only about providing access to markets but also about providing the right information to the right participant at the right time.

Institutional Participation: Building Market Depth

Deep and mature commodity derivatives markets require participation from different categories of participants. Globally, commodity markets have developed through involvement from producers, consumers, financial institutions, investment managers, and professional participants. Each category contributes differently. Commercial participants use markets primarily for managing price risks. Financial participants look for investment opportunities and bring liquidity, research capabilities, and wider participation. In terms of distribution, financial institutions like mutual funds contribute enormously in connecting to the ETCD market large swathes of retail investors, who otherwise may not have the wherewithal to directly participate in this market. A widely participated market is a deeper market that benefits all participants through better price discovery and efficient execution. As India's financial markets continue to mature, institutional participation can become an important driver for commodity market growth.

While India has made significant progress in expanding participation, certain areas provide opportunities for further development. Take mutual funds, for instance. Currently, mutual funds participating in ETCDs operate within defined regulatory frameworks. Unlike some global markets where institutional investors actively participate through both long and short strategies, domestic mutual funds have limitations on taking independent short positions in ETCDs. Expanding the range of permitted strategies over time can help bring additional institutional liquidity and improve market efficiency.

Another important area is the development of liquidity across longer-duration contracts. Commodity price risks faced by businesses are not always short-term. Manufacturers, exporters, and large consumers often plan procurement and production cycles several months ahead. Financial participants can take a longer-term view of the market and invest in longer duration contracts.

Globally, deeper institutional participation has supported the development of products such as commodity funds, index products, structured strategies, and long-term hedging solutions. Similar evolution in India can strengthen commodities as an asset class while also supporting the risk management needs of the real economy. A broader institutional ecosystem consisting of mutual funds, portfolio managers, Foreign Portfolio Managers, Alternative Investment Funds, Specialised Investment Funds, corporates, and other participants can create help deepen the commodity derivatives market, improve liquidity, and enhance its overall efficiency.

The Road Ahead

The future of commodity derivatives distribution will possibly be shaped by collaboration across the ecosystem. Exchanges provide transparent market infrastructure. Brokers and intermediaries expand reach and awareness. Technology improves accessibility. Institutions and businesses deepen participation. Together, these elements create stronger and more efficient markets.

As India strengthens its role in global manufacturing and trade, effective commodity risk management and getting the right price signals will become increasingly important. The next phase of growth will not only be about more participants entering commodity markets. It will be about ensuring that the right participants use these markets for the right purpose.

A mature commodity ecosystem supported by strong distribution, technology, awareness, and trust can contribute significantly to building a more resilient and competitive economy.

Reimagining Financial Governance: From Compliance to Strategic Value Creation

Dr.Arun Raste
Managing Director & Chief Executive Officer
NCDEX Ltd.

Financial governance is at a turning point. For years, most businesses perceived it as a checklist: follow the laws, pay taxes and duties regularly, file returns on time, keep the paperwork straight, and protect what you own. Inspectors, their manuals and visits, the rule books based on archic d regulations helped built discipline, a mindset to comply with regulation, and set the floor for accountability. But look around—today's world has changed too fast for governance to just sit quietly in the background. Markets are unpredictable, technology is omnipresent and everyone's watching. So, governance can't just live in the back office anymore, waiting for a government officials stamp. It needs to step right up as a strategic muscle and a major positive factor. The businesses that are going to stick around in the globalized world and take the lead aren't the ones simply ticking boxes for compliance. They'll be the ones using governance to build trust, raise their game, stay resilient, and create long-term value. This shift matters even more for financial institutions, market networks, exchanges, clearing corporations, and data-led companies, because trust is their lifeblood. In these places, governance isn't just about stopping things from going wrong. It's about driving healthy growth, smart innovation, and leadership that people actually believe in.

Leaving the Compliance-Only Era Behind

The old way of handling governance was mostly reactive. Everything revolved around regulatory or governmental ask . Be it periodic reports, internal controls, audits, board meetings, and double-checks after the fact. The main focus was on procedure: Did you do what you were supposed to? If not, did anyone catch it before it blew up? That approach still matters, but let's be honest—it's no longer enough. Three big changes have turned governance on its head. First, use of technology has speeded things up. Decisions that used to take quarters now need to be made in minutes. Second, the list of people who care and watch the performance of the corporate has grown. Boards, regulators, investors, customers, employees, communities, the general public—everyone expects more than profits. They want fairness, transparency, resilience, ethics, and genuine accountability. Third, there's just a mountain of data now, and it's reshaped how decisions get made. Artificial intelligence, advanced analytics, and real-time dashboards let the managements catch problems sooner and spot patterns or risks that used to stay hidden for ages. So, governance has to move from just checking the boxes to acting as a real-time support system for decision-making. The question isn't just "Did we follow the rules?" Now it's, "Are we making decisions that are wise, complaint, responsible, and fit for the future?"

The CFO: From Number Cruncher to Chief Value Architect

Look at the role of the CFO. Once upon a time, this was all about numbers—being the guardian of accounting, cash flow, budgets, and basic compliance. Those things still matter. But today, the job extends way beyond debit credit and balance sheets. A modern CFO needs to be a chief value architect. They need to advise the CEO on strategy, translate data in ways leaders can use, blend risk assessment into financial planning, and guard the institution's reputation and trust. Finance isn't just keeping score anymore—it's riding shotgun on strategy. This shift affects everything: - CFOs can't just know accounting and regulations—they need to get analytics, tech, business strategy, and what their stakeholders really care about. - Finance teams can't live in the past, just cranking out history lessons in the form of old reports. They need to be forward-looking—offering insights that help leaders act now. - Risk management can't sit off to the side. It needs to be woven into every business move, investment, and process. - Finance now connects the dots: financial results, operational resilience, sustainability, governance. It's all linked. In high-speed sectors—think commodity markets and financial infrastructure—you can already see this happening. Pricing shifts, liquidity dances, margin calls, and risk signals move fast. The finance leaders who blend technical skills with vision will make better calls. Those who stay stuck in their old silos risk fading out as the world becomes more data-driven.

Leadership: Time to Rethink the Game Plan

If governance is going to drive value, institutions need to update how they lead. Buying new software or adding another report won't cut it. The real challenge is to redesign competence, culture, and accountability from the ground up. Start with talent. Tomorrow's leaders need to thrive where numbers, tech, new business models, and risk all intersect. Organizations need to rethink what skills matter most and start investing in analytics, digital know-how, scenario planning, and big-picture thinking. This isn't just a human resources issue—it's a strategic ask. Second, get the structure right. Too often, finance gets looped in after the big decisions. Flip this. Finance should help shape strategy from the get-go, especially when you're talking about where to invest, how much risk to take, how to build resilience, and how to create long-term value. Governance needs to give finance a real voice, not just make them the scorekeeper. Third, it's about building a new culture. A future-ready organization welcomes questions, pushes for transparency, and says it's okay to flag problems early. People need to feel responsibility for more than their own tasks—they need to care about the integrity of the whole organization.

Data-Driven Governance: Real Accountability
Old-school governance relied on periodic reports, audit logs, and looking backwards. These were post facto actions and more a post mortem than actual concureent corrective measures. That way iappears redundant and too slow now. Institutions need governance that's always on—not just every now and then. Data-driven governance brings a new type of accountability. It goes beyond tracking what's already happened—it gives organizations a way to spot what's coming. Real-time dashboards, integrated data feeds, predictive models, automated alerts—they all exist now to flag issues before they become disasters. Compliance doesn't have to wait for a four-times-a-year checkup; it can be constant. This approach matters most in exchanges, clearing systems, and financial market networks, where transactions fly and risks can pop up in seconds. Limits get updated on the fly, margin calls keep pace, surveillance spots weird trading patterns early, and red flags get raised instantly—not a month later. But this lesson applies everywhere. Every organization should ask: Is our governance built to spot emerging risks in real time, or do we just record what happened after the damage is done? The answer says a lot about whether the institution will bounce back from trouble.

Trust: The Real Capital in Finance
Let's get real—for financial institutions, trust is everything. It's not something you see on a balance sheet, but it shapes who participates, how liquid your markets are, whether stakeholders feel safe putting their money down, the credibility of leaders, and even your cost of capital. This is exactly why governance can't just be about ticking boxes. It's the daily operating system for building, keeping, and—if you mess up—restoring trust. Financial systems depend on confidence: confidence in the institution, in its processes, and in the people running things. If governance stumbles, you don't just lose money—you lose reputation, and that's much harder (and more expensive) to rebuild. Cases like Satyam have shown that you can't regulate your way to trust. Laws can force transparency, but rules alone don't make people believe in you. Trust grows when what you say matches what you publish—and both match what you actually do. It all comes down to three things: being transparent, taking responsibility, and acting with integrity. For commodity markets, trust cuts even deeper. It connects everyone—farmers, traders, brokers, processors, and others—in a system that has to be seen as reliable and fair. Where trust is high, markets draw more participants. As trust fades, the whole ecosystem gets shaky.

Governance: A Strategic Must-Have
So, governance isn't just about meeting the bare minimum. It fuels better decision-making, steadier performance, and more patient investors and helps organizations weather storms. It connects what the business stands for to its standing in the public eye. With this expanded role, governance sits at the heart of sustainability, risk management, and value creation for the long haul. Boards can't just review the past anymore. They need to dig deep into technology, resilience, cyber risks, business model vulnerabilities, ethics, and sustainability. It's not about micromanaging but about staying engaged with what really moves the needle. The best organizations don't treat governance and strategy as separate. Their risk plans shape their business choices. Their financial models factor in sustainability. Board meetings aren't just about what happened last quarter—they're about gearing up for what's next.

Technology: The New Battleground for Governance
Technology drives the next big chapter in financial governance. AI and advanced analytics sharpen risk models, speed up insights, and help organizations make smarter calls. Blockchain is showing new ways to boost transparency and efficiency. Automation cleans up manual errors and tightens control. But, let's not kid ourselves—technology brings challenges too. Cybersecurity isn't just an IT hassle anymore; it's a top board-level risk. Algorithms can carry hidden bias or go haywire if nobody's paying attention. Connections across different systems can multiply risks in a blink. Digitization makes things smoother if managed right, but it also brings new vulnerabilities if governance slips. Looking ahead, financial governance has to have a strong technology focus. Boards and execs must understand not just what digital systems can do, but also what assumptions they rely on, where the gaps are, and the ethical choices that ride along. Governing the tech is now part and parcel of governing the whole enterprise.

Resilience
Because Disruption is the new normal disruption routine now—whether it's financial shocks, politics, the climate broken supply chains, cyber attacks, you name it! Expecting things to just stay stable is old thinking. So, what sets strong organizations apart is how they handle turbulence. Resilient firms are proactive about governance, flexible in risk management, and clear in how they communicate. They pick up on small warning signs, respond fast, and keep stakeholder confidence high, even when things get rocky. Resilience also needs flexibility. Rigid systems built for "business as usual" just can't handle today's non-stop volatility. Institutions need setups that let them adapt on the fly, keep accountability without locking down, and move quickly without losing control.

What Next: How to Build a Future-Ready Institution
The future of financial governance comes down to integration: finance, tech, risk, strategy, and sustainability all working together. Organizations that move this way won't just avoid failure, but they would do better than their peers, even when uncertainty is the only certainty. Here's where to start:

1. Build up finance skills. Invest in analytics, digital systems, and talent that blends discipline with strategic vision.
2. Make governance real-time. Go beyond scheduled reviews—use predictive tools and fast escalation when problems show up.

3. Boost board effectiveness. Boards need people with diverse perspectives, deep expertise, tech savvy, and an eye for new risks.
4. Make risk culture part of the DNA. Risk awareness isn't a siloed job; it's everyone's job
5. Connect governance to the organization's purpose.

Treat financial results, trust, resilience, and societal impact as linked goals, not separate efforts. Compliance Is Just the Baseline—Now Governance Builds Your Edge The point is simple. Governance isn't just a defensive tool anymore. It's a competitive edge. Institutions that get this will make smarter calls, earn deeper trust, handle uncertainty better, and deliver long-term value. So, stop seeing governance as just another box to check. When it's done right, it powers real innovation, resilience, and trust. It helps organizations stay sharp and adapt while keeping true to their mission. In this new era, success rides on three things: innovation, resilience, and trust. The job for financial sector and MII leaders isn't just to keep pace—it's to guide the future with clear intent and real foresight.

India Doesn't Need Just More Mutual Funds. It Needs More Wealth Builders.

Why India's Next Financial Revolution Will Be Built on Human Infrastructure

Madhu Lunawat
Managing Director & Chief Executive Officer
Wealth Co.Asset Management Holdings Pvt. Ltd.,The

THERE ARE MOMENTS IN A NATION'S DEVELOPMENT when the central question quietly changes. For three decades, the question facing India's capital markets was what to build next. We built exchanges capable of handling billions of trades in a single session. We replaced paper share certificates, once lost or delayed for weeks after every trade, with dematerialised holdings that settle in moments. We built a payments architecture through UPI that other countries now study and attempt to copy. We built a regulator in SEBI confident enough to keep pace with all of it. And we built a mutual fund industry that today stewards more than eighty lakh crore rupees of household wealth, a scale few would have predicted at the turn of the century. Millions of citizens can now open an investment account from a phone in a matter of minutes, a transformation that would have seemed like fantasy to their parents. Few countries have democratised financial access at this scale in this short a time. This achievement deserves celebration. But every great achievement quietly reveals the next one, and India's next question is no longer what to build. It is who will help a billion people actually use what has already been built.

Every mature capital market rests on four pillars. Regulation creates confidence. Technology creates access. Products create choice. People create trust. India has built formidable, arguably world class, capability in the first three. The fourth pillar has never received comparable attention, even though it may be the one that decides how much of this architecture is ever actually used. Technology can connect an investor to a market within seconds. Only a trusted person can connect a family to a decision that will shape the next twenty years of its life.

When India speaks of infrastructure, the images that come to mind are highways, railways, ports and digital networks. We rarely speak of human infrastructure, though history suggests it matters just as much. A school is not valuable because of its building. It is valuable because of its teachers. A hospital is not valuable because of its equipment. It is valuable because of its doctors. A court is not valuable because of its architecture. It is valuable because of the lawyers and judges who make justice legible to an ordinary citizen standing before it. Capital markets follow the same quiet law, even if we rarely admit it in public policy documents. The next phase of India's financial development therefore calls for something far less visible than technology and considerably harder to build, which is sustained investment in the people who translate complexity into confidence.

One of the more persistent misconceptions in finance is that wealth is created by choosing the perfect product. In practice, wealth is created by ordinary, consistent behaviour repeated over long periods, and undone just as often by its absence. Investors rarely walk away from markets because a product disappoints them. They walk away because fear arrives before conviction has had the chance to take root. Behavioural finance has spent decades documenting the mechanics of this failure. Loss aversion magnifies the pain of a temporary decline until it feels permanent. Recency bias convinces an investor that whatever the market has done in recent months, whether rally or crash, will continue indefinitely. Overconfidence encourages excessive risk when markets are rising, and fear forces an exit precisely when markets have fallen far enough to be attractive again. None of these instincts are unique to India, or to unsophisticated investors. They are simply how the human mind is built to respond to uncertainty and loss. What differs from one market to another is whether an investor has someone beside them at the moment fear peaks, whose only task is to hold them to a plan made in calmer times.

Some years ago, while visiting distributor partners in a small town in central India, I met a woman running her practice from a single room above a provision store, a handful of certificates on the wall and a client register she still kept partly by hand. I asked her, expecting an answer about product knowledge or platforms, what the hardest part of her work actually was. She said it was not fund selection. It was a phone call in March 2020, when three older clients rang her on the same evening, certain the world was ending, wanting to withdraw everything before the market opened the next day. She told me she visited each of them over the following two days and did not discuss markets at all. She spoke about a grandchild's school fees, still years away, and why that particular money did not need touching today. All three stayed invested. I have sat through a great many product committees since that afternoon, and I still think about her more often than I think about most of them. It reframed, for me, what this industry is actually in the business of building. Products create returns. People create conviction.

> Products create returns. People create conviction.

Here is a number that surprises people inside the industry as much as outside it. In March 2026, a month in which monthly SIP contributions touched a record high of roughly thirty two thousand crore rupees, AMFI's own data showed that slightly more SIP accounts were closed or completed than were newly registered, a stoppage ratio just over one hundred percent. Some of that is simply tenure completion, and none of it is cause for alarm on its own. But it sits oddly next to the headline number the industry prefers to repeat, and it is a useful reminder that record inflows in rupee terms can coexist quite comfortably with a rising number of individual investors quietly giving up.

There is a harder observation sitting underneath that number, one that people inside the industry rarely say out loud. Cost efficiency and investor wellbeing are not the same thing, even though we often talk about them as if they were. Direct, low cost plans have genuinely saved investors money on paper, and that is a real achievement worth keeping. But a lower expense ratio does very little for an investor who exits at the worst possible moment with no one available to talk them out of it. Cheaper is not always the same as better, at least not for every investor, and certainly not for the ones who need coaching more than they need a lower fee.

I am aware of how that sounds, coming from someone who runs an asset management company. It is still true. It seemed worth saying plainly rather than dancing around it.

None of this is an argument against low costs, or against technology. Both matter enormously, and neither should be rolled back. Technology has transformed investing, and will keep transforming it. Artificial intelligence will make advice faster to deliver and portfolios sharper to construct. None of this should be resisted, and much of it should be welcomed. But there remains a great deal that technology cannot yet do on its own. It cannot fully manufacture empathy, or understand the particular shape of a family's aspirations, or talk a frightened investor through a specific bad evening when a portfolio statement looks alarming. An algorithm can answer a question with precision. It cannot always answer a fear with patience. The choice ahead, then, is not artificial intelligence in place of human judgement. It is artificial intelligence in service of human judgement, technology that makes an advisor faster, more informed and more available, never redundant. Technology democratises access. Trust democratises participation. India has invested enormously in the first. It is time to invest just as seriously in the second.

> Technology democratises access. Trust democratises participation.

Perhaps it is time to reconsider the language the industry uses for itself. The term Mutual Fund Distributor describes an activity. It does not describe a purpose. The best professionals in this industry today are no longer, in any meaningful sense, distributors of product. They have become financial educators, behavioural coaches, goal planners, risk managers, and in the truest sense of the phrase, family wealth partners across generations. This is not a change in title so much as a change in the nature of the relationship, from a single transaction to a decades long partnership that survives market cycles, career changes, marriages, inheritances and retirements. It may be more honest, and more useful to the public conversation, to simply call them what they have become. Wealth builders.

India's aspiration to become a developed economy will require enormous domestic capital, and that capital can only come from household savings that are currently, in large part, sitting outside the financial system, in land, buildings and gold. Every family that shifts even a modest portion of its savings from an unproductive asset into a long horizon financial one performs a small act of capital formation. Repeated across tens of millions of households, that quiet shift is what eventually funds the factories, the highways and the enterprises a growing nation will need financed from within. Financial inclusion, seen this way, is not merely a matter of opening more accounts. It is a matter of building confidence at scale, and confidence has always been built through relationships rather than registrations.

One of India's largest untapped opportunities lies in expanding the ranks of women wealth builders. Across Indian households, women increasingly influence, and often lead, decisions about education, healthcare, security and retirement, the very goals that long term investing is meant to serve. A woman advising other women, in a language and idiom that feels familiar, addressing questions about security and independence with lived understanding rather than a script, is likely to unlock participation that no advertising campaign could achieve on its own. This is already beginning to take a tangible shape. Community programmes such as MF Didi work through women's self help groups in smaller towns, identifying capable and often well educated women who have simply never had a formal route into paid work, and walking them through certification until they are equipped to serve their own neighbourhoods as trusted distributors. The insight behind such efforts is a modest but important one. India does not need to invent a new channel of trust to reach these households. It only needs to recognise a channel that already exists, the women's self help group, and give it a financial vocabulary. This is not a matter of representation for its own sake. It is one of the most direct and underused levers available for deepening financial inclusion in precisely the households that need it most.

Building this human infrastructure at the scale India needs, hundreds of thousands of well trained, well governed and well respected wealth builders reaching every district of the country, deserves to be treated as seriously as any highway, port or digital payment rail. It calls for education that goes well beyond a single certification exam, for continuing professional development in behavioural finance, tax and estate planning, for ethics treated with the same seriousness as examinations, and for financial literacy programmes aimed at citizens themselves, since even the most skilled advisor cannot build conviction with an investor who has never been taught why patience compounds and panic erodes. It calls, too, for recognising distribution as entrepreneurship in its own right. A wealth builder in a district town who serves a few hundred families over twenty years is not merely moving product. That person is building a small enterprise that creates local employment and keeps household savings working within the formal economy, one relationship at a time. Initiatives now emerging under names as unassuming as MF Dost carry this idea to its logical conclusion, taking capable but underemployed young Indians and handholding them through certification into an independent practice of their own, built on the simple premise that a good advisor should first be a trusted friend.

The name itself makes the argument better than any policy paper could. Before India needs another product, it needs more people willing to be, quite literally, a friend to the investor.

India has already demonstrated that it can build world class financial infrastructure. The task now is ensuring that every Indian family has the confidence to actually use it. History is unlikely to remember this era chiefly for the number of mutual funds launched, or the sophistication of the technology built around them, or the size of assets under management. It will remember whether India found a way to turn millions of ordinary families into long term wealth creators, and whether it recognised, early enough, that the didis and dosts building that trust one household at a time were not merely distributors but nation builders in the truest sense. That future will not be built by products alone. It will be built by people. India's greatest wealth creation engine will never be a mutual fund. It will always be the trusted wealth builder who helps a family believe in its own future, one conversation, one plan and one decade at a time.

Formalising Dialogue between Boardroom and Auditors – Decoding the NFRA Circular

Vishal Divadkar
Managing Partner & Head of Audit & Assurance
MSKA & Associates LLP
- A member firm of BDO International

Audit committees have a fiduciary responsibility to monitor whether the company is focused on and delivers high-quality corporate reporting. Effective audit committees play a critical role in building trust and confidence in reporting and risk management. To effectively carry out its oversight role, the committee interacts with statutory auditors through written and in-person communications, both formal and informal. The Standard on Auditing 260, Communications with Those Charged with Governance (TCWG) - SA 260, explicitly stresses that communication is not unidirectional. The auditor should evaluate whether two-way communication is adequate and effective. If it is not, this may impact the audit approach and risk assessment.

While 'communication' has always been mandated under auditing standards, the National Financial Reporting Authority (NFRA), through their inspection findings and on the back of recent corporate failures, highlighted that delayed or one-sided communication often allowed issues to crystallise into material misstatements in the financial statements or serious regulatory lapses. In response, the NFRA has issued a Circular[1] reiterating the key responsibilities of the Board/TCWG and clarifying what is expected of both stakeholders in such interactions. This article provides an overview of these expectations and sets out good practices suitable for adoption by boards and audit committees.

Firstly - Who is TCWG?

By law, the board of directors is the apex governance body responsible for stewardship, oversight, ensuring compliance with accounting standards and regulatory frameworks and overseeing internal financial controls. Its mandate is fiduciary in nature: to act in the best interests of the company and its stakeholders. Therefore, the board is the ultimate body tasked with governance.

However, in large corporations, certain functions related to overseeing the integrity of the financial reporting process, the effectiveness of internal control systems, the robustness of risk management processes, and the independence and performance of external and internal auditors are discharged by an audit committee. Acting as a critical link between management, auditors, and the board, the audit committee engages in meaningful dialogue with auditors on significant matters such as fraud risks, going concern assessments, and significant unusual transactions.

TCWG, as defined under SA 260, is responsible for overseeing the strategic direction of the entity and obligations related to the accountability of the entity. This includes overseeing the financial reporting process. The auditor should determine who constitutes TCWG at the beginning of the audit. If the Auditors communicate with a sub-group, it is relevant that the auditor keeps in mind whether the sub-group has the authority to take action in respect of the matters communicated, the adequacy of communication between the sub-group and the full board of directors, and whether they also need to communicate with the full board in addition to communication with the TCWG.

The NFRA Circular essentially views the board as the TCWG. Where an audit committee exists, the NFRA Circular clarifies that an audit committee "plus some of the board members" could qualify as TCWG. This poses the following implications:

- Has this created an incremental/ parallel compliance formality for companies?
- How would this align with the 'settled' legal/ secretarial position on the functioning of the board and the audit committees?

Financial reporting demands reciprocal communication

Communication is not one-sided. The board/ audit committee is duty-bound under the Companies Act, 2013 (2013 Act) to engage in a meaningful dialogue with the auditors. These communication requirements are designed, inter alia, to strengthen governance over the financial reporting process and fulfil their responsibility of oversight of the financial reporting. The fact that the financial statements are audited does not relieve the board/ audit committee of its responsibilities.

For example, the audit committee under section 177 of the 2013 Act should discuss with auditors before the audit commences, the nature and scope of the audit, as well as hold post-audit discussions to ascertain any areas of concern. Section 134(5) of the 2013 Act requires the board to disclose its assertions regarding certain critical aspects, such as adherence to applicable accounting standards; selection and application of accounting policies; making of judgements/ estimates on a reasonable and prudent basis; and other prescribed matters. Schedule IV to the 2013 Act casts an obligation on independent directors to satisfy themselves of the integrity of financial information and that financial controls and the systems of risk management are robust and defensible.

The NFRA Circular emphasises the joint or collective mandatory obligation of the company's governing body, i.e., the board of directors, its audit committee, its management and its auditors to establish a robust, effective two-way communication. This framework is critical for the discharge of respective responsibilities by the board and the auditors.

TCWG has a duty to engage in two-way communication

Two-way communication serves multiple, interrelated objectives that extend beyond information exchange. Although these roles of auditors and TCWG are distinct, they are intrinsically interlinked. The auditor's understanding of governance influences risk assessment and audit strategy, while TCWG depend on the auditor's insights to discharge their fiduciary and oversight responsibilities. Two-way communication is therefore not a courtesy or procedural step; it is a governance control in its own right. Regular and candid dialogue reduces the likelihood of last-minute disputes and reinforces the audit committee's role as an effective intermediary between auditors and management. TCWG should meet in person or virtually at least twice a year - once before the commencement of the audit and a second time, well in advance of the time, before the approval of financial statements by TCWG.

Ingredients of an effective communication framework

The NFRA Circular recommends that the board prepare and document an overall communication framework between TCWG and auditors. A documented framework delineates what auditors communicate, and what TCWG must proactively seek. This framework may include the following:

- Nodal persons to ensure an effective two-way communication throughout the audit. Name and details of members of the board and the audit Engagement Team who shall be nodal persons. Nodal persons may include independent/ non-independent directors.
- Expectations of the Auditors, i.e. from the Board to communicate:
  - Strategic decisions significantly affecting the nature, timing and extent of audit procedures,
  - Suspicion or the detection of fraud
  - Actions regarding Internal Controls, including Internal Audit Function,
  - TCWG's awareness and actions in relation to developments in the financial reporting, corporate governance practices and other regulatory matters, etc.
- Summary of key standards on auditing that require communication with TCWG.
- Process of updating/ escalating to TCWG, about the discussion and communication between nodal officers of TCWG and auditors.
- Process of documenting and communicating the views/ instructions/ actions of TCWG on the significant matters.
- Prescribing frequency of meetings and the expected agenda matters.
- Mandating significant communications to be in writing and formally acknowledged by the auditor and TCWG, either in the form of minutes of the meeting or letters.

What are the common agenda items?

Common agenda items in communications between TCWG and the auditors should extend beyond routine financial statement updates and be structured around areas of significant judgment and risk. A robust and clearly articulated agenda is essential to ensure that communications are structured, purposeful, and aligned with oversight responsibilities. Clarity in agenda-setting enhances preparation quality on both sides, enabling focused challenge rather than informational briefings. While the auditing standards and applicable provisions of the 2013 Act have a comprehensive and detailed list of matters to be discussed, the NFRA Circular envisages the following matters to invariably form part of interactions between auditors and TCWG:

- Auditor's compliance with independence and Code of Ethics
- Audit strategy and planning, including:
  - Materiality and its effect on the nature and extent of audit work,
  - Risks of material misstatement,
  - Internal control environment, in particular, to prevent fraud and non-compliance with critical laws and regulations,
  - Areas of significant accounting policy judgment and management estimations, etc
- Audit status and significant findings

Upward feedback by the audit committee to the board of directors

Upward feedback by the audit committee to the board is a critical governance mechanism that ensures the board receives independent, structured insight on financial reporting integrity, internal controls, risk oversight, and auditor performance. The audit committee operates as a delegated oversight body; however, ultimate responsibility remains with the board. Therefore, its observations, concerns, and recommendations must be formally escalated rather than assumed. From an auditor's standpoint, this has typically been an area not addressed formally by many companies, stemming from the following questions:

- How is the audit committee keeping the board apprised of their interactions with the auditors and their audit findings?
- Is this communication sufficiently detailed and documented?

- o Does the board, in turn, express their views/ concurrence/ reservations on the matters communicated, and how are these reflected in the financial statements to be approved?
- o Are there any other matters that the board may have discussed which could have implications on the financial statements? How are these communicated back to the auditors in a timely manner?
- o How is the formal written communication/assertion back to the auditors from the TCWG/ board documented?

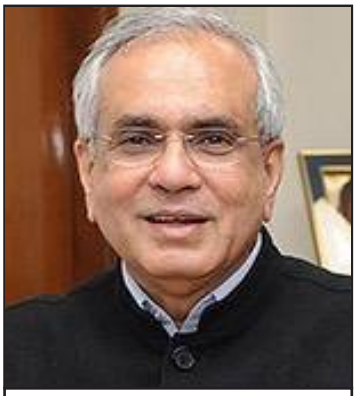
Emerging Trends

From our recent experience with listed companies, various practices have emerged to ensure compliance with the Circular. A Framework for Two-way Communication with TCWG has been adopted by Boards covering:

- Definition of TCWG and Nodal Persons
- Roles & Responsibilities of TCWG and Statutory auditors
- Timing and frequency of meetings
- Expectations on the content to be covered

While the Auditing Standard (SA 260, revised) and the Circular explain that the Board is typically the ultimate governing body, for the purpose of such two-way communication with the statutory auditors, TCWG and the Nodal person are defined as follows across our sample set:

TCWG defined	Audit Committee and any one from the Chairman and Managing Director/ Deputy Managing Director/ Chief Financial Officer as a permanent invitee	Board of Directors of the Company excluding the Whole Time Director(s)	Independent Directors + Managing Director/CEO/ Promoter	AC Chair, Whole time Director, CFO, CS, Invitees from Finance team	Audit Committee + CFO
Nodal Person of the Board	AC Chair	CEO/CFO/ WTD	Chairman of the Board or MD	Compliance Officer / CS	AC Chair & Promoter Director



Key Takeaways

To conclude, two-way communication between those charged with governance and auditors is widely recognised as a foundational element of audit quality and effective corporate governance. High-quality audits and resilient governance systems demand communication that is continuous, candid, forward-looking, and genuinely reciprocal. 'Trust and confidence' are the cornerstones of this two-way communication, and this is put to a real test when the going gets tough, when the management and Board look to 'cross that line'. How both sides respond and support each other during these times would, in the end, determine the strength of their relationship! By linking audit quality directly to governance, NFRA can more firmly demonstrate how failures in process translate into a pervasive risk that would eventually affect the public / investor community. It also aligns with global practices where audit committees are expected to play a far more active role in challenging management and auditors.

India: The Financially Under-Leveraged Economy

Rajiv Kumar
Chairman
Pahlé India Foundation

The Indian financial sector's performance over the Modi decade (2014-2024) tells a story of recovery, restraint, and unresolved issues. In 2014 the financial sector was under acute stress, burdened by the twin balance sheet problem that had paralysed credit, eroded confidence and landed India as a member of the 'fragile five' economies. Over the following years, the central government and the Reserve Bank of India (RBI) focused rightly on repair. Insolvency frameworks were introduced, banks were recapitalised to the tune of more than Rs 3.00 lakh crore, supervision was visibly tightened, and systemic stability restored. Gross non-performing assets had reached 5.95% in March 2014 but rose to 7.3% with RBI implementing its asset quality checks. These were successfully brought down to less than 2% by 2025. Capital adequacy improved, and the immediate risk of contagion receded.

But stability, while necessary, is not sufficient. A financial system ultimately exists not to avoid risk indefinitely, but to intermediate savings into productive investment, price risk intelligently, and support long-term economic transformation. The financial system provides the necessary life support to the economy. Its depth, dynamism and delivery efficiency determine the pace of economic growth.

On this deeper measure, India remains an under-leveraged economy. Despite healthier bank balance sheets, credit-to-GDP ratios at 90% remain materially below those of peer economies. Credit to GDP ratios in China, Vietnam and Korea, for example, are 185% , 130% and 170% respectively. Moreover, the composition of credit (as in Table 1 below) reveals a persistent skew in favour of personal loans. And even during this decade, credit flows to industry declined from 27% of the total in 2022-21 to less than 22% in 2024-25.

Household and consumption credit expanded steadily, particularly in housing and retail lending, while credit to industry and manufacturing lagged, especially for mid-sized firms. This divergence became more visible after 2020. Corporate profitability improved sharply, leverage declined, and liquidity conditions were accommodative. Yet private investment remained cautious. The constraint was no longer the twin balance-sheet stress. It was regulatory overreach and conservatism on part of commercial banks or even the RBI. This needs to be examined and addressed.

The persistence of informal credit highlights this structural weakness in the commercial banking sector. Despite decades of financial inclusion efforts, a significant share of MSME financing is sourced from informal creditors, often at a prohibitive interest cost of more than 30% per annum. This coexistence of formal financial availability and continued dependence on informal creditors points to a mismatch between the structure of India's private enterprise landscape and the design of its financial intermediation.

Formal finance prefers scale, documentation, and predictability. Much of India's productive economy, which exists in the informal sector and does not conform to these conditions. The result is not efficient risk pricing by the formal financial sector, but risk avoidance. And the consequence is the virtual complete lack of access to commercial bank credit for micro and small enterprises, which together account for 99.5% of total private enterprises in the country. Can such credit starvation produce the desired dynamism in the productive sectors, which admittedly are not formally registered?

Regulatory design has played an important role in shaping this behaviour. Post-Covid crisis, RBI supervision has appropriately prioritised asset quality, governance, and capital buffers. Yet an unintended consequence has been heightened risk aversion. Credit decision-making has become defensive, with officers prioritising audit safety over commercial judgement. The fear of retrospective scrutiny has raised the internal cost of failure, even when failure arises from genuine business risk. This is not a failure of intent, but a predictable outcome of extant incentives. When accountability frameworks punish error without distinguishing it from malfeasance, institutions including private enterprise retreat into caution. Growth slows and with it disappear employment opportunities.

Thus, over time, the financial system has itself reinforced this outcome by favouring established borrowers over emerging ones. The under-leveraged nature of the Indian economy is therefore not a sign of optimal prudence. It reflects institutional caution hardening into structural inertia.

Capital markets have partially offset this conservatism in the formal financial sector. Equity markets deepened, and valuations rose, enabling fundraising for a limited segment of firms. The massive expansion of the retail investors' base in India by more than four times (4X) (Table 2 above) over the last ten years has been a remarkable feature of the Modi decade. However, one of the consequences of this massive increase in retail investors in domestic capital markets, in conjunction with fintech, has been a decline in the credit-to-deposit ratio of commercial rose from a comfortable 75% in 2016 to a rather precarious level of 79- 80% in 2024. This is threatening to impair the credit-generating capacities of commercial banks.

One of the positive structural developments of the past decade has been the rise of fintech. Digital payments, account aggregation, alternative credit assessment, and platform-based lending have expanded access, reduced transaction costs, and improved inclusion. Fintechs demonstrated how data, technology, and design can lower barriers where traditional finance struggled. They enabled small merchants to formalise, households to access credit histories, and consumers to interact with finance with greater transparency. In this sense, fintech has acted as an institutional innovation, not merely a technological one.

The reach of Fintechs is so far limited but they are already posing a challenge to the organized large commercial banks. In conjunction with capital markets, they have been successful in attracting household savings away from commercial banks. Moreover, Fintechs have also been less averse to risk taking and expanded their credit to the small and micro enterprises, including owners of taxis for example, which has pushed commercial banks into expanding their credit to personal and housing loans and away from the productive sectors.

Despite the emergence and growth of the Fintech sector and its regional spread, spatial spread of both credit and deposits remains highly skewed in the country. It is quite shocking to note (See Table 3 below) that a mere 11 districts, out of a total of 800 districts, accounted for more than 50% of the total credit flows from commercial banks in 2024.

Commercial bank credit to industry as a share of total credit outflow has declined from 40% in 2014 to 22 % in 2024. The time is surely ripe for a regulatory overhaul of the financial sector that will bring it in sync with the rising capital requirements of the economy, which is now more complex, diverse, and demands a recalibration of the risk-taking behaviour and administrative structures in the organised financial sector.

Over the next decade, the financial system must evolve from a repair-oriented architecture to a growth-enabling one. A developed economy is not defined by low NPAs alone. It is defined by a financial system that supports innovation and experimentation, absorbs failure, protects consumers, and rewards long-term value creation. India has demonstrated that it can stabilise its financial institutions. The tougher task ahead is to make them confident enough to finance ambition at scale. Without that transition, the financial sector will remain safe and stable but unable to finance the national aspiration to become Viksit Bharat by 2047.

Settlement Finality and Insolvency Priority: Reconciling the SMC with the IBC

The Securities Markets Code, 2025 (SMC), if enacted in its present form, represents the most significant reform of India's securities law framework in nearly three decades. It consolidates and replaces three foundational enactments, namely, the Securities Contracts (Regulation) Act, 1956, the Securities and Exchange Board of India Act, 1992, and the Depositories Act, 1996, each of which was enacted at different points in time to regulate distinct components of the securities market.

By bringing these dispersed legal regimes within a single legislative framework, the SMC reconceptualises securities regulation as an integrated ecosystem rather than a set of institution-specific statutes. It provides a unified architecture for market governance in which regulatory, infrastructural, and transactional components are treated as functionally interconnected. Within this framework, SEBI is no longer the organising principle of a standalone statute; instead, it becomes one institution embedded within a broader statutory structure governing the securities market as a whole.

The SMC also reflects a broader legislative movement towards codification. Unlike an ordinary statute, a Code is generally intended to provide a complete and coherent statement of law in a defined field. Its provisions are not interpreted as isolated commands but as mutually reinforcing components of an integrated legal system. As the Supreme Court observed in Joseph Peter v. State of Goa, Daman and Diu, a Code is characterised by its self-contained and comprehensive nature. The SMC aspires to occupy such a position in relation to securities markets.

Codification of this nature inevitably generates interface questions with other comprehensive statutory regimes, particularly other Codes that claim plenary authority within their respective domains. These questions acquire special significance when provisions relating to market infrastructure, settlement finality, netting, collateral, and insolvency intersect with the Insolvency and Bankruptcy Code, 2016 (IBC), which the Supreme Court has recognised as a complete Code governing insolvency resolution and liquidation. At first sight, certain provisions of the SMC appear to pull in different directions, while others may seem difficult to reconcile with the moratorium, insolvency estate, and waterfall provisions of the IBC.

The more significant issue, however, lies beyond questions of statutory conflict. The SMC expressly contemplates the insolvency, liquidation, winding-up, and resolution of clearing corporations (CCs) and clearing members (CMs), and accords protection to the consequences of such proceedings. Yet neither the SMC nor the IBC provides a pathway for resolving the insolvency of these entities. The law recognises the possibility of their distress but does not establish a mechanism to address it.

This article argues that the perceived conflict between the SMC and the IBC is largely illusory. Properly construed, the two Codes operate in distinct, though complementary, fields: the SMC safeguards settlement finality, market integrity, and systemic stability, while the IBC governs insolvency resolution and the distribution of the debtor's estate. The real policy challenge is the absence of a resolution framework for CCs and CMs. The article, therefore, examines the internal coherence of the SMC, analyses its interface with the IBC, and explores how the combined operation of the two Codes may bridge this gap until a dedicated statutory resolution regime is enacted.

Harmony within SMC

The starting point is Clause 142 of the SMC, which provides that the provisions of the Code are "in addition to, and not in derogation of" any other law for the time being in force. This is a familiar legislative formulation. It signifies that the SMC is intended to coexist with other statutes and not to repeal, abrogate, or displace them. The Supreme Court, while interpreting an identical formulation in KSL and Industries Ltd. v. Arihant Threads Ltd., observed that such a provision reflects a legislative intention that the enactment should operate alongside other laws rather than supersede them. Clause 142, therefore, embodies the general principle that the SMC supplements the existing legal framework.

The SMC, however, also contains provisions designed to address the distinctive requirements of securities market infrastructure. Clause 68, which begins with a non obstante clause, accords statutory finality to settlements undertaken through a CC. It provides that settlements shall be conducted in accordance with the approved settlement procedures and that, once the amount of money, securities, or other obligations is determined, the settlement becomes final and irrevocable, irrespective of whether the actual transfer has taken place. Clause 70 similarly provides that, notwithstanding anything contained in any other law, a CC shall have the first right to recover dues arising from the clearing and settlement obligations of a CM from the collateral, deposits, and other assets of the CM held by the CC.

Viewed in isolation, Clauses 68 and 70 may appear inconsistent with Clause 142. On closer examination, however, the provisions operate at different levels and are readily harmonised. Clause 142 lays down the general rule of coexistence. Clauses 68 and 70, by contrast, address specific subjects - settlement finality, netting, close-out, collateral appropriation, and settlement obligations - and prescribe the consequences of inconsistency in those limited fields. Applying the settled principle that a specific non obstante provision prevails over a general saving clause, Clauses 68 and 70 govern their designated subject matter, while Clause 142 continues to operate in all other respects. The SMC, therefore, adopts a familiar legislative technique: coexistence as the norm, coupled with limited overriding provisions where necessary to preserve market integrity, settlement certainty, and systemic stability.

The Competition Act, 2002 provides a useful illustration of this legislative technique. Section 60 gives the Competition Act an overriding effect over inconsistent provisions contained in any other law, while Section 62 simultaneously declares that its provisions are in addition to, and not in derogation of, any other law for the time being in force. Parliament thus recognised that a statute may embody both a principle of coexistence and a mechanism for resolving specific inconsistencies. The presence of a saving clause does not eliminate the possibility of conflict; equally, the existence of an overriding clause does not confer wholesale supremacy over every neighbouring statute. Rather, the coexistence clause signals that overlap should ordinarily be resolved through harmonious construction, and that the overriding provision should operate only within the field of genuine inconsistency. The judicial task, therefore, is to identify the precise area of conflict and confine the overriding effect to that area.

The same principle applies to the SMC. Clause 142 expresses the general legislative intent that the Code should operate alongside other laws. Clauses 68 and 70 identify limited areas in which Parliament considered market stability and settlement finality sufficiently important to warrant an overriding effect. Properly construed, therefore, these provisions are not contradictory. They are complementary components of a coherent legislative design. Indeed, the internal structure of the SMC itself demonstrates that codification does not require absolute exclusivity. A Code may simultaneously accommodate coexistence and limited supremacy, provided each operates within its intended sphere. This understanding is also the key to resolving the relationship between the SMC and the IBC.

Harmony Between the SMC and the IBC

The more difficult question concerns the relationship between the SMC and the IBC. The IBC is undoubtedly a complete Code governing insolvency resolution and liquidation. In Innoventive Industries Ltd. v. ICICI Bank, the Supreme Court recognised that the IBC is exhaustive of the matters it deals with and emphasised the significance of Section 238, which gives the Code overriding effect over inconsistent provisions contained in any other law. The Court observed that Section 238 is couched in the widest possible terms so that rights available under other enactments do not impede the insolvency process. In Principal Commissioner of Income Tax v. Monnet Ispat and Energy Ltd., the Court reaffirmed that, by virtue of Section 238, the IBC prevails over inconsistent provisions even in special statutes. Thus, where a genuine inconsistency exists, the IBC ordinarily prevails.

That, however, is only the starting point. The existence of an overriding provision in one Code does not mean that every provision of another Code is inoperative to the extent of inconsistency. The first task of interpretation is always to determine whether the provisions can be harmonised and whether they in fact operate in the same field. In Solidaire India Ltd. v. Fairgrowth Financial Services Ltd., the Supreme Court observed that where two special statutes contain competing non obstante clauses, the later statute may prevail if the inconsistency is irreconcilable. But that is not a mechanical rule. Courts also consider legislative purpose, subject-matter specificity, and the possibility of harmonious construction before concluding that one statute overrides another. The judicial preference is first to reconcile the statutes and only thereafter, if necessary, to identify the limited field in which one must yield to the other.

The relationship between the SMC and the IBC should, therefore, not be approached on the assumption that one Code invariably prevails over the other. The more appropriate inquiry is whether the two Codes operate in the same field and pursue the same objective. A close examination suggests that they largely do not. The SMC is concerned with the integrity of the securities market, particularly the finality and continuity of the clearing and settlement process. The IBC is concerned with the resolution or liquidation of an insolvent entity and the distribution of its estate among creditors. Once this distinction is appreciated, much of the apparent conflict disappears.

Settlement Finality and Market Stability

The first area of harmony lies in the treatment of settlement finality. Modern securities markets operate through highly compressed settlement cycles, typically on a T+1 basis and increasingly through near-instantaneous settlement mechanisms. Settlement finality is not merely a matter of contractual convenience; it is the foundation of market integrity and systemic stability. The failure of a participant cannot be permitted to unravel completed settlements or destabilise the clearing system.

Clauses 68 and 70 of the SMC are directed towards this objective. Clause 68(2) provides that no order relating to insolvency, resolution, liquidation, winding-up, or dissolution of a CM, or any of its clients, shall affect a settlement that has attained finality. It also preserves the right of a CC to appropriate margins, collateral, deposits, and other assets furnished by the concerned CM towards settlement obligations. Clause 68(3) extends similar protection to the insolvency, liquidation, winding-up, or resolution of the CC itself. In such circumstances, all payment obligations and settlement instructions between the CC and its CMs, including transactions already admitted for future settlement, are required to be immediately determined in accordance with the approved netting and settlement procedures. The resulting determination is final and irrevocable. Clause 68(4) further directs any resolution professional, liquidator, administrator, receiver, or assignee not to reopen or disturb such determinations.

These provisions reveal a clear legislative intention: insolvency proceedings should not interrupt the settlement process. Even the insolvency of the CC itself does not suspend or unwind settlements. The focus of the SMC is, therefore, not insolvency resolution or creditor distribution, but the preservation of settlement finality and market stability. Properly understood, the SMC addresses a question that arises before the insolvency process can meaningfully begin, namely, the determination of what settlement obligations exist and how they are to be discharged.

This distinction is important. Settlement finality is not the same as creditor priority. Finality determines whether a transaction, netting determination, or settlement instruction can be reopened after insolvency. Priority determines how the debtor's estate is distributed among competing creditors. Clauses 68 and 70 are defensible to the extent that they perform the former function. They become controversial only if they are read as performing the latter function by altering the statutory waterfall under the IBC.

Third-Party Assets, Collateral and Netting

The second area of harmony concerns the nature of the assets involved in the clearing and settlement process. A substantial portion of the assets handled by CCs and CMs does not belong beneficially to them. These assets belong to investors, counterparties, and other market participants and are held in a custodial, fiduciary, or contractual capacity.

The IBC itself recognises this distinction. Section 18 excludes from the insolvency estate assets owned by third parties but held by the corporate debtor under trust or contractual arrangements, including bailment. Section 36 excludes from the liquidation estate assets held as security collateral by financial service providers (FSPs) and assets subject to set-off or netting arrangements in multilateral trading or clearing transactions.

These exclusions are significant. They indicate that Parliament did not intend insolvency proceedings to absorb into the insolvency estate assets that are merely passing through a market intermediary or are dedicated to the settlement process. To the extent that margins, collateral, deposits, securities, and settlement assets fall within these exclusions, they are outside the insolvency estate altogether. The operation of Clauses 68 and 70 is, therefore, not inconsistent with the IBC; rather, it is expressly accommodated by the IBC itself.

The same approach is reflected in the insolvency framework applicable to FSPs under Section 227 of the IBC. The relevant rules require the administrator to identify and segregate assets belonging to customers and counterparties and to deal with them in accordance with the applicable contractual and regulatory arrangements. The insolvency framework thus recognises that financial intermediaries frequently hold substantial volumes of third-party assets that are unavailable for distribution among general creditors.

Clause 70 must be understood against this backdrop. The provision grants the CC the first right to appropriate collateral and other assets of the CM held by it towards settlement obligations. Properly construed, the provision does not confer a priority over the general estate of the insolvent entity. Rather, it enables the CC to enforce rights against collateral and settlement assets that the IBC itself treats differently from ordinary estate assets. In that sense, Clause 70 complements rather than contradicts the IBC.

Going-Concern Operations During Insolvency

The third area of harmony arises from the IBC's insistence that the corporate debtor continue as a going concern during the insolvency resolution process. A debtor undergoing resolution may continue to participate in securities market transactions and, consequently, continue to incur settlement obligations. Many of these obligations arise on account of transactions undertaken for clients and other market participants rather than for the debtor's own account.

The IBC is fully capable of accommodating such obligations. To the extent liabilities arise in the course of preserving the debtor as a going concern, they constitute insolvency resolution process costs and are payable in priority during the resolution process. The continuation of settlement obligations during insolvency, therefore, does not undermine the objectives of the IBC; rather, it is consistent with the Code's broader objective of preserving enterprise value and maintaining the debtor as a functioning business.

Viewed through this lens, the relationship between the SMC and the IBC is not one of competing statutory regimes but of complementary legal frameworks addressing different aspects of the same commercial reality. The SMC is concerned with ensuring the finality, certainty, and continuity of market settlements and with protecting assets dedicated to the settlement process. The IBC is concerned with the resolution or liquidation of the debtor's estate and the distribution of assets among creditors. Much of what the SMC regulates lies outside the insolvency estate altogether, while the limited overlap between the two regimes is addressed through specific exclusions and protections contained within the IBC itself. Properly construed, therefore, the two Codes operate in harmony: the SMC safeguards systemic stability in the securities market, while the IBC provides an orderly framework for insolvency resolution without disturbing the integrity of market settlements.

Insolvency Resolution of Financial Service Providers

The conclusion that the SMC and the IBC can largely be harmonised does not answer a more fundamental question: under what insolvency framework are CCs and CMs to be resolved? The answer is not readily available in either statute. Indeed, the most significant challenge at the intersection of the SMC and the IBC is not one of statutory conflict but of statutory silence.

The SMC unmistakably contemplates the possibility of the insolvency, liquidation, winding-up, or resolution of CCs and CMs. Clauses 68 and 70 prescribe the treatment of settlement obligations, netting arrangements, collateral, and the role of resolution professionals and liquidators when such events occur. Yet the Code stops short of establishing a framework for conducting the insolvency resolution of these entities. Nor does it identify the legislation under which such proceedings are to take place. The SMC thus assumes the existence of an insolvency process without creating one.

This omission is significant because CCs and CMs are FSPs, and the insolvency of FSPs raises considerations that differ materially from those arising in the insolvency of real sector enterprises. Financial institutions frequently hold customer assets, perform critical intermediary functions, and may generate systemic consequences if their distress is not managed in an orderly manner. For this reason, several jurisdictions have developed specialised resolution regimes for financial institutions that differ from conventional corporate insolvency frameworks.

India too recognised this distinction. The Financial Resolution and Deposit Insurance Bill, 2017 sought to establish a dedicated Resolution Corporation for banks, insurance companies, and other financial institutions. The proposal was eventually withdrawn in 2018 following widespread public concern, leaving India without a comprehensive resolution framework specifically designed for financial institutions.

The IBC, while providing a consolidated framework for the insolvency resolution and liquidation of corporate persons, expressly excludes FSPs from its ordinary ambit. Section 3(7) defines a "corporate person" in a manner that excludes FSPs, while Section 3(17) defines an FSP as a person engaged in the business of providing financial services pursuant to authorisation or registration granted by a financial sector regulator, including SEBI. The exclusion is not merely theoretical. In Nitin Pannalal Shah v. Vipul H. Raja, the National Company Law Appellate Tribunal held that a stockbroker registered with SEBI is an FSP and therefore falls outside the corporate insolvency resolution process contemplated by the IBC.

The exclusion of FSPs from the IBC is, however, not absolute. Parliament recognised that certain categories of financial institutions may require the procedural architecture of the IBC while simultaneously requiring modifications tailored to their specialised functions. Accordingly, Section 227 empowers the Central Government, in consultation with the relevant financial sector regulator, to notify specific FSPs or classes of FSPs for insolvency and liquidation proceedings under the IBC, subject to such modifications as may be prescribed.

Pursuant to this power, the Central Government notified the Insolvency and Bankruptcy (Insolvency and Liquidation Proceedings of Financial Service Providers and Application to Adjudicating Authority) Rules, 2019. These Rules apply the insolvency resolution and liquidation framework of the IBC, with suitable modifications, to notified categories of FSPs. At present, however, the framework extends only to specified systemically important non-banking financial companies and housing finance companies with assets of ₹500 crore or more. Neither CCs nor CMs have been brought within its ambit.

The result is a conspicuous regulatory gap. The SMC contemplates insolvency and resolution events involving CCs and CMs. The IBC excludes them from its ordinary framework. The modified framework under Section 227 does not presently apply to them. Consequently, while the law recognises the possibility of their failure, it does not provide a complete procedural mechanism for managing that failure.

At the same time, Clauses 68 and 70 of the SMC provide important clues regarding the legislative design. These provisions expressly recognise the existence of resolution professionals, liquidators, administrators, receivers, and assignees. They prescribe the treatment of settlement obligations, netting arrangements, collateral, and close-out rights after the commencement of insolvency proceedings. The legislative assumption appears to be that insolvency proceedings against CCs and CMs will be conducted under a framework external to the SMC, most plausibly a modified insolvency regime applicable to FSPs. In that sense, Clauses 68 and 70 are not a substitute for an insolvency framework. They are best understood as market-stability provisions intended to operate within a broader insolvency process.

The real task, therefore, is not to derive a complete insolvency regime from the SMC itself. Rather, it is to identify how the SMC and the IBC can be read together to construct a workable resolution framework for CCs and CMs until a dedicated statutory regime for financial institutions is established. The provisions of the SMC indicate the modifications required to preserve market stability; the architecture of the IBC provides the procedural machinery through which those modifications can be implemented. The next question is whether such an approach can be achieved without fragmenting India's insolvency architecture.

Fragmenting the Insolvency Architecture

The IBC was enacted to replace a fragmented and sector-specific insolvency regime with a unified and coherent framework governing insolvency resolution, liquidation, and the distribution of assets. One of its central achievements has been the creation of a common insolvency architecture applicable across sectors, subject only to carefully defined exceptions. If departures from that framework are considered necessary for particular industries or institutions, they should ordinarily be incorporated within the IBC itself. It is neither desirable nor sustainable for individual statutes to create their own insolvency exceptions through isolated non obstante clauses, special priority provisions, or bespoke distribution mechanisms. Such an approach risks fragmenting the insolvency framework, diluting the coherence of the IBC, and generating inconsistencies across different regulatory regimes.

This concern is particularly relevant in the context of CCs and CMs. The case for protecting settlement finality, close-out netting, collateral segregation, and continuity of critical market functions is compelling. Indeed, the analysis undertaken earlier demonstrates that these objectives are already substantially accommodated within the IBC through exclusions relating to third-party assets, collateral, and multilateral netting arrangements. The question, therefore, is not whether special treatment is justified, but where and how such treatment should be located within the legal framework.

Viewed in this light, Clause 68(4) presents a potential difficulty. If it is understood merely as protecting the finality of settlements and preventing a resolution professional or liquidator from reopening netting determinations, it sits comfortably alongside the broader scheme of the IBC. If, however, it is construed as creating a substantive priority regime in favour of settlement obligations or as altering the distribution waterfall contemplated by Section 53 of the IBC, difficult questions may arise regarding its relationship with Sections 53 and 238 of the Code. The resulting disputes are unlikely to concern the commercial merits of insolvency resolution. Rather, they are likely to revolve around statutory supremacy, legislative intent, and the relative operation of competing non obstante clauses. Such litigation would be both avoidable and undesirable.

Legislative practice generally favours locating exceptions within the statute from which the exception is sought. Thus, if Parliament intends to carve out an exception from the framework governing public issues for insurance companies, that exception is more appropriately incorporated within securities law rather than insurance law. Otherwise, each sectoral statute would begin to create its own departures from generally applicable economic laws, leading to a proliferation of fragmented exceptions. Such an approach risks undermining the coherence of the underlying legal framework and may distort the uniform allocation of rights, obligations, and resources that the general law seeks to achieve. The same logic applies with even greater force to insolvency law. If the insolvency of CCs or CMs requires departures from the ordinary insolvency process, those departures are best articulated within the IBC itself, either directly or through the mechanism contemplated under Section 227. This preserves legal certainty, avoids jurisdictional conflicts, and maintains the institutional coherence of the insolvency framework while accommodating the specialised needs of CCs and CMs.

The concern regarding fragmentation would, of course, largely disappear if India were to establish a dedicated resolution regime for financial institutions, similar in concept to the erstwhile Financial Resolution and Deposit Insurance Bill. Financial institutions that hold substantial client assets, perform critical market functions, or pose systemic risks could be resolved under a specialised financial resolution framework, while FSPs whose capital structure and business model more closely resemble those of ordinary commercial enterprises could continue to be resolved under the IBC. Such an arrangement would preserve the coherence of the insolvency framework while recognising the distinctive characteristics of financial institutions.

Until such a framework emerges, however, the preferable course is to preserve the unity of the insolvency architecture. The objective should not be to create parallel insolvency regimes through sector-specific provisions scattered across different statutes. Rather, it should be to accommodate legitimate sectoral concerns within a coherent insolvency framework. A unified insolvency regime with carefully articulated exceptions is preferable to multiple insolvency regimes with uncertain boundaries. The challenge, therefore, is not to choose between the SMC and the IBC, but to ensure that the two operate together in a manner that preserves both market stability and the integrity of the insolvency process.

The Legislative Way Forward

The legislative solution may lie in one of three approaches. First, the Central Government may notify CCs and other systemically important institutions under the SMC for resolution under Section 227 of the IBC, with modifications tailored to such institutions. This is akin to the framework presently available for non-banking financial companies and housing finance companies with assets of ₹500 crore or more.

Second, Parliament may amend the IBC to expressly recognise settlement finality, close-out netting, and the use of collateral in insolvency proceedings involving CC and CMs. This would avoid reliance on sector-specific non-obstante clauses and preserve the coherence of insolvency law. Third, India may enact a dedicated financial-resolution law for systemically important financial institutions, including CCs. Such a regime would integrate both insolvency resolution and continuity of critical financial-market functions. Until one of these approaches is adopted, Clauses 68 and 70 should be read narrowly as market-stability provisions and not as a comprehensive resolution framework.

Conclusion

The SMC has understandably raised questions about its relationship with the IBC. A closer examination, however, suggests that the perceived conflict between the two Codes is largely illusory. The SMC is concerned with settlement finality, close-out netting, collateral enforcement, and the continuity of critical market infrastructure, while the IBC governs insolvency resolution and the distribution of the debtor's estate. Much of what the SMC regulates lies outside the insolvency estate altogether, and the limited areas of overlap are substantially accommodated within the IBC itself. Properly construed, the two Codes are complementary rather than competing regimes.

The more significant challenge is the absence of a credible insolvency-resolution framework for FSPs, whose failure may have systemic consequences. The legislative choice is, therefore, not between the SMC and the IBC, but between continuing with the present gap and creating a dedicated resolution architecture, whether through Section 227 of the IBC or a future financial resolution statute. Until a specialised financial resolution regime emerges, the most coherent solution lies in adapting the existing framework under Section 227 of the IBC, informed by the protections for settlement finality and collateral embodied in Clauses 68 and 70 of the SMC.

India's Carbon Credit Trading Scheme: Beyond Compliance Towards Competitiveness and Market Confidence

Atul Sobti
Director General, SCOPE & Member, Governing Body
International Labour Organisation

The world has come a long way from recognising the need for conscious business decisions having minimal impact on the environment. Infact, global governments, industries, and investors are creating ways to enable business decisions while managing carbon footprints as high emitters are being viewed to pose real financial and operational risks.

India is also not left behind in this realisation and hence, over time the Government has taken strong policy decisions to embark the country on path of green businesses and transition. The country has come a long way from 2004 when for the first time India submitted its first National Communication (NATCOM-I) on Climate Change to UNFCCC. Since then, India has been an active contributor to the global combat against climate change and despite of being an emerging economy having the need for its own energy security, has taken some very notable decisions including determination of Nationally Determined Contribution (NDCs) while making them measurable and aligning them to global needs of reducing carbon footprint.

In its string of actions, India has taken yet another significant step with the launch of the country's very own Carbon Credit Trading Scheme (CCTS) in 2023 through the Energy Conservation (Amendment) Act of 2022. Although the main purpose of this scheme is to reduce emissions, its effects will go further than regulating emissions. Over time, this scheme will have implications for how businesses will invest, innovate, and compete within a low carbon economy.

India has come a long with first step in 2004 when India submitted its first national communication on climate change to UNFCCC and since then the steps have only grown firmer with India showing its commitment in COP 15, Paris Agreement in COP 21 and most recently updated NDCs.

What is CCTS?

The Carbon Credit Trading Scheme (CCTS) is a market-based policy instrument which is aimed to accelerate the transition towards a low-carbon economy by assigning an economic value to greenhouse gas (GHG) emission reductions. Under the scheme, industries and enterprises are assigned emission reduction or intensity targets by a regulatory authority and the entities that achieve reductions beyond their prescribed targets, they earn positive points in the form of carbon credits. These carbon credits then can be traded with organizations that are unable to meet their obligations. This creates a financial incentive for emission reduction while allowing the overall cap to be met cost-effectively.

Why this scheme is being viewed as an important enabler and a way of pricing the emissions while moving towards a net zero economy? To put it simply, where on one hand the scheme mobilizes business investment in clean technologies, it also channels financial resources towards climate-friendly projects without relying solely on public funding. This has advantage for all stakeholders. Nationally, it supports India's climate commitments, including its NDCs and the goal of achieving net-zero emissions by 2070 by fostering innovation, attracting climate finance, and promoting sustainable industrial growth. For businesses, the scheme rewards efficiency by encouraging companies to invest in cleaner technologies, or process improvements so that their carbon savings can be monetised improving both competitiveness and balance sheets. For society, carbon markets drive faster adoption of clean energy, reduce air pollution and create green employment particularly for vulnerable communities near industrial zones.

The Carbon Credit Trading Scheme (CCTS) is a market-based policy instrument which is aimed to accelerate the transition towards a low-carbon economy by assigning an economic value to greenhouse gas (GHG) emission reductions. On one hand the scheme mobilizes business investment in clean technologies, while having advantage for all stakeholders – government, business and society.

India's Journey Towards a Carbon Market

The introduction of CCTS is not the first step for India in adopting a Carbon Market. This system has been formed over many years through policy trial and error and from experience building up the institution prior to climate change and carbon trading initiatives - 'Perform, Achieve and Trade' (PAT) scheme. Introduced by the Bureau of Energy Efficiency (BEE) in 2012 allowed for the reduction of emissions by heavy energy-based industries through energy efficiency improvements by creating specific reduction targets and developing a system to sell and trade Energy Saving Certificates (ESCerts). The implementation of the PAT led to certificates surplus as efficiency improvement could be anything causing difficulty in price equilibrium of ESCerts. Also, ESCerts rewarded improvements in energy efficiency rather than reductions in overall greenhouse gas emissions which may still increase if production expands. For a country like India, ESCerts had very limited applicability as everything had to be scaled to production. These key limitations led to the development of CCTS.

Unlike PAT, CCTS measures and rewards actual greenhouse gas (GHG) emission reductions. Further, setting cap or intensity targets and linking them to carbon reductions creates a more robust demand for carbon credits thereby enabling supply and demand equilibrium. Further, since CCTS is measurable, it is more widely accepted in global climate finance and carbon markets than ESCerts. CCTS also directly supports corporate decarbonisation pathways, ESG reporting, science-based targets, and long-term net-zero strategies.

CCTS builds upon the experience gained through the Bureau of Energy Efficiency's Perform, Achieve and Trade (PAT) scheme launched in 2012. While PAT successfully promoted energy efficiency through Energy Saving Certificates (ESCerts), it faced challenges such as certificate surplus, weak price discovery, and a focus on energy efficiency rather than actual greenhouse gas (GHG) emission reductions. The CCTS addresses these limitations.

India's market for CCTS today and its global relevance

Today, the Carbon Credit Trading Scheme forms the backbone of India's emerging carbon market framework. It has been made applicable in nine sectors initially - Cement, Aluminium, Chlor-Alkali, Fertilizers, Paper and Pulp, Iron and Steel, Refineries, Textiles, and Petrochemicals. It forms part of a broader framework that encompasses both a mandatory compliance mechanism, and a voluntary offset mechanism. Under the overall policy and climate objective guidance of Ministry of Power and Ministry of Environment, Forest and Climate Change (MoEFCC), the CCTS platform aims to develop an Indian Carbon Market where industries can buy and sell credits thereby encouraging lower emissions and more greener technologies.

CCTS introduced for 9 sectors as mandatory, rest voluntary as of present - Cement, Aluminium, Chlor-Alkali, Fertilizers, Paper and Pulp, Iron and Steel, Refineries, Textiles, and Petrochemicals

Well, trading of CCTS in the Indian Carbon Markets is all the more needed as carbon markets are a global phenomenon. According to recent analyses, global carbon markets have crossed the US$100 billion mark, indicating their growing role in climate and economic policy and has strong presence in major economies such as the European Union, United Kingdom, China, New Zealand and South Korea. Carbon Markets are also emerging in Japan, Vietnam, Thailand, Brazil and Indonesia. Hence, with India's own carbon market, a greater linkage between export competitiveness, supply chain participation and investor expectations could be established.

CCTS and its impact on stock markets

While the CCTS is mainly being viewed as a tool to shape environmental and industrial policies, it also has broad reaching impacts across the stock market. This is because, in present times, investors are increasingly looking at how companies are transitioning towards a carbon neutral economy while also analysing the risk policies and strategies of the companies towards climate risks. CCTS compliance and trading will indicate better preparedness of the company towards future climate regulations thereby strengthening investor confidence and enhancing market valuation.

Since, CCTS is leading to establishment of a carbon market where the CCTS can be traded actively, it will create opportunity for additional revenue stream for companies having met their emission targets.

Further, participation in the CCTS strengthens a company's Environmental, Social and Governance (ESG) credentials thereby making it more lucrative for domestic and international institutional investors.

Since, CCTS is a rewarding mechanism, there would be a constant lookout for improvising on efficiency and innovation. This would lead to enhanced investment in energy efficiency, renewable energy, green hydrogen, and cleaner technologies which would enable meeting carbon emission targets. Over time, this constant innovation will reduce operating costs thereby improving margins and long-term financial performance.

Hence, we can say that where CCTS is to strengthen India's resolve for a greener economy, in the process it would also encourages companies to become more competitive, innovative, sustainable, and resilient, thereby improvising there operational and financial performance which would enable them to improvise their stock valuations.

Hence, aim of CCTS is not to have immediate returns but rather change the way businesses make future investment decisions and how competitive they are in their sectors.

CCTS is mainly being viewed as a tool to shape environmental and industrial policies, it also has broad reaching impacts across the stock market:

- Strengthening investor confidence
- Enhancing market valuation.
- Additional revenue stream
- Attract domestic and international institutional investors
- Innovation at economies of scale over time

Carbon Market for Indian Public Sector

While CCTS is relevant for all corporate sector but it has a greater significance for the Public Sector Enterprises (PSEs). PSEs in India largely operate in carbon-intensive sectors such as power generation, oil and gas, coal, steel, mining, fertilizers, heavy engineering, and transportation and given their hard to abate inherent nature, account for a substantial share of the country's industrial energy consumption and emissions. Further, due to their scale, technological capabilities, and influence on supply chains, PSEs have a multiplier effect on the broader economy. Hence, it has been time and again acknowledged that they are central to India's decarbonisation journey.

For PSEs, the CCTS offers an opportunity to modernize operations, improve resource efficiency, and generate financial returns from sustainability initiatives. Investments in renewable energy, energy efficiency, green hydrogen, carbon capture technologies, circular economy practices, and digital energy management can reduce compliance costs while creating valuable carbon credits. Beyond commercial benefits, CPSEs have a strategic national responsibility. With socio-economic agenda, PSEs are expected to lead by example in implementing national priorities, including climate action and sustainable development. Hence, their active participation in the CCTS can demonstrate the commercial viability of low-carbon technologies, encourage wider industry adoption, stimulate innovation, and support the development of India's domestic carbon market while enhancing investor confidence, attracting climate finance, and reinforcing India's credibility in global climate negotiations.

CCTS provides PSEs with an opportunity to modernize operations, improve resource efficiency, and generate financial returns through carbon credits while investing in clean technologies. Beyond commercial gains, PSEs have a strategic responsibility to lead India's climate action by demonstrating the viability of low-carbon technologies, promoting wider industry adoption, attracting climate finance, strengthening investor confidence, and supporting the development of a robust domestic carbon market.

The first mover advantage

One of the most important messages emerging from the CCTS is that early action matters. According to publicly available reports on CCTS, the initial emissions-intensity reduction targets are relatively modest. However, these early targets are foundational and are likely to become more stringent over time as India progresses towards its climate goals. More importantly, it is important to look at the potential cost of inaction. Various market modelling suggests that companies that fail to decarbonize could face significant compliance costs under future carbon pricing scenarios. In the iron and steel sector, for example, a representative company could face potential financial implications exceeding INR 3,000 crore by 2030. In aluminium, the figure exceeds INR 1,100 crore, while refineries could face costs of approximately INR 272–278 crore. Even sectors traditionally viewed as less emissions-intensive, such as textiles and paper, could experience growing financial exposure if emissions remain unchecked. These figures should not be viewed as predictions. Rather, they illustrate an important principle: delaying decarbonization may become increasingly expensive.

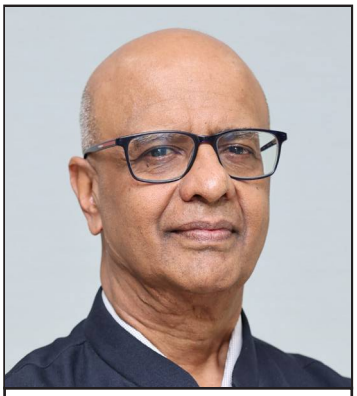
For PSEs these are particularly relevant. Many of the sectors currently covered under CCTS including refineries and petrochemicals have a significant PSE presence. However, even enterprises outside the scheme's initial compliance framework should view CCTS as a signal of the direction in which industrial policy is evolving.

CCTS underscores the importance of early decarbonisation. While the initial emission-intensity targets are modest, they are expected to become more stringent as India advances towards its climate goals. Delaying action could expose companies to significant future compliance costs under carbon pricing, particularly in carbon-intensive sectors such as steel, aluminium, and refining.

Hence, it is important to have the first mover advantage and develop systems aligning to CCTS and encash on the clear opportunities to enhance energy efficiency while reducing an organization's carbon footprint.

The Road Ahead

Today, CCTS is an emerging area having hurdles of lack of awareness, accuracy of data, institutional participants, dedicated regulator for monitoring, reporting and verification of data and participants but its potential and need cannot be challenged. The broader message is clear: carbon readiness is becoming a critical aspect of business readiness; developing inventories of GHG emissions, establishing data management systems for GHG emissions, increasing energy efficiency in operations, and embedding decarbonisation into the long-term business strategy of the enterprise – these are strategic priorities for the enterprise and not of a domain.



The initial targets may appear modest, but they establish the foundations of a much larger transition. The real significance of CCTS lies not only in the carbon credits it creates, but in the signals it sends. It signals that emissions will increasingly matter in business decisions. It signals that operational efficiency and carbon efficiency are becoming closely linked. And it signals that preparedness for a low-carbon economy may become an important determinant of long-term competitiveness. Hence, for businesses and PSEs alike, the question is no longer whether decarbonization will influence future operations. The more relevant question is how quickly organizations can adapt.

Those that begin preparing today through stronger emissions management, strategic investments and credible transition planning are likely to be better positioned for the opportunities and challenges that lie ahead.

The Carbon Credit Trading Scheme rewards early decarbonisation, strengthens competitiveness, and secures a sustainable future. Act Early. Decarbonise Today. Lead Tomorrow.

The Four-Step Path to a Financially Empowered India

Sashi Krishnan
Director
National Institute of Securities Market

A truly inclusive and resilient economy cannot exist without financially aware and empowered citizens. However, building such a society is not merely about disseminating information or running sporadic awareness drives. It requires a sequenced, structured approach - one that moves people progressively from financial education to financial literacy, then to financial inclusion, and ultimately towards financial wellbeing.

These four stages are distinct yet interconnected. Each step builds upon the previous one, creating a comprehensive ecosystem for sustainable financial empowerment.

1. Financial Education: The Foundation of Understanding

Financial education is the starting point - the process of imparting knowledge about financial concepts, products, and systems. It equips individuals with basic information about money management, saving, credit, insurance, and investments. At this stage, the focus is primarily on awareness and conceptual clarity. Citizens learn what interest rates mean, how compounding works, what mutual funds are, and why insurance is essential. It should result in people becoming aware of financial choices and terminology.

Given the sheer size of India's population and its diversity, if we want financial education to reach all our citizens, it would require co-opting schools and universities, doing workplace programs, public campaigns, and much more. Financial education must be made part of our school and college curricula. Unless we recognize that financial education is as important as math skills or language skills, we run the danger of an entire generation reaching adulthood without being adequately prepared to manage their money.

However, financial education alone is insufficient. While understanding what a Systematic Investment Plan is or why saving for retirement through the National Pension Scheme is important, this does not automatically help a person make sound financial decisions. Financial education merely enables one to move confidently to the next stage - financial literacy.

2. Financial Literacy: The Ability to Apply Knowledge

Financial literacy is when an individual moves from "knowing" to "doing". It represents the ability to use one's financial knowledge to make informed, effective decisions in a real-life context. A financially literate person can compare savings and investment options, budget effectively, understand risk-return trade-offs, and plan for long-term goals. This stage transforms information into competence.

Financial literacy helps build decision-making capabilities and practical financial skills. Through this, individuals will be able to assess products, manage cash flow, and avoid financial traps. Achieving this would require large-scale and targeted skill-based training, the use of digital tools, and community learning initiatives.

While literacy enables individuals to engage meaningfully with the financial system, many citizens remain outside it due to structural or socio-economic barriers. That's where the third stage – financial inclusion - comes in.

3. Financial Inclusion: The Bridge to Participation

Financial inclusion ensures that access to financial services and products, and the opportunity to use all available financial services, is universally accessible. It is about enabling participation - bringing every citizen, regardless of income, geography, or gender, into the formal financial fold. An inclusive system ensures access to banking, digital payments, securities market products, insurance, pensions, and credit on fair terms. Inclusion transforms literacy into empowerment by providing the tools to act on financial knowledge.

India has successfully democratized access to affordable and appropriate financial services with the implementation of the Jan Dhan Yojana, Pradhan Mantri Jan Jeevan Yojana, Atal Pension Yojana, and many such national-level schemes. This has enabled over ninety percent of Indians to actively use savings, credit, insurance, and investment products. Fintech innovations like UPI, extensive agent networks, and simplified KYC norms have also supported financial inclusion.

But inclusion is not the destination - it is the means to a higher goal: financial wellbeing.

4. Financial Wellbeing: The Ultimate Goal

Financial wellbeing is the state in which individuals can meet their financial obligations comfortably, feel secure about their financial future, and have the freedom to make choices that improve their quality of life. It reflects stability, security, and satisfaction. Financial wellbeing is not just about wealth creation—it is about peace of mind and resilience to financial shocks.

We must enable citizens to lead financially secure and fulfilling lives; building long-term savings through prudent risk management and being retirement-ready are two of many skills that can help them lead lives of reduced stress. This would require equipping our population with the ability to plan their finances holistically. Therefore, behavioural nudges and long-term investor education programs that integrate the emotional, psychological, and social aspects of money will be necessary.

The Sequential Logic

The four stages form a natural progression: education builds awareness, literacy builds capability, inclusion builds access, and wellbeing builds sustainability. Skipping a step in this progression would lead to fragile outcomes. Financial inclusion without literacy may cause misuse of credit. Education without inclusion may lead to frustration. And literacy without wellbeing may result in anxiety despite knowledge. Therefore, policymakers, regulators, and institutions engaged in investor education need to design programs that consciously move citizens through this learning–using–thriving continuum.

In India, financial inclusion has ensured that every Indian has access to, and can effectively use, the affordable and reliable financial services they require. These services include payments, savings, credit, and insurance. India has a population of over 145 crores, of which the population over 15 years is around 100 crores. Almost 90% of them now have a bank account. The Jan Dhan Yojana has added almost 55 crore accounts. Similarly, the Pradhan Mantri Suraksha Bima Yojana covers about 45 crore individuals, and the Pradhan Mantri Jeevan Jyoti Bima Yojana covers about 21 crore individuals. Over 9 crore individuals are covered by the Atal Pension Yojana and NPS. There are 21 crore demat accounts and over 25 crore Mutual Fund folios.

But we need to look beyond this narrow understanding of financial inclusion because even though most Indians have bank accounts, many find them of little value. About 20% of the Jan Dhan accounts are not operational. Even though the RBI's Financial Inclusion Index has risen from 60% in 2023 to 64.2% in 2024, an NCFE study indicates that only 27% of the Indian population is financially literate. The SEBI Investor Survey 2025 reveals that 37% of the households surveyed were not even aware of at least one securities market product. Equally concerning is the survey finding that only 9.5% of households surveyed had invested in a secondary market product.

This is why financial education and financial literacy are important. While we understand financial literacy as the ability to use financial skills to make informed money-related decisions, it needs to be contextually relevant. The average Indian has limited resources and skills to appreciate the complexities of financial dealings relating to his or her personal finances. The goal has to be to convert India from being a nation of savers to a nation of investors. This can be achieved only by making every Indian financially literate. We need to teach them how to prepare a household budget and about the power of compounding, the risks from inflation, etc. We need to help them prioritize personal financial goals and allocate money to different asset classes.

For Bharat, budgeting is about housing, education, food, and the cost of a bus ticket. A personal financial goal is about their kids' education, owning a house, and retirement. Savings is about operating their Jan Dhan accounts. Investment is about SIPs, Mahila Samman Savings Certificates, and Atal Pension Yojana. Insurance is about Jeevan Jyoti Bima Yojana, Suraksha Bima Yojana, and Jan Arogya Yojana.

Conclusion

A financially savvy society cannot be built overnight. It evolves through a deliberate, sequenced process that begins with education, matures into literacy, expands through inclusion, and culminates in wellbeing.

India's regulatory ecosystem - through initiatives of SEBI, RBI, IRDAI, and PFRDA - is well-positioned to align all financial literacy and investor education efforts to this logical progression. Institutions engaged in investor education, like NISM, have also stepped up their efforts.

When every citizen is financially educated, literate, and included, financial well-being becomes not just an individual aspiration but a cornerstone of national economic resilience.

India Diffuses AI Faster Than Any Nation. The Next Phase Demands Building Sovereign Capabilities.

India already leads the world in AI talent diffusion and workplace adoption, yet the foundational layers it runs on are still largely owned abroad. The next phase demands the state to set new missions and absorb risk, and the private sector and startups to build the capabilities India must own.

India is no longer a follower in the artificial intelligence transition. By two measures that decide whether a country can build a working AI economy, the breadth of its talent and the depth of its adoption, India already leads the world. The harder task begins now. India has to own the foundational layers that the future of machine intelligence is built upon, and it has to build these capabilities before dependence is locked in.

India Diffuses AI Faster Than Most Countries

The Indian AI advantage is growing, and this is happening organically and at world-leading velocity. It was built through talent diffusion at a scale no other economy has matched. The Stanford AI Index 2026 places India first in the world in relative AI skill penetration, with AI skills appearing on Indian professional profiles at close to three times the global average. India ranks second only to the United States in the number of AI authors and inventors. India has GitHub's largest developer community, and is in the top three for AI projects. Leading organizations like AI4Bharat drive the country's open-source AI ecosystem, building high-quality language models, localised voice assistants, and tools tailored for Indic languages and public health.

This breadth has been decades in the making, drawn from a large engineering education base, working command of English, and a national fluency with digital public infrastructure.

The most striking figure belongs to Indian women. Their relative AI skill penetration reached 1.9 in 2025, up from 1.61 a year earlier, the highest rate recorded for any country. That places them ahead of women in the United States at 1.71, Canada at 0.97 and the United Kingdom at 0.90, the very economies long treated as the frontier of technology talent.

Adoption confirms the same lead from the demand side. India tops every surveyed market in everyday workplace AI use, with about 41% of employees using these tools almost daily. Indian women use them more often than Indian men, at 44% against 40%. A country that learns a general-purpose technology this fast, and applies it this widely, holds a head start that capital or policy alone cannot manufacture.

The World Is Investing in Indian AI Adoption

Global capital has already bought into Indian AI adoption, and is investing in the infrastructure for how local inference is going to scale. Google is investing USD 15 billion in an AI hub at Visakhapatnam between 2026 and 2030, a gigawatt-scale data centre campus built with Adani and Airtel. Microsoft has committed USD 17.5 billion to cloud and AI infrastructure, skilling and operations in India across 2026 to 2029. Counted with the commitments of Amazon and others, United States technology majors have announced more than USD 68 billion of AI infrastructure spending in India over five years. India's own data centre market is forecast to cross USD 100 billion in value by the end of the decade, and state governments are competing hard to win these projects.

This is a vote of confidence, but it carries a warning as well. The compute, the campuses, and the connectivity will sit on Indian soil. The chips that process the computing, the models that run on them, and the value that compounds inside those models, will largely belong to others. India is fast becoming the place where the world hosts its artificial intelligence, without yet owning the value of what is hosted.

India's Service Giants Are Becoming The World's AI Deployment Engine

The same pattern repeats one layer higher, among the firms that carry AI into global enterprises. In December 2025 Microsoft named Cognizant, Infosys, TCS and Wipro as Frontier Firm partners, with the four together deploying more than 200,000 Copilot licences. Infosys has signed parallel collaborations with OpenAI, built around the Codex models and its Topaz Fabric agent suite, and with Anthropic for work in regulated industries. TCS now runs partnerships across Anthropic, OpenAI and Mistral, and is putting frontier models to work inside businesses such as Diligenta, its United Kingdom life and pensions arm that serves 22 million customers.

This delivery capacity rests on a base no competitor can replicate. India hosts 2,117 Global Capability Centres employing 2.36 million professionals, close to half of every such centre in the world, and it is now the single largest AI hiring market on the planet. More than 500 of the Forbes Global 2000 run a capability centre in the country. India has converted its engineering depth into the world's primary channel for putting AI to work.

Indian Startups Are Building The Applied Edge

The most original Indian work is emerging in the vertical and embedded niches that large general-purpose models do not serve today. Smallest.ai, based in Bengaluru, builds foundational voice models and already handles enterprise voice workloads for customers including Paytm and RingCentral. H2LooP builds hardware-aware AI for safety-critical embedded systems across automotive, aerospace, defence and semiconductors, where on-edge reliability and control over intellectual property matter far more than raw model size. Unbox Robotics applies swarm-intelligence AI to warehouse sortation as a physical AI innovator, has been profitable since 2024, and counts Inditex, DTDC, and Mondial Relay among its clients across India, Europe, and the United States.

These companies share one defining trait. They compete on domain depth and on owning the model that solves a specific problem, rather than on wrapping around a borrowed one. They also build for the world rather than for India alone, which is the standard the country now has to set across its AI economy. This is the layer where Indian ownership compounds, and it is the layer India must multiply.

Borrowed Foundations Are A Risk India Must Mitigate

Dependence on technology controlled elsewhere stays invisible until the moment it is triggered. The world saw a clear illustration recently when access to two frontier AI models was abruptly restricted under a government directive. Technology, and the supply chains beneath it, are now instruments of statecraft, switched on the moment trade or diplomatic tensions arise.

With AI, the dependency runs deeper than it ever did with chips or rare earths. It sits in the layer where economic value, talent, security infrastructure, and core intellectual property will compound for a generation. A nation that rents intelligence cedes the ground on which its future industries, defence systems, public utilities, and innovation will stand.

India has the demand, the talent, and the deployment scale already in hand. Policy implemented on a mission intensity must set the runway for this new priority.

Sovereign Capability Now Needs The State and Private Sector To Collaborate

Against more than USD 68 billion of foreign AI infrastructure commitment, India's flagship programme, the IndiaAI Mission, is funded at Rs 10,372 crore, close to USD 1.25 billion. The mission has achieved a great deal with that sum, but the asymmetry is stark.

National compute has scaled past 38,000 GPUs, against a target of 100,000 by the end of 2026, and is offered to startups and researchers at rates well below the market. It has selected over 20 startups to build indigenous foundation models, and Sarvam has already released open-source models of 30 billion and 105 billion parameters. Bhashini now delivers real-time translation across all 22 scheduled languages and reaches citizens at population scale.

The next phase demands a new posture from the state. Since Independence, India has run an under-invested and uncompetitive public-sector-led model that never built an indigenous innovation ecosystem at the scale a USD 4 trillion economy now demands. For decades, policy has held back from directing grant capital, low-interest credit, and government demand toward private builders. That reluctance is the habit India can no longer afford.

The correction is not to abandon the sovereign goal but to widen who delivers it. India has proved this new model works. Aadhaar succeeded because the state fixed a clear mission and brought in private capability to execute it, and the same logic now applies to AI.

The state should act as mission setter, risk absorber, and anchor customer, name private enterprises as National Champions, and use public procurement to grow a dense ecosystem of private innovators and startups beneath the PSUs. Programmes such as RDI and IndiaAI need to draw far more qualified talent from industry, in the way the UID effort did across the last decade. They should be measured on the efficiency of transmission and enrolment, and run by accountable professional asset allocators rather than government committees whose membership turns over every quarter.

India has built the broadest applied AI talent base in the world and made itself the place where global AI is deployed, tested, and put to work. The decade ahead decides whether it also owns the foundations beneath that work. The talent has answered. The capital has arrived. Sovereign policy execution must now keep pace.

Cycles, Corrections and Comebacks

Sankaran Naren
Executive Director & Chief Investment Officer
ICICI Prudential Asset Management Co.Ltd.

One of the biggest misconceptions in investing is the belief that markets move in a straight line. Markets rise, decline, recover and then repeat the process. Optimism eventually gives way to caution, excessive pessimism creates opportunities, and periods of exuberance are often followed by phases of correction. Understanding this rhythm may not enable investors to predict every turning point, but it can significantly improve the quality of decision-making over long periods.

Howard Marks in his book Mastering the Market Cycle, observes that cycles are inevitable and understanding them is of immense importance. Yet, he also cautions that cycles cannot be mastered with precision. No investor consistently identifies market tops and bottoms every time. What an understanding of cycles effectively offers is a perspective. It helps investors recognise extremes and aids in ensuring an investor does not become a prisoner of any prevailing sentiment.

Cycles Matter, But They Are Not Universal

While cycles are powerful, they are not the answer to everything. There will be periods when structural shifts reshape industries and alter conventional assumptions. One of the best examples of this is the evolution of the American technology sector. Over the last decade, companies such as Apple, Microsoft, Alphabet and Nvidia have been successful in creating enormous value. Traditional valuation frameworks have frequently struggled to explain the scale of wealth creation these companies have achieved because these businesses have benefited from structural changes in the way people live and work.

This raises an important question. Are these businesses cyclical or structural? The answer lies in recognising that both forces can coexist. Technology companies experience cyclical ups and downs, but the underlying trends driving them possess structural characteristics. Smartphones, cloud computing and artificial intelligence are no longer optional conveniences, as they have become deeply integrated into daily life. Their widespread adoption has changed the way economies function.

However, structural trends should not be confused with the absence of cycles. Every period of rapid growth carries the risk of excessive optimism. Investor optimism can sometimes run ahead of fundamentals, creating conditions for future corrections. Distinguishing between long-term structural change and short-term exuberance therefore becomes essential.

Structural Change Happens When Customer Needs Change

History offers several examples of businesses that failed because they became too attached to products and ignored the changing customer preferences. One of the examples of this phenomenon is the transition from scooters to motorcycles. Consumers increasingly sought better performance, fuel efficiency and modern aesthetics. Companies that focused only on preserving existing products failed to appreciate this broader shift in customer expectations.

A similar transformation occurred in telecommunications. Traditional telephone companies viewed themselves as providers of landline services. Consumers, however, valued convenience, portability and accessibility. Mobile phones fulfilled those needs and fundamentally altered the telecom industry. Both these examples demonstrate an important principle, which is, markets are influenced not only by cycles, but also by structural changes arising from evolving consumer behaviour. Investors need to recognise this difference because structural shifts can render conventional assumptions obsolete.

Different Asset Classes Follow Different Cycles

Once the importance of cycles is understood, another reality becomes apparent. Different asset classes move through different phases at different times. Historically, equities, precious metals and real estate rarely peak together.

In case of Indian equities, the asset class experienced strong phases between 2003 and 2007, 2013 and 2017, and once more in the post-pandemic period. Each phase was driven by a different set of factors. The 2003-2007 phase benefited from strong economic growth and rising corporate earnings, 2013-2017 phase was aided by low interest rates and global liquidity and the post pandemic phase occurred when monetary stimulus, healthy profitability and rising retail participation coincided.

When it comes to precious metals like gold and silver, they have followed entirely different trajectories. Their strongest periods often occurred when investors sought protection against uncertainty or inflation. Real estate as an asset class too has experienced its own cycles. The years between 2003 and 2013 represented a favourable phase. Conditions became difficult during the subsequent period, before improving again after 2020.

When looked at these asset classes together, it is evident that asset classes do not move in tandem. Their cycles differ in timing, duration and intensity.

Why Asset Allocation Matters

If different assets peak at different times, concentrating on any one asset class becomes risky. The objective of investing, therefore, is not merely to identify winners but to allocate capital across various asset classes. Opportunities often emerge when certain asset classes become unpopular and consequently valuations become attractive. On the other hand, caution is warranted when excessive optimism drives valuations far above historical averages.

For example: Equities as an asset class was attractive in the early 2000s. As valuations became stretched by 2007, gold and real estate appeared to be relatively more attractive. Following the global financial crisis which ensued in 2008, the relative attractiveness shifted again towards equity. Similarly, during the sharp correction triggered by the pandemic in 2020, equities once again offered compelling opportunities.

Cycles Operate Within Sectors Too

The principle of cycles extends beyond asset classes. Industries themselves experience periods of expansion and contraction. Telecom, airlines, metals and power have all undergone repeated cycles. When it comes to sectors, it is often seen that high profitability attracts capital which encourages new entrants. This leads to excessive investment which eventually creates overcapacity and compresses returns. As a result, weak players exit, bankruptcies increase and capital finally exits the sector. Over time, supply and demand regain equilibrium, setting the stage for a gradual recovery.

This process repeats across industries and demonstrates that cycles are driven not merely by economics but also by human behaviour. Excessive optimism often sows the seeds of future disappointment.

When Correction Becomes Inevitable

Every major correction has one common feature which is excess. When valuations become detached from reality and optimism becomes widespread, markets become vulnerable. Excessive enthusiasm often creates the illusion that risks have receded or disappeared. History repeatedly shows that such periods eventually end in corrections. However, the exact timing of a correction is impossible to predict. Yet periods characterised by extraordinary gains and widespread complacency should always invite caution.

Why Comebacks Matter More Than Corrections

Although asset class corrections receive enormous attention, especially when it comes to equities, recoveries are equally important if not more. Every correction creates opportunities. Assets abandoned during periods of pessimism often become tomorrow's winners. Market history demonstrates that extreme optimism and extreme pessimism are both temporary states. Cycles ensure that neither lasts forever. Investors who remain anchored to fundamentals during difficult periods are often rewarded when sentiment normalises. Therefore, patience and discipline become critical virtues.

The Current Environment Calls for Moderation

One of the striking characteristics of the present environment is that very few asset classes appear to be at the bottom of their cycles. Equities, gold, silver and real estate have all delivered strong returns in recent years. Such conditions suggest that aggressive positioning is any of these asset classes may not be prudent. When opportunities are limited, balance becomes more valuable than conviction.

The Enduring Lesson

My three decades in markets has taught that cycles cannot be ignored even though they cannot be predicted with precision. Markets will continue to experience booms, corrections, and recoveries. Technologies will evolve, sectors will rise and decline, and investor emotions will oscillate between greed and fear.

Through all these changes, cycles will remain inevitable. Understanding them will not necessarily eliminate mistakes, but it can improve the odds of making better decisions over one's investing duration. This is important because better decisions compounded over time often matter more than accurate predictions.

The Rise of Retail Investors in Indian Equities: Opportunities and Challenges

Dhiraj Relli
Managing Director and Chief Executive Officer
HDFC Securities Ltd.

India's capital market has, over the last six years, undergone a change in character that few would have predicted at the start of the decade. What was once a market dominated by institutional flows and a thin, urban sliver of retail participants has become one of the most broad-based retail investing stories anywhere in the world. Demat accounts have grown nearly six-fold since March 2020, mutual fund folios have crossed 27.6 crore, and individual investors now own a bigger share of India's listed companies than at any point in over two decades. The emergence of the retail investor is no longer a cyclical phenomenon driven by buoyant markets; it represents a fundamental shift in India's savings and investment landscape.

The Scale of the Shift

The headline numbers tell their own story. Taken together, the demat account base across CDSL and NSDL India now stands at close to 23 crore, up from roughly 4 crore in March 2020. NSE's unique registered investor base crossed 12.2 crore in October 2025, and total investor accounts (unique client codes, since many investors hold accounts with more than one broker) crossed 24 crore in the same period.

The mutual fund industry tells a complementary story. Industry AUM stood at Rs. 81.58 lakh crore in May 2026, with total folios at 27.66 crore. Systematic Investment Plans (SIPs) have become the backbone of retail participation: monthly SIP inflows have stayed above Rs. 30,000 crore for three consecutive months through May 2026, an all-time high of Rs. 32,087 crore was recorded in March 2026, and SIP assets of Rs. 17.12 lakh crore now account for nearly 21% of total industry AUM. Equity mutual fund schemes have recorded net inflows every single month since March 2021, a streak of over five years through periods of considerable market volatility.

Metric	Then	Now	Period
Demat accounts (CDSL + NSDL)	~4.0 crore (Mar 2020)	~22.9 crore (May 2026)	6 years
NSE unique registered investors	3.6 crore (Mar 2020)	12.2 crore+ (Oct 2025)	5.5 years
Mutual fund folios	8.97 crore (Mar 2020)	27.66 crore (May 2026)	6 years
Mutual fund industry AUM	Rs. 22.3 lakh crore (Mar 2020)	Rs. 81.58 lakh crore (May 2026)	6 years
Monthly SIP contribution	Rs. 8,641 crore (Mar 2020)	Rs. 30,954 crore (May 2026)	6 years
Individual ownership of NSE market cap	10.9% (2014)	18.75% (Sep 2025, 22-yr high)	11 years

Sources: HDFC Securities, Industry Reports

The growth is remarkable not merely because of the numbers, but because of the changing profile of investors.

A significant proportion of new investors now come from Tier-II, Tier-III, and smaller towns. Women investors are participating in greater numbers, while younger investors are beginning their wealth creation journey much earlier than previous generations. Digital onboarding, paperless KYC, affordable investing options, and widespread smartphone penetration have substantially lowered entry barriers.

India's Equity Culture is Maturing

Every developed economy has experienced a phase where households gradually shifted from physical assets to productive financial assets. India appears to be entering that phase. This transition benefits multiple stakeholders. For households, equities offer an opportunity to participate in India's long-term growth story. For companies, a wider retail investor base improves access to domestic capital. For the economy, deeper capital markets reduce dependence on foreign portfolio flows and strengthen financial resilience.

Importantly, domestic investors have increasingly emerged as a stabilising force during periods of global uncertainty.

Consistent SIP inflows and long-term investing behaviour have provided continuity even when foreign institutional flows have turned volatile. This reflects the growing maturity of Indian investors and the increasing acceptance of disciplined investing as a wealth creation strategy.

The Opportunity

Deeper, more resilient domestic capital
The most consequential opportunity is structural: India's capital market is becoming less dependent on foreign capital for its stability. Individual investors, directly and through mutual funds, now own 18.75% of NSE-listed companies by value (around Rs. 83–84 lakh crore), a 22-year high. Over the same period, FPI ownership has fallen to 16.9%, its lowest level in over 15 years, as foreign investors turned net sellers through much of 2025. Domestic mutual funds have posted 18 consecutive quarters of positive inflows. This means Indian markets absorb foreign selling with far less volatility than they once did – a genuine structural maturing of the market, and one that gives Indian corporates a more stable base of long-term capital for growth.

Democratisation beyond the metros
Retail growth is no longer confined to Mumbai and Delhi. NSE data shows Maharashtra still leads with roughly 4 crore investor accounts (17% of the national total), followed by Uttar Pradesh, Gujarat, West Bengal, and Rajasthan. Smaller cities and towns (the so-called 'B30' markets) are now meaningful contributors to new account growth, aided by vernacular apps, simplified onboarding, and expanding broker and distributor networks. One in four investors today is a woman, a marked shift from a decade ago. For a full-service, distribution-led franchise, this is precisely where the next leg of growth in accounts, advisory relationships, and product cross-sell will come from.

A widening product shelf and capital formation engine
A larger, more aware investor base has allowed a much wider set of products – index funds, factor and thematic ETFs, SIFs, REITs, and InvITs – to find genuine retail demand rather than remaining institutional curiosities. It has also strengthened the primary market: mainboard IPOs worth tens of thousands of crores now regularly find anchor and retail demand within days, giving Indian companies a deep, reliable domestic route to raise growth capital, a channel that used to lean far more heavily on foreign anchor investors.

A structural, not cyclical, savings shift
Perhaps the most durable opportunity is behavioural. SIP flows have proven strikingly sticky through volatile phases, including the geopolitical and currency turbulence of early 2026, suggesting that a meaningful share of India's household savings pool has now structurally reallocated from physical assets and low-yielding deposits toward market-linked instruments. That reallocation, still in its early stages relative to more mature markets, represents a multi-decade tailwind for wealth managers, asset managers, and broking franchises alike.

The Challenges

Speculative losses remain large
The most sobering data point in this entire story comes from SEBI's own research. Individual traders in the equity derivatives (F&O) segment posted aggregate net losses of Rs. 1.05–1.06 lakh crore in FY25 alone, up 41% from Rs. 74,812 crore in FY24, and roughly 91% of individual traders lost money, a proportion that has stayed broadly unchanged across years of study. Over FY22–FY24, cumulative losses exceeded Rs. 1.8 lakh crore, with an average loss of around Rs. 2 lakh per trader.

Engagement is shallow for a meaningful minority
Growth in accounts has not always translated into sustained engagement. The SIP stoppage ratio (the proportion of SIPs discontinued relative to those newly registered) crossed 100% in both March and April 2026, meaning more SIP accounts closed than opened in those months, even as the rupee value of contributions stayed near record highs. Retail participation in the cash equity market has also cooled: unique retail traders active in the cash segment fell from 3.81 crore in 2024 to 3.51 crore in 2025, and retail's share of cash market turnover slipped to 33.6%.

A persistent advice and literacy gap
Much of the recent growth has been self-directed, occurring through apps rather than through an advisor relationship. That works well in a rising market; it is untested at scale through a prolonged drawdown. Anecdotal and survey evidence consistently points to weak understanding of risk, diversification, and product suitability among large segments of new investors – the same investors most exposed to the derivatives losses described above. The industry has not yet built distribution and advisory capacity at the pace at which new investors have arrived.

The Next Phase: From Participation to Preparedness
The task ahead for regulators, exchanges, and market intermediaries is not to slow retail participation – that would be neither desirable nor achievable – but to make it safer and more durable. A few priorities stand out:

- Suitability over accessibility: Distributors and platforms need to be as good at steering unsuitable investors away from complex products as they are at onboarding new ones. Risk-based nudges and product gating for first-time derivatives traders deserve continued regulatory attention.
- Advice at scale: Technology-enabled, low-cost advisory (not just execution) needs to reach the first-time investors that broking platforms have so successfully acquired. This is where full-service franchises with a research and RM-led model have a structural advantage over pure execution platforms.
- Investor education tied to actual behaviour: Generic literacy campaigns matter less than targeted interventions at the moments of highest risk: a first F&O trade, a market correction, a viral social media tip.

Looking Ahead

India's retail investing journey is still in its early stages. Despite the impressive growth in investor accounts, equity ownership remains modest relative to India's population and compared with many developed markets. This indicates substantial headroom for future expansion.

The next decade is likely to witness greater adoption of professionally managed investment solutions, increasing participation from smaller cities, wider use of digital advisory platforms, and deeper integration of financial planning into household decision-making.

The rise of retail investors is one of the defining characteristics of India's evolving financial ecosystem. It reflects growing confidence in the country's economic prospects, increasing financial inclusion, and the democratisation of wealth-creation opportunities. As participation broadens, the emphasis must gradually shift from simply investing to investing with purpose, discipline, and perspective.

How insurance capital anchors India's growth story

Anup Bagchi
Managing Director & Chief Executive Officer
ICICI Prudential Life Insurance Co.Ltd.

India's economic expansion continues at a healthy pace, with GDP growth projected at a robust 6.6% for FY 2027. As we march toward Viksit Bharat 2047, corporate leaders and policymakers face a fundamental question: What structural engine will sustain and secure this growth during periods of inevitable global volatility? This is where insurance companies play a critical role.

As insurance companies, we manage more than just policy underwriting; we handle a massive, highly strategic pool of patient capital. Indian life insurance sector's Assets Under Management (AUM) have scaled to a monumental ₹67.8 trillion as on March 2026. Life insurance sector acts as a vital custodian of long-term domestic savings, making it uniquely capable of backing the structural transitions identified in the note. Our capital pool is insulated from short-term market volatility, delivering the exact patient, long-term funding required to fuel India's capital expenditure expansion.

Patient Capital in an Impatient Market

The global financial architecture is prone to bouts of intense volatility. When geopolitical shocks, sudden inflationary pressures, or banking liquidity crises hit the headlines, markets rely on deep pools of patient capital to prevent outright panic. While central banks act as lenders of last resort, insurance companies serve as the quiet, structural anchors of the financial system.

This correlation between insurance capital and macroeconomic resilience is visible worldwide. In mature financial ecosystems, the insurance sector acts as the ultimate shock absorber. For instance, across Europe, insurers operating under the Solvency II framework manage over €10 trillion in assets, serving as the bedrock of regional sovereign bond markets during Eurozone credit cycles. Similarly, in the United States, the life insurance sector holds roughly $8.5 trillion in long-term capital, anchoring corporate bond stability and public works. Our domestic market is mirroring this global blueprint. We are transitioning from a system vulnerable to the flight of foreign capital to one anchored by deep, resilient domestic institutional reserves.

Managing more than $42 trillion in global assets, the insurance sector plays a defining role in stabilizing both equity and debt capital markets. This structural reality allows insurers to practice rigid Asset-Liability Management (ALM). Because they do not need immediate liquidity to satisfy daily redemptions, they can adopt a "buy-and-hold" strategy. When market panic triggers a mass sell-off, insurers act as counter-cyclical buyers. They can absorb temporary paper losses and hold assets until maturity or market recovery, effectively dampening extreme price swings.

Debt Capital Markets: Financing Nation-Building

Debt markets serve as the natural home for insurance capital, routinely absorbing 50% to 70% of an insurer's total balance sheet. This massive concentration creates a symbiotic relationship between corporate/sovereign issuers and the insurance sector.

- Insulating Sovereign Debt: By acting as continuous, large-scale institutional buyers of Government Securities (G-Secs), domestic insurers absorb national duration risks. As per the quarterly report on public debt management published by the Department of Economic Affairs in December 2025, insurance companies constitute 25.89% of the total outstanding G-Secs issued by RBI. This immense buying depth shields our sovereign yield curve from sharp spikes, lowering the overall borrowing costs for the government.
- Unlocking Long-Term Project Finance: Traditional banking models face systemic asset-liability mismatches when funding long-gestation infrastructure. As insurers, our multi-decade horizons make us the natural solution. Backed by proactive regulatory reforms, we are expanding our presence in long-term corporate debt and Infrastructure Investment Trusts (InVITs)—driving seamless capital deployment into national highways, green energy initiatives, and core public utilities.

Domestic Equity Markets: Powering Wealth Creation

As long-term institutional investors, we channel an enormous pool of household savings into productive financial assets and provide stability to markets. A significant share of this corpus, particularly from unit-linked insurance plans (ULIPs) and the equity-linked components of traditional policies, finds its way into listed stocks. Unlike The Employees' Provident Fund Organisation (EPFO) which operates under rigid statutory restrictions that limit its equity exposure to ETFs and cap it at 15%, life insurance companies operate with greater flexibility under broader regulatory frameworks, allowing them to channelise voluntary savings across a diverse spectrum of market-linked instruments. Through products like Unit Linked Insurance Plans (ULIPs), insurance firms can dynamically allocate a portion of policyholder's savings into equities based on individual risk appetites. While the EPFO prioritises capital preservation through a debt-heavy, conservative mandate for compulsory savings, insurance companies capitalise on equity markets to generate inflation-beating returns for discretionary long-term investors.

- Driving Liquidity and Market Depth: By continuously deploying assets into equities, insurers add liquidity to the market. Higher liquidity narrows bid-ask spreads, improves price discovery, and makes the market more attractive to other categories of investors, including retail participants. This liquidity effect is especially pronounced in mid-cap and small-cap segments where insurer participation can meaningfully alter trading volumes.
- Anchoring Primary Markets: Increased participation of insurance companies in IPOs and primary markets signals confidence to retail investors, helps companies raise capital more efficiently, and helps the markets in fair price discovery. Given our long investment horizons and large ticket sizes, we absorb substantial portions of large IPOs, which has been particularly visible in recent listings.
- Strengthening Corporate Governance: As large shareholders, we engage with management teams of different corporates on issues related to reporting transparency, governance standards, and long-term value creation. We also exercise voting rights at AGMs, influencing decisions on executive compensation, mergers, and capital allocation. This active ownership role contributes to better governance standards across listed companies, indirectly supporting long-term market health.

Conclusion

The insurance sector is far more than a mechanism for pooling risk; it is a fundamental driver of global financial resilience. As global economic landscapes become increasingly complex and interconnected, the steady, non-speculative capital of the insurance industry will remain essential to preserving systemic market stability.

Our industry's ultimate goal remains aligned with the national agenda: achieving "Insurance for All by 2047". As we expand insurance penetration into every tier-2 and tier-3 city across India, our collective asset pool will grow exponentially.

Our responsibility is clear. We must continue to manage this historic pool of capital with absolute fiduciary discipline. By maintaining a robust, risk-managed bridge between policyholder savings and national development projects, the insurance industry will remain the defining anchor of financial stability, safeguarding India's economic sovereignty for generations to come.

From Listing Event to Growth Engine: India's IPO Market Comes of Age

Alpesh Shah
Managing Director & Senior Partner
Boston Consulting Group (India) Pvt.Ltd.,The

In October 2024, Hyundai Motor India raised $3.3 billion in what became the largest IPO in Indian history and the second-largest anywhere in the world that year. It was a headline grabbing moment. But it also obscured something more important: by Indian standards, the headline was almost becoming and expectation.

India ended 2025 with 373 IPOs – 103 mainboard and 270 SME issues – collectively mobilising ₹1.95 lakh crore. That same year, primary market fundraising in India accounted for nearly 49 percent of private capital raised, compared to just 9 percent in the United States and 13 percent in Europe. India's public markets have become a primary, not secondary, channel for corporate financing.

This is not a story about a hot market. It is a story about the quiet, durable maturation of an entire financial ecosystem, one that has been building for two decades and is only now fully visible.

> India's primary market fundraising in 2025 accounted for nearly 49% of private capital raised – vs. 9% in the US and 13% in Europe. Public markets are no longer a last resort. They are the engine.

From Episodic to Structural: Two Decades in Review

Cast your mind back to India's IPO landscape of the early 2000s: activity was sporadic, sector-concentrated, and sentiment-driven. In 2015, hailed as a recovery year, just 21 companies listed, raising ₹13,600 crore, the highest in five years.

Contrast that with 2024. The NSE alone facilitated 268 IPOs raising ₹1.67 lakh crore, surpassing Japan, Hong Kong, and Shanghai exchanges combined by deal count. By FY25, despite global IPO volumes falling 10 percent year-on-year, India recorded 80 mainboard IPOs — its highest ever — raising ₹1.63 lakh crore. The NSE edged ahead of NASDAQ as the leading exchange globally by equity capital raised.

What makes this remarkable is not scale alone, but resilience. India's IPO market has continued its upward trajectory, through: demonetisation, a global pandemic, geopolitical shocks, and a rate cycle. The market has structurally decoupled from cyclical noise. Issuance is no longer a bull-market phenomenon. That is a coming-of-age moment.

Who Is Coming to Market Has Changed

Perhaps the most underappreciated shift is not in volumes but in issuer profile. For much of the 2000s, India's IPO market was the domain of established conglomerates, PSUs, and family-owned businesses seeking founder liquidity. Today, that picture has dramatically shifted. Public markets are increasingly the chosen path for new-generation firms, not their endgame, but their accelerant.

The data below shows this shift with companies less than 20 years vintage accounting for nearly 75% af all listings since 2010

	% Companies listing < 20 Years Old
2010–14	79%
2014–18	75%
2018–22	68%
2022–25	72%

Source: BSE/NSE company filings; BCG analysis

Sectoral breadth has widened equally. Technology companies led FY25 listing day gains at an average of 43 percent. But the cohort spans automotive, industrials, green energy, healthcare, and financial services. Seven of the twelve start-ups that went public by November 2024 were technology firms, making India the only major market to record consistent growth in tech listings that year, as China's listings fell sharply and the US saw a modest 22 venture backed tech IPOs.

The democratisation of size is equally notable. Around three-quarters of recent IPOs fall below ₹2,000 crore in market cap. The SME platform, once a sideshow, listed 243 companies in 2024, a 36 percent year-on-year increase.

Average mainboard issue sizes have meanwhile climbed from ₹867 crore in 2023 to over ₹1,700 crore in 2024.

India's IPO market now serves companies across stage, sector, and scale. That breadth is the hallmark of a mature market.

A Demand Revolution

Supply has scaled steadily. Demand has shifted more abruptly.

For much of the 2010s, subscription levels were healthy but disciplined. That changed decisively after 2020. The post-COVID era unleashed a new wave of retail participation, powered by mobile-first trading platforms and rising financial literacy. Monthly SIP inflows into mutual funds have sustained records, giving domestic institutions a perpetual deployment mandate. By 2025, mutual funds and insurance companies had become the backbone of IPO demand — providing reliable absorption capacity that no longer requires substantial global participation.

The result was a step-change in subscription intensity. Median subscription multiples, which had remained in the mid-single digits for most of the 2010s, surged to approximately 38x in the 2022–25 period, with average multiples exceeding 80x.

> Median subscription multiples surged to approximately 38x in the 2022–25 period, with average multiples exceeding 80x

Investor demand now consistently and substantially outstrips IPO supply, with broad-based participation and frequent extreme over subscription events, underscoring India's evolution into a go-to market for equity issuance. The depth of domestic capital is no longer a constraint. It has become a competitive advantage.

Performance: The Market is not Indiscriminate, it Rewards Quality

Strong subscription does not automatically translate into strong performance, and this is where the story becomes more instructive.

The dispersion of post-listing returns in India is wide. Top-quartile IPOs have consistently delivered substantial outperformance compared to the Nifty, over one and two-year periods; while bottom-quartile companies have underperformed by comparable magnitudes. The spread between winners and laggards can exceed 100 percentage points in a given vintage. Even at the median, Indian IPOs have historically underperformed the broader index over 12–24 months — a pattern common across global markets, but particularly pronounced in a market as diverse as India's.

The message is simple but important: India's IPO market offers genuine opportunity, but it is not indiscriminate. High subscription multiples on listing day are not a leading indicator of long-term performance. Chasing them is speculation; screening for fundamentals is investing.

> India's IPO market offers genuine opportunity, but it is not indiscriminate… the spread between winners and laggards can exceed 100 percentage points in a given vintage

There is, however, an encouraging shift emerging. Larger IPOs in the most recent cycle — with stronger governance, institutional backing, and demonstrated scale — have begun to show modestly positive long-term excess returns. Interestingly, smaller IPOs have outperformed larger ones on debut, suggesting well-positioned smaller companies are not being crowded out. The market is learning to price quality. Companies that arrive prepared — with clean financials, credible growth plans, and board-level governance, are being rewarded not just on day one, but over years.

The Journey Ahead: Listing of India's Large Unlisted Segment

If what has happened over the past five years is impressive, what has not yet happened may be even more consequential. Outside the listed markets sits a vast universe of over 3,000 large (>₹1000 crore revenues), profitable firms generating economic activity comparable to India's biggest public-market sectors. Today, this value is entirely off-market. The table below illustrates the scale of this unlisted economy. Of an estimated 3,800–4,700 companies with revenues above ₹1,000 crore, just about 40% are currently listed:

Revenue Band (FY2025, ₹ Cr)	Estimated number of companies	Estimated number of companies currently listed	Estimate of % listed
₹1,000–2,000 Cr	1,800–2,200	550–650	~30%
₹2,000–5,000 Cr	1,200–1,500	500–600	~40%
₹5,000 Cr+	800–1,000	500–600	~60%
Total (₹1,000 Cr+)	3,800–4,700	1,550–1,850	~40–45%

Source: MCA filings; Capitaline; BCG estimates. FY2025 revenue data. Listing status as of March 2025.

Outside listed markets sit a vast universe of scaled, profitable enterprises – operating across multiple sectors – capital goods, energy, healthcare, technology, and financial services – whose economic activity is entirely off-market.

The JM Financial-Hurun India Unlisted Gems 2026 report identified the top 100 such companies alone with combined revenues of ₹8.9 lakh crore and EBITDA of ₹1.03 lakh crore. This cohort nearly tripled net profits to ₹35,900 crore in FY2025 from ₹13,000 crore in FY2023, with 65 percent of companies operating below 1x debt-to-equity.

If even a portion of the broader unlisted cohort lists over the next five to seven years, the effect would be transformational – deeper equity markets, broader sector representation, stronger governance standards, and a multi-year expansion in market depth that would surpass everything seen in previous cycles.

The unlisted economy is India's largest untapped reserve of public market potential.

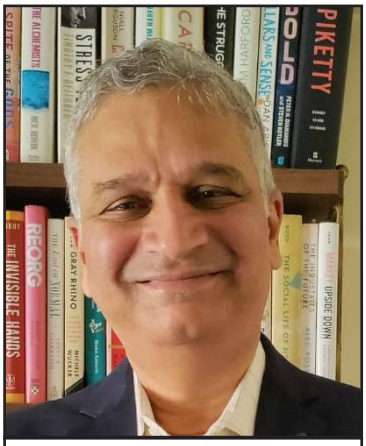
What Does This Mean For All Stakeholder

For corporate leaders, the window to access public capital is wider than at any point in India's history. Investor appetite is deep, the ecosystem is supportive, and SEBI's successive reforms, streamlining the DRHP process, tightening SME disclosures, improving ESOP and fast-track issuance frameworks, have raised the quality and confidence of the market. But the bar is rising. The shift from OFS-led to fresh-issue-led IPOs in FY26 signals clearly that investors now scrutinise whether capital is genuinely funding growth, not enabling promoter exits. Markets reward clarity of strategy and execution credibility. They are increasingly unforgiving of governance opacity or over-optimistic projections.

For investors, the environment demands genuine diligence. Long-term value creation accrues to those who invest in durable competitive positions, not those who chase subscription multiples on listing day.

For policymakers, India's IPO expansion is validation of two decades of ecosystem building: the broadening of the mutual fund base, digital onboarding infrastructure, and regulatory reform. The priority now is accelerating IPO-readiness in the next cohort of private companies and deepening governance standards that will sustain investor confidence through future cycles.

A Structural Turning Point



While India's IPO story is easy to read as a moment of market enthusiasm, in reality, it reflects something more durable.

The market has scaled in size, broadened in issuer profile, deepened in investor participation, and begun to price quality over novelty. The vast private company pipeline means the next chapter could surpass everything that has come before it. Twenty years ago, going public in India was a milestone reserved for established businesses at the end of a growth cycle. Today, it is a strategic decision made early – a working capital tool, a currency for acquisition, a signal of governance intent.

India's public markets are no longer simply reflecting economic growth. They are beginning to drive it. The IPO boom that is visible today is the leading edge of a structural shift that will define the decade ahead.

India's IPO market has truly come of age.

Aligning banks and capital markets

Madan Sabnavis
Chief Economist
Bank of Baroda

Financial markets in India comprise primarily the banking system and the capital market, if the government securities market is kept aside. Banks have been the mainstay of finance for the economy, though of late there has been a lot of interest shown in the capital market. The capital market is bifurcated into the equity and debt segments, both of which are regulated by SEBI. Banks come under the domain of RBI.

With continuous focus on spreading financial literacy, the public today is better aware of options in the market when it comes to savings. On the part of banks, there is now a quest to balance two challenges: garnering deposits at a time when the savers are savvier, and providing funds to borrowers who are still dependent on them. It is not surprising that banks do face a dual problem of garnering deposits and also managing their asset-liability balance as they end up financing infrastructure creation. The issue can be looked at on the mobilization of funds and their use from the banking perspective.

Bank deposits are the major source of funding of assets of banks. While 40% comes under what is called CASA, term deposits become challenging as savers become more market oriented. In the last few years, the equity market has witnessed a boom in both the primary and secondary segments. IPOs have been frequent which have been raised with high premia and while some have failed, most have listed at a higher than offer price thus offering very good returns. At the same time, with bank deposits rates being kept low as the repo rate was lowered sharply last year by almost 125 bps (Feb 2025 to March 2026), individuals have been confident of dealing in the market directly.

In fact, some have been audacious to get into the F & O segment and made losses which prompted SEBI to intervene and control this unbridled enthusiasm. Those who have been less certain but willing to explore the market have invested heavily in the schemes of mutual funds. The icing on the cake was the tax benefits which went with equity gains compared with interest on deposits which is taxable at the card rate. All this has meant a migration of funds to the market, and while the position in FY27 so far till June has been favourable for banks due to the war leading to the markets being low, there can be a U-turn any time.

What can banks do? There needs to be a counter campaign run to assure customers that bank deposits provide an assured return, just like how the campaign on mutual funds have moved attention from bank deposits to capital markets. There could be advantage in reiterating this aspects as households have to take conscious decision when investing their savings. Communication is necessary more to educate individuals about options.

Second, banks need to come up with some product innovation because the present scheme of things lists card rates for various tenures and leaves it to the customer to decide the tenure and interest rate. These are plain vanilla products. The question is whether banks can mimic the market by providing a deposit with variable returns depending on market returns? Simply put, if deposits can be linked with a set of loans with say higher interest rates, given the risk profile, higher interest rates can be offered for the deposit. The rate can vary depending on the performance of these loans. Hence it will be analogous to the mutual funds which run schemes that look at say large or small cap companies and then give a NAV based on how these share prices move. Such schemes need to be devised to make bank deposits more attractive. A slight shift to changing the risk-return tradeoff can be experimented with by banks.

Third, on the part of the government there has been a proposal received from banks repeatedly to make interest on deposits tax free. This can be a big booster as bank deposits form the base of banking operations which allows several national objectives to be met. For example the SLR stipulation ensures that the government is assured of buyers for its paper when the fiscal deficit entails substantial market borrowings. Further, on the lending side, banks have to ensure that 40% of the credit given goes to the priority sector which has been defined by the government. This is besides the heavy lending which is directed to infrastructure. Ideally banks are not the right institutions for funding infrastructure given that deposits are normally at most for a period of 3 years while infra projects extend to up to 20 years. There is a clear asset-liability mismatch in terms of tenures of the two sides. Therefore the social use of deposits is very high unlike the capital market counterparts and there is a justification for providing this tax benefit. At least it can be brought on par with the tax rate on equities.

The asset side of banks also needs some attention and this is where the corporate debt market comes in. Prima facie, it has been seen that the debt market has seen progressively higher amount of issuances with almost Rs 10 lakh crore being mobilized in the last couple of years. However, a drill down shows that more than 2/3, and at times ¾ of these issuances, are by finance companies which use the funds for lending. There s not much going to the infra and manufacturing sectors. The reasons is that the market has some uncanny features which stand out from the way in which operates.

First, most borrowers are of high credit rating which can be AAA or AA. At times there are A rated companies, but it does not go down significantly. This is when the market is attractive as the yield is better than the cost of borrowing from banks. Once one goes down the rating hierarchy, bank loans tend to be cheaper and hence interest is low. This needs to change.

Second, if one looks at the major subscribers of debt, it is financial institutions. These are mainly insurance companies, provident funds and pension funds. Now these companies are long term holders of paper and hence follow a policy of 'buy and hold'. Further as they deal with public money their preference is for higher rated paper. Therefore this supports the first point made that only highly rated companies borrow from this market.

Third, there is no easy route for selling paper after it is issued and purchased by investors. While there is a secondary market, it is hard to understand. Unlike a share of a company XYZ which can be bought anytime as it belongs to a company, for debt it is complex. The paper is issued for say 5 years and hence after 2 years, it is a 3 year paper. Besides one may not get a price as these securities are not actively trade. A 10 year bond of ABC will have a different interest rate (yield) from company XYZ even if the rating is same. Hence it is not like government bonds. Therefore retail interest is limited.

Some steps can be taken to make this market buoyant. First we need market makers who provide buy and sell quotes and these need to be provided incentives like access to cheaper credit or some regulatory forbearance so that they get interested. This way they can add liquidity to the market. This can be done for a certain set of securities to begin with.

Second, there is need to have a junk bond market where lower rated paper finds buyers. Junk bonds give higher returns but carry higher risk. Their default rate is not more then 3% in USA. This can be attractive for investors who are willing to take risk. But grooming such a market can take off some pressure form banks as these companies also tap the debt market.

Third, the credit default swap needs to be revived. This is a precondition to having a junk bond market. The reason is simple. The probability of default is high for some paper and to keep investor interest, some insurance is required which a CDS can do. It has to be revived and one way out it to make it mandatory for all issuances. This way there is a market which can be built which can in turn then cover even lower rated securities. In fact banks can provide this insurance cover for a fee.

Fourth, the tax benefits on debt have to be aligned with that on equity as there has to be an incentive to invest in such bonds. All this will mean the government having to go along with a slight drop in tax collections. But if we want to develop a market, there has to be a push given by the government.

Fifth, the resolution process to defaults has to be quick. While the IBC is in place for bank defaults, a similar structure has to be put in place for debt. Here a suggestion is that the government should set up a fund in the budget where the size increases every year. In parallel, it can be considered to have all debt issuances pay a contribution to the fund which can be 0.01% of the total size of issuance. Hence if Rs 10 lakh crore is raised in a year, Rs 1000 cr can be the contribution made to the Default cover fund in a year. it can further be drilled down to the rating accorded such that higher rated debt carry a lower fee. This will be a manageable cost for the issuers.

Hence there are steps that need to be taken keeping both the banking and capital market system in alignment. The two systems need to work in unison and for this there needs to be a level playing field for all participants. While rewards and risks vary across them given their intrinsic nature, the regulatory structures including taxation should be aligned to ensure there is less arbitrage.

There have been several steps taken by SEBI and RBI to grow the debt market and the fact that issuances have increased over the last decade is a testament of success. There are other issues to iron out that have been mentioned here which can be addressed in the near future. Banks on their parts should also work their way on the deposits front using innovation and communication to expand their base. The fact that the population is progressively getting more educated on the financial front should be leveraged to reach out with the right products by leveraging technology to grow business.

As the economy grows on a higher trajectory of 7-8% per annum in the next few years, the demand for funds would increase as investment picks up. While external markets are available access tends to get limited to the larger companies. It is here that the banking system as well as capital market have a critical role to play in providing the funds that are required. Until such time that specialized financial institutions and debt market evolve and mature, the onus will be on banks to continue to provide finance for infrastructure. There will surely be exciting times for the financial system as the journey on the high growth path takes off.

The Paradox of India's Booming Mutual Fund Industry

As global financial giants exit the industry, a new generation of homegrown fund managers are stepping in to fill the gap. Why do both view the industry so differently?

Amit Tandon
Founder & Managing Director
Institutional Investor Advisory Services India Ltd.

The mutual fund industry is experiencing an exuberant phase, with assets under management (AUM) surging to Rs. 73.7 trillion (Rs 73.7 lacs crores) by March 2026 from Rs. 12.3 trillion in April 2016 (Rs 12.3 lac crores). This decade of strong growth has pushed AUMs to 31% of bank deposits, bringing the industry closer to the financial sector's high table. Yet, the asset management industry is a classic case where strong macroeconomic tailwinds have not necessarily translated into robust financials.

Why is the industry's glass appearing half full? First company's find it hard – but not impossible, to make money. An educated guess optimistically puts the industry profits at around Rs 250 billion (Rs 25,000 crores), with the ten largest taking in 60% of this pool.

The reasons are well documented. First these asset management companies (AMCs) are under strict regulatory oversight from SEBI, which enforces transparency, and stringent compliance. The regulator also caps management fees through the Total Expense Ratio (TER), which follows a sliding scale and has seen periodic downward revisions over the years, with deleterious consequences for the industry. While these measures protect investors, they also increase operational costs and limit the ability of AMCs to charge higher fees, squeezing profit margins. For the global entities, a higher minimum capitalization requirement further locks up capital and lowers returns.

Second, the industry suffers from limited product differentiation. SEBI's categorization framework - segregating funds into large-cap, mid-cap, and small-cap segments - aimed to ensure 'truth in labelling' so investors clearly understand what they're buying. However, an unintended consequence has been a significant similarity in product offerings across AMCs. Larger funds, with greater economies of scale, are better positioned to manage costs and earn higher relative returns - further widening the gap between large and small players.

Three, fund performance has been mixed. Over the past one, three, and five years, many Indian equity mutual funds have underperformed their benchmark indices. Last year (March 2025), only about 38.6% of equity mutual funds managed to beat their respective benchmarks, with large cap funds showing the highest rate of outperformance at 71.9% for that month, while small cap funds significantly lagged at just 10%. Over longer periods, such as three and five years, consistent outperformance has been limited to a select group of funds. For example, only around 31 equity mutual funds consistently outperformed their benchmarks across three, five, and seven-year periods, with just a handful of large cap, contra, focused, large & mid cap, and mid cap funds achieving this feat. This has accelerated the investor shift towards passive products like index funds and ETFs, further driving fee compression. The two reasons cited above have led to an excessive reliance on distributors, who have benefitted enormously from the industry's growth.

What has kept fund flows strong so far is the high absolute returns delivered over the last few years - especially when compared to traditional banking products.

What stands out in this landscape is the changing profile of market participants. As several global financial giants exit the Indian asset management space, a new generation of domestic fund managers is stepping in to fill the gap. While firms like JP Morgan, Goldman Sachs, Principal Group, Zurich Insurance, Deutsche, Allianz, and Fidelity have exited or sold their Indian businesses, homegrown names such as Old Bridge, Unifi Capital, White Oak, Marcellus, Alpha Alternates, AngelOne, CapitalMind, Pantomath, ASK, and Zerodha are entering or expanding their presence while some like BlackRock are re-entering in partnership with Jio.

Unlike their global counterparts - many of whom were deterred by India's fee caps and regulatory constraints - these domestic players are taking a long-term view, seeing the glass as half full. They have focussed on the burgeoning AUM: over the past decade, the industry's AUM has grown at a robust CAGR of around 20%, largely driven by strong retail investor participation. Monthly SIP inflows have surged from around Rs. 8,000 crores in FY2020–21 to over Rs. 24,000 crores in FY2024–25. To put this in perspective, domestic retail investors contributed over US$72 billion (Rs 59.7 lac crores) in net inflows during this period, even as foreign institutional investors (FIIs) pulled out $14.6 billion (Rs 12.2 lac crores). These savers need to be serviced.

The new domestic players in the asset management industry are willing to expand beyond metro cities, capturing growth from India's smaller towns and cities (B30 locations), where financial penetration continues to deepen. Unencumbered by legacy systems and outdated technologies, these fund houses are leveraging fintech solutions to roll out investor-friendly products such as direct plans, index funds, and thematic schemes. Their digital-first approach is particularly effective in attracting younger, tech-savvy investors. Additionally, the relatively low returns offered by traditional banking products have further driven retail investors towards mutual funds.

Much like the new India they operate in, this emerging generation of domestic fund managers is showing growing confidence in the Indian asset management industry - broadening their reach, embracing innovation, and playing a pivotal role in driving the long-awaited equitisation of the Indian financial sector.

How much I invest into my really high-conviction ideas

Devina Mehra
Founder, Chairperson & Managing Director
First Global

Recently, one of the large banks which distributes our products asked for the reasons or narratives behind why we have bought certain stocks or exited them. Plus, they wanted to understand our top high-conviction ideas.

The issue we faced?

Why I deliberately avoid stories about the stocks I hold

First Global's entire investment process is anti-storification and anti-high-conviction – deliberately, consciously and systematically so.

All studies and data have shown that while human beings love stories, one of the systematic biases that bring down investment returns is storification.

It is a trap that all of us are very prone to, because stories are, in a real sense, what make us human.

In fact one of the only things common across all human civilizations across the ages and across geographies is storytelling.

Humans communicate by means of stories. We remember stories, we are moved by stories and we teach through stories.

That is why all ads from those selling toothpaste to those asking you to fund a charity are all stories. The most stark data like a x lakhs of children facing malnutrition does not move us the way a picture of video of a single starving child or family does.

In some sense, you can say that not having stories to tell is a disadvantage when you are trying to convince someone to do or buy something, whether it is a lay investor or even an investment professional (it is just not as satisfying without stories, isn't it?).

In fact, when I used to be on the sell side – that is, when our primary business was being a broker to fund houses, both international and Indian – the question I would get most often when I recommended a stock was, 'What is the story?'

So much so that in a kind of joke, we began to start our research reports with page of what we called 'The Story'.

It was a take-off on the constant demand from the banks and fund houses for the stories behind our picks.

While humans love stories, the market doesn't care

Of course, this was only an ironic take. And, over time, I began to understand the phenomenon more and realized that with tools to deal with big data groups it was only a matter of time before the story was confined to the rubbish heap of history.

There was no doubt then that if you were trying to outperform the market, going by data instead of stories was what would give you results. Hence our entire investment process was geared to take advantage of this truth.

In theory, we all want to say that we make investment decisions based on data, but if I tell you that we bought a particular stock because the return ratios were expanding, growth across quarters was consistent, asset utilization was the best in class, it had no apparent corporate governance issues and it was in the top 10 per cent in most of the factors that we like to look at, it does not sound as exciting as stories of a superb brand, visionary management or huge orders in the future, etc.

As human beings, we do not want dry data and statistics; we want juicy stories, and that is exactly how the market entraps us.

Because the market is not a human being and does not mind breaking our heart over a carefully crafted story.

Steer clear of conviction and emotion when it comes to your securities

The data-based approach has served us very well, and the results are there for all to see in both First Global's PMS product as well as its Global funds and portfolios, especially on a risk-adjusted return basis.

By not attaching conviction, and therefore emotion, to our ideas, we have been able to move in and out of sectors and stocks far ahead of the market.

By way of a few illustrations, we went overweight in industrials and capital goods based on our systems way back in October 2021 when most fund managers began to understand and tell that story only in 2023 when the stocks had already doubled and tripled!

While that sector had been an underdog for twelve years, from 2009 to 2021, the fundamentals were changing because of the order book and sales pick-up. Plus, the many lean years had resulted in cost efficiencies, so once the business came in, the margins began to expand.

For many fund managers it remained in the dog category for many more quarters and their investors missed the major move in the stocks. Because, for human beings it is very hard to change the stories they have formed in their heads.

At a time when everyone started to pile into the sector, we began to evaluate whether that story had run its course.

Similarly, when FMCG was the story being sold throughout 2020, we were among the few fund houses to say that it did not make sense to us, based on data. However, even back then, those who loved the sector, barely ever spoke about ITC or Gilette India as FMCG companies because those particular stocks were not doing well at the time.

On the other hand, almost the first FMCG stock recommended by our systems was ITC, which we bought in early 2021 and which became a huge winner for us because we had no bias against it. Ironically, a number of fund managers who were proponents of the FMCG story never bought ITC, at least in the initial period of its upward move, because they were wedded to their old stories.

On the other hand while stocks like Tata Elxsi and ITC were among our top performing stocks in the PMS for several years we did not kid ourselves that these were high conviction bets to be held for ever.

They were held till our systems liked them and we exited thereafter.

A system is designed to get rid of human bias, as well as noise, which is introduced any time human beings make judgements and decisions. A dozen fund managers given the same information about the same company will have different opinions. That is noise. A single person will look at the data differently depending on whether they had a fight in the traffic in the morning. That is also noise.

As Daniel Kahnemann, whom I consider my Guru, says, 'A well-designed system will always outperform a human expert.'

To give another example, we evaluate all our holdings on a zero base every quarter, essentially answering the question as to where we would be invested if we had cash today. This is to get rid of endowment bias, which makes us value what we hold higher than we should. The hold rating exists in the world only because of Endowment bias as logically you should not hold anything that you will not buy today at today's price.

The story misleads not just the listener

And you know the most fascinating thing about storification?

It is that in the end it misleads not just the listener but also the storyteller!

The narrators repeat the story so many times that they also begin to believe it. And the best among us fall prey to this.

That is reason enough to steer clear of building high conviction in your holdings, which is nothing other than building stories about them in your head.

As for high conviction, what better example than that the companies profiled in the books In Search of Excellence and Good to Great were UNDERPERFORMERS compared with the S&P 500 basket in the decade after the publication of the books. They were laggards not just in terms of stock price performance, but also sales and profit growth.

Even when we look at the list of the top contributors to our PMS performance in previous years, we find that we don't hold many of these stocks any more – for example, the chemical companies that did so well for us in 2021-22 disappeared from the portfolios thereafter.

If we had gotten married to these stocks by telling ourselves great stories about them, we wouldn't have been able to get out in time!

Stories can always be found to justify why the performance of a stock or even a company was great at some point in time, but most of them are merely used to justify what is happening in the present.

How many people even remember that Cisco was the once highest market-cap company in the whole world and was the most coveted investment …and then crashed by 86%? Or the dream run of ABB? Not to mention Enron?

There are plenty of such examples in the Indian market too. The initial Sensex list had textiles, shipping, Premier Automobiles, Hindustan Motors and groups like the Mafatlals, JK, Thapars, etcetera, dominating – all of whom have been consigned to history now.

At one point, the major indexes had zero weightage for banks and financials. As I write today, they have the highest weightage in the indexes. There were also seven or eight PSUs in the Sensex at one time. And then everyone forgot about them for almost a couple of decades.

Fashions, performance, themes, narratives, all come and go.

And it is also another human bias to forget what we were actually thinking and saying once the time and facts have changed. Hindsight bias makes us believe that we always knew what was going to happen.

That's the data!

The rest, you've guessed it, stories.

In summary

- It is considered the right thing for you to have high conviction in your investments. But my whole investment process is anti-storification and anti-high conviction – deliberately, consciously and systematically so.
- All studies and data have shown that while human beings love stories, storification is one of the systematic biases that bring down investment returns.

- By not attaching conviction, i.e., emotion to its investments, First Global has been able to move in and out of sectors and stocks ahead of the market.
- Even well-known companies, brands and stocks fall out of favour.
- Data-driven investing brings far better results than those dependent on stories and emotion, which is what conviction is about.

Quarterly reporting deserves a defence

The fashion is to report less often.

Sandeep Parekh
Managing Partner
Finsec Law Advisors

The world is quietly deciding that listed companies should report their numbers less often. In May this year, the United States proposed allowing companies to file results twice a year rather than four times. Britain and the European Union abandoned mandatory quarterly reporting more than a decade ago. The question this poses for India is easy to ask and harder to answer. Should we follow?

On 5 May 2026, the Securities and Exchange Commission proposed an optional half-yearly reporting regime for American companies.[1] A company would be free to elect to file a single semi-annual report, on a new Form 10-S, in place of two of its quarterly filings on Form 10-Q. The election would be made once a year and could not be changed midstream. A company that chose the half-yearly route could still issue quarterly earnings releases and hold quarterly calls if its investors wanted them. The annual report would remain untouched. The proposal followed a public endorsement by President Trump in September 2025, and an earlier call he made in 2018. The SEC Chairman, Paul Atkins, has pointed out that half-yearly reporting is no stranger to American markets, since foreign companies listed there already report on that basis.[2] Even within the Commission, the proposal drew a warning that letting some companies skip quarterly reporting while others retain it would make comparison across an industry harder.

The American move is the latest step in a longer drift. The United Kingdom abolished mandatory quarterly reporting in 2014, only seven years after introducing it.[3] It acted in part on the Kay Review of 2012, which had argued that quarterly reporting fostered short-term thinking in companies and their owners.[4] The European Union removed the quarterly requirement in 2013, through an amendment to its Transparency Directive. India sits in the opposite camp, and has done so for a long time. Regulation 33 of the SEBI Listing Obligations and Disclosure Requirements Regulations requires a listed company to file quarterly results within 45 days of the quarter end, and audited annual results within 60 days.[5] We have reported quarterly since 2000, when SEBI amended Clause 41 of the old Listing Agreement on the recommendation of its Disclosure and Accounting Standards Committee under Y. H. Malegam, as part of a wider move towards continuous disclosure. Quarterly results were brought under a limited review by auditors in 2003.[6]

The case for reporting less often is not frivolous. Quarterly reporting is expensive. Each set of results must be prepared, reviewed by the auditors, approved by the board, certified by the chief executive and the chief financial officer, and filed in more than one format. For a large company with the staff to absorb the work, this is routine. For the many smaller companies on Indian exchanges, it is a real and recurring cost that falls due every three months. Audit fees, management time, and the distraction of a results season four times a year are not trivial for a company that counts every rupee. The compliance calendar is unforgiving, and the consequences of delay, from penalties to the freezing of promoter holdings, follow almost automatically.

The deeper argument is about behaviour. Critics say that quarterly reporting breeds short-termism. Managers come to run the company for the next set of numbers rather than the next decade. Research budgets and capital spending are trimmed to protect a quarterly margin. The market, fed a steady diet of three-month snapshots, rewards the firm that meets its guidance and punishes the one that spends to build for the future. On this view, reporting less often would allow managers to lift their gaze from the immediate to the important. It is an attractive theory, and it has persuaded thoughtful people in serious places.

A related complaint is volatility. A market that receives a fresh set of numbers every three months has four times as many occasions to over-react. A single soft quarter, perhaps the product of nothing more than the timing of an order or a tax entry, can move a share price sharply and unfairly. Less frequent reporting, the argument runs, would let the market judge a company on its trend rather than its tremors, and would spare honest managers the ordeal of explaining noise.

The case for keeping quarterly reporting is at least as serious, and in India it is stronger. The first argument is informational. Markets price securities on information, and information that arrives twice a year is staler than information that arrives four times. Six months is a long time for a company's fortunes to turn without the market being told. The investor who buys in the fifth month of a half-yearly cycle is trading on figures that are nearly half a year old. More frequent disclosure narrows that window, reduces the advantage held by those with private information, and lowers the cost of capital for the honest company that has nothing to hide. Price discovery is not a luxury; it is the work a market exists to do.

The second argument is about discipline. A reporting obligation is also a checkpoint. Four times a year, a company must confront its own books, submit them to review, and put a signature to them. Fewer checkpoints mean fewer occasions on which a problem must be faced rather than postponed. In a market with India's history of promoter-controlled companies and the occasional spectacular accounting failure, the value of frequent, externally reviewed disclosure is not an abstraction. The gap between two filings is the space in which trouble tends to grow unnoticed. India does not have to look far for the lesson. Its largest accounting frauds grew quietly between one set of results and the next, surfacing only when they could no longer be concealed.

Here the short-termism argument runs into an awkward fact. The claim that quarterly reporting causes corporate myopia is widely believed and thinly supported. When the United Kingdom dropped the requirement in 2014, it produced something close to a controlled experiment. Studies of what followed found that the companies which stopped reporting quarterly did not, on the evidence, raise their capital expenditure or their research spending. What changed was that analysts covered them less closely, leaving them less watched rather than more patient.[7] The European record points in the same direction. During the period when Europe had required quarterly interim statements, some research found more earnings management, not less.[8] The volatility complaint fares no better, for information withheld does not cease to exist. It merely arrives later, and in a larger and more disruptive lump.

The reason is not difficult to see. Companies invest over horizons measured in years, and serious investors value them over horizons longer still. What pulls managers towards the short term is not the calendar of disclosure but the design of their incentives. Executive pay is usually tied to performance over a single year. The practice of issuing quarterly earnings guidance, and then managing the business to meet the figure, does far more to compress horizons than the act of publishing results ever could. It is telling that earnings guidance became more common, not less, once quarterly reporting was made compulsory in several markets.[9] If the disease is short-termism, the frequency of reporting is the wrong organ on which to operate.

There is a further lesson in the American proposal, and it is one its champions tend to pass over. Making quarterly reporting optional may change rather little. Foreign companies listed in the United States have never been required to report quarterly, yet a recent survey of the largest of them found that nine in 10 publish quarterly figures anyway. They do so because the market expects it, and because a company that goes dark for six months invites the suspicion that it has something to conceal. If the cadence of reporting is in practice set by investor demand rather than by regulation, then relaxing the rule delivers the cost saving only to the company that the market would rather hear from more often, not less.

India has its own reasons to be careful. Our market has been reshaped by retail participation on a scale few anticipated even a few months back. Tens of millions of individual investors have come in over the last few years, the majority of them without the analysts, the management access, or the private briefings that institutions take for granted. For these investors, mandatory disclosure is not one source of information competing with others. It is very often the only one. The regulator has spent more than a decade building investor protection on the foundation of transparency. It would be a strange moment to dilute the most basic transparency of all, the regular account of how a company is actually doing, just as the audience for it has grown larger than ever before. To reduce the frequency of disclosure would be to widen the gap between the informed and the uninformed in precisely the part of the market that can least afford it.

The cost argument, which is the most respectable case for change, has in any event already been answered in part. SEBI does not apply the full quarterly regime to everyone alike. Companies listed on the SME platform report half-yearly rather than quarterly, under Regulation 33 itself.[10] The framework already accepts that the burden of disclosure should sit differently on a small company than on a large one. The sensible response to compliance cost is to calibrate it further along those lines, not to dismantle the disclosure that protects investors across the rest of the market.

None of this is to pretend that the present system cannot be improved. The genuine grievance is not that companies report often, but that reporting has grown into a thicket of overlapping formats, duplicated filings, and mechanical certifications that consume management time without adding much that an investor can use. There is real reform to be had here. Simplify the quarterly filing. Cut the duplication between what is sent to the exchange and what is published to the public. Reduce the number of formats. Ease of doing business is a worthy aim, and SEBI has rightly pursued it; but ease should come from removing the friction around disclosure, not from removing the disclosure itself. And if short-termism is the true worry, address it where it actually lives, in the structure of executive pay and the culture of quarterly guidance, rather than by taking timely numbers away from the people who rely on them.

India will be pressed to keep pace with a world that has decided to report less often. But regulation should follow the evidence, not the fashion. The evidence that quarterly reporting causes short-termism is weak. The evidence that timely disclosure protects investors is not. In a market built on the savings of ordinary people, the regulator's instinct should be to tell them more often, not less. India reports four times a year. It should keep doing so.

From Automation to Intelligence: How AI is Redefining Housing Finance in India

Sarosh Amaria
Managing Director
Tata Capital Housing Finance Ltd.

For many years now, most of the conversations in around AI in the fintech industry have revolved around payments, digital wallets and customer applications. However, the underlying currents of the AI wave have been secretly reshaping the housing finance industry. It is transforming how lenders interact with customers, asses risk, verify properties, manage portfolios and create smoother experiences.

Beyond Automation: The Shift to Intelligence

More than improving speed, AI is now helping institutions make smarter decisions by asking better questions and spotting patterns, which were missed earlier. This brings a real difference in the lives of people as this decision is closely linked to long term financial commitments and lifetime savings for a few individuals.

Redefining Customer Engagement and Experience

Today's homebuyer is not simply looking for a loan; they are looking for clarity, speed, transparency, and reassurance. The customer journey is an area where AI is beginning to redefine expectations. The AI-enabled chat assistants, welcome calls to new customers, AI driven email response for customer complaints, and frontline support bots help housing finance companies engage with customers more consistently across the lifecycle. While these interventions can seem small in isolation, they remove friction from a journey that is often emotionally significant and operationally complex for the customer.

Intelligent Decisioning Enabled though Transformation in Underwriting

Traditionally the underwriting process has relied heavily on formal income documents, bureau scores, employer profiles, and established financial histories. While this has been the norm for gauging salaried, pristine customers well, it has often struggled to capture the true repayment capacity of India's large self-employed and informal workforce. Through bank transactions, GST data, cash-flow behaviour, repayment patterns, and other alternative data sources, AI models can build a holistic picture of a borrower's financial life. They can also help identify signals that may remain invisible in conventional evaluation models. This creates the possibility of faster, more accurate underwriting which results into improved risk assessment accuracy, better assessment of self- employed customers, expanded customer base in underserved segment, improved visibility of actual repayment capacity and faster loan approvals.

Another area which has traditionally depended on manual documentation and individual judgment is of Personal Discussions. AI enabled interfaces have helped Personal Discussions become more structured and consistent. A virtual agent can speak with customers, ask the right follow up questions, capture their responses and help the credit team with useful qualitative inputs.

The idea is not to replace human judgement but to make it stronger. Similarly, property valuation has been one of the more time-consuming parts of the mortgage process involving physical inspections, market checks and multiple levels of review. With AI integrated in the systems, the process will become faster and consistent. Location data, past transactions, market benchmarks, satellite imagery, municipal records and local market trends all help in stitching a seamless journey.

These improvements reduce turnaround times without weakening risk controls. This also makes the process scalable thus reducing the physical visits and third-party checks. For example, a customer could be guided through a video walkthrough of their home or business premises supported by geo tagging, time stamping and real time checks.

Driving Operational Excellence and Portfolio Quality

A typical lending journey consists of documentation like Income proofs, bank statements, GST records, property papers, legal reports, technical reports and customer declarations. AI can read, classify, extract, validate information across these documents and auto-fill the application form with greater speed and consistency. This will lead to reduction in manual effort, improve data quality, lower operating costs, and free employees to focus on judgment-led activities.

Collection efforts often begin after stress has already surfaced. AI can help lenders spot early signs of stress even before a customer misses an EMI. This is achieved by looking at repayment behaviour transaction patterns, customer history and other stress indicators often flagging customers who may need support sooner. This gives the lenders an opportunity to proactively mitigate the payments getting missed in a personalized and empathetic manner. AI BOT calls and other channels can help customers stay on track and prevent small delays from turning into delinquencies while also making collections less transactional and more customer sensitive.

Day by day, fraud risks are becoming more complex and traditional checks may not always be enough to detect sophisticated patterns. To keep pace with the ever-evolving malicious intent, AI systems can now identify forged documents, manipulated bank statements, identity mismatches, unusual customer behaviour and hidden connections across cases. Predictive analytics can also help lenders keep a closer watch on portfolio health across products, locations, customer segments and property types making it easier to monitor and manage risk-based decisions better.

That said, risk can also originate internally and to mitigate that, the internal audit teams can use AI to check data across applications, KYC records, income, bureau reports, property papers and other key documents enabling teams to highlight exceptions, gaps and interventions in areas which require deeper review.

Responsible AI and the Road Ahead

The rise of AI also raises important questions around accountability and transparency for lenders. Regulators have already anticipated these concerns and are moving decisively towards ensuring responsible AI adoption, with safeguards around transparency, accountability, data protection, cybersecurity, bias mitigation, auditability, and customer consent.

Regulators have made it clear that lending cannot operate as a black box. Customers need to be informed when AI is being used, institutions need to be able to explain decision-making processes and boards need to ensure strong policies, controls and safeguards are in place. This presents a huge opportunity for HFCs; to be more inclusive, intelligent and resilient. AI working alongside human expertise can be a strategic lever to build trust, access, efficiency and risk discipline. The beauty of this transformation is that it will be largely invisible, though the benefits will be felt by customers who may not see the models, workflows or algorithms working in the background, but will feel the difference through faster decisions, smoother journeys and easier access to credit. Ultimately, this will serve a larger purpose: helping more Indians move closer to the dream of owning a home.

The Road to ₹100 Trillion Will Be Built on Inclusion, Utility and Trust

Anuj Kumar
Managing Director
Computer Age
Management Services Ltd.

India's mutual fund industry is now within visible distance of a milestone that once seemed distant. As on May 31st, 2026, industry assets under management stood at ₹81.58 lakh crore. Over the last ten years, that base has expanded six-fold, from ₹13.82 trillion in May 2016 to ₹81.58 trillion today. Over the last five years alone, it has grown from ₹33.06 trillion to ₹81.58 trillion. The question, therefore, is no longer whether the industry will reach ₹100 trillion - It will. The more important question is what will make that scale durable & lasting.

The answer, increasingly, lies in the quality of participation that is now emerging across the mutual fund ecosystem. This matters even more in a market like India, where the size of the opportunity remains very large. With a population of around 1.4 billion, less than 5 percent of Indians actively participate in mutual funds today. The runway for growth is therefore not merely cyclical, it is structural. The next phase of growth will be built on three key pillars, wider inclusion, stronger digital utilities and infrastructure that can carry the weight of trust at national scale.

Participation is broadening, and that is what gives this growth real depth

The road to ₹100 trillion will not be built by market appreciation alone. It will be built by participation that is becoming broader, younger and more distributed across the country.

One of the clearest signs of this shift is the growing role of women investors. As highlighted in the CAMS - Going Beyond the Box Report on Women Investors (2026), women accounted for 13.2 million investors in CAMS serviced funds as of March 31st, 2026, and nearly 45 percent of them came from B30 locations. That matters because it tells us that the investor base is becoming more inclusive, and that expansion is no longer confined to the top urban centres. Women are not just entering the market in larger numbers, they are participating with greater confidence and clearer intent.

A similar shift is visible among younger investors. Gen Z investors in CAMS serviced funds rose to 95.7 lakh by March 2026 and now account for 23 percent of live unique investors, up from 20 percent a year earlier. That is an important marker of future market depth, because it suggests that investing is beginning earlier in life and becoming part of mainstream financial behaviour much sooner than before.

Geography is changing as well. In CAMS serviced funds, B30 average AUM grew faster than T30 between March 2025 and March 2026, and B30 gross sales also grew faster than the overall base. This points to a market that is expanding outward, not just upward. The shift goes beyond just distribution. It indicates that wealth creation through mutual funds is beginning to find relevance across a wider part of India.

Taken together, these shifts are reshaping the Indian mutual fund investor. The market is no longer being shaped only by a traditional metropolitan saver. It is being shaped by women investors, by younger cohorts entering earlier and by a steady broadening into B30 geographies. That is what gives this phase of growth durability.

Product diversification is widening the architecture of participation

As participation broadens, the product architecture of the industry is widening alongside it.

For much of the industry's history, growth was driven primarily by mainstream equity and debt categories. That remains important & core, but the market is now beginning to diversify in more visible ways. Passive products continue to scale. Specialized Investment Funds are opening up new strategies and investor profiles. GIFT City retail structures are beginning to add an international dimension to participation. CAMS serviced passive AUM stood at ₹7.25 lakh crore in April 2026. SIF AUM on CAMS platforms stood at ₹6,728 crore, with SIF folios crossing 34,500. At the industry level, SIF folios crossed 50,000 in April 2026.

This matters because it reflects a maturing of the ecosystem. Investors are no longer engaging with mutual funds as a single-category product. They are beginning to view the category as a broader financial architecture that can serve different objectives, different time horizons, and increasingly different levels of sophistication. The next leg of growth is therefore unlikely to come from one segment alone. It will come from a richer and more relevant mix of participation.

Mutual funds are becoming more useful, not just more accessible

Participation and product breadth do not, by themselves, explain the full story. The next force shaping the journey to ₹100 trillion is utility.

For years, the mutual fund conversation in India was largely about awareness and access. Both remain important, but the market is now moving into a different phase. Mutual funds are increasingly becoming more useful in an investor's financial life. That is changing both expectations and behaviour.

The first dimension of this shift is digital. More than 90 percent of mutual fund transactions today are digital, a major change from the far more physical operating model of a decade ago. That has altered the baseline expectation for investors. Mutual funds are now expected to be discoverable, executable and serviceable across channels with very little friction. The product is no longer judged only by returns. It is also judged by ease, speed and continuity of experience.

The second dimension is discipline. SIPs have become one of the strongest expressions of this change. In FY26, industry SIP gross sales were about ₹3.5 lakh crore, and the industry ended the year with 10.4 crore live SIPs. Annual SIP registrations at CAMS reached 4.7 crore in FY26, and Q4 SIP collections stood at about ₹59,000 crore. This is not just a scale story. It is a behavioural one. It suggests that mutual funds are becoming embedded in monthly financial routines, which makes participation steadier and the industry more resilient.

The third dimension is liquidity and flexibility. In March 2026 alone, CAMS serviced funds processed around 2 lakh zero-charge instant redemption transactions. At the same time, Loans Against Mutual Funds are expanding the utility of portfolios without interrupting long-term ownership. Publicly available CAMS data for FY 2026 shows 3,95,125 active liens and Loan Under Management of over ₹64,000 crore supported through the platform. This subtly changes the role of mutual funds in household finance. A portfolio is no longer seen only as an investment account. It is increasingly also a source of flexible, formal liquidity.

Taken together, these developments suggest that the next leg of industry growth will not be driven only by wider access. It will also be driven by higher relevance. Mutual funds are becoming more integrated into the financial lives of investors, and that makes the category stronger.

At scale, trust is not a slogan - It is a systems outcome

As markets broaden and products evolve, a more foundational question comes into view. What makes this scale work with consistency.

When an investor experiences a smooth transaction, a timely payout, or a seamless service interaction, what the investor sees is convenience. What the investor does not see is the operating system behind it. Yet that operating system has become central to the mutual fund story.

In FY26, CAMS processed 1,070 million transactions, including 873 million systematic transactions, while serving 47.6 million unique investors. On peak business days, the operating stack handles more than one crore transactions. Each of these can involve anywhere between 180 and 600 verifications across PAN, bank account, KYC and multiple components of the compliance layers, all within a narrow overnight processing window of roughly six to seven hours. Yet complaint rates in the mutual fund industry remain around 0.002 percent of transactions, or roughly 2 parts per million. In any financial business, this is not merely an operating metric - It is a real trust metric.

As investor expectations rise, infrastructure has had to strengthen accordingly. The emphasis is no longer simply on keeping systems running. It is on ensuring that they remain scalable, resilient and largely invisible to the investor even as complexity multiplies. Capacity today is being built not only for current scale, but for the next order of magnitude. Application uptime in the past year averaged 99.02 percent, and API transaction success averaged 99.952 percent. These are not backend statistics for their own sake. They are the invisible conditions that make a digital investing experience feel simple, dependable, and repeatable.

That is also why platform modernisation can no longer be seen as a technology agenda alone. It is increasingly a growth agenda. The objective is straightforward -lower the component of manual effort, create faster turnaround, augment productivity and become ready to absorb the next wave of volume and regulatory complexity, without compromising trust. Over time, this is what CAMS has come to represent for the ecosystem, not just a back-office utility, but enterprise-grade infrastructure.

Why this matters for Viksit Bharat

The larger significance of this journey lies in what it can do for household finance in India.

With a population of around 1.4 billion, mutual fund participation in India is still at an early stage. The industry serves a little over 6 crore unique investors today, and the longer-term industry roadmap has argued that retail mutual fund penetration needs to rise from around 3.6 percent in 2025 to roughly 15 percent by 2047, if mutual funds are to become a truly broad-based household financial product. That is the scale of the opportunity, and the responsibility.

Seen this way, the road to ₹100 trillion is not only about gathering assets. It is about moving more Indian households from passive saving to disciplined investing, and from financial inclusion to financial wellbeing. That is when mutual funds begin to matter not just to markets, but to the wider developmental ambition of the country.

This is also why infrastructure matters in a much larger way than is often acknowledged. For participation to broaden sustainably, the system has to remain trusted, responsive and resilient as volumes rise, products diversify, and investor expectations continue to evolve. That is where institutions such as CAMS matter, not loudly, but structurally.

India will reach ₹100 trillion in mutual fund assets. The more important ambition is to ensure that when it does, the market is broader, more disciplined, more inclusive and more trusted than it is today. And that is where CAMS, quietly but decisively, intends to continue playing its role.

Story wins the Listing Day, Governance wins the decade ahead

How India's deepening, increasingly confident capital market rewards companies that pair a compelling story with enduring governance

On listing day, a company tells a story with conviction. It is a story of the founders' and management's vision, of a market waiting to be served, of a category about to be defined, and of a delivery model that sets a new standard. Investors buy the shares, and for a few hours, the narrative is the asset. That conviction is what converts a private idea into a listed enterprise.

Yet the most successful issuers understand a deeper truth. The story opens the door on day one, but governance is what carries the company and its investors profitably through the decade that follows. In today's India, both are within reach, and the market has never been better positioned to reward companies that master them together.

A market built on genuine strength

India enters this cycle from a position of extraordinary structural strength. The total market capitalization now stands at approximately INR 470 lakh crore (~USD 5 trillion) across more than 5,900 listed companies, doubling from around INR 230 lakh crore (~USD 2.44 trillion) in July 2021, a growth of ~100% in less than five years.

That growth is also broad-based, drawing on small-, mid-, and large-cap strength alike, and new listings have been a meaningful engine of wealth creation. Perhaps most encouraging is who now owns this market. For the first time, domestic institutions hold more than foreign institutions.

The year India's story went global

Against this backdrop, 2025 was a landmark year. Investor appetite was abundant, and subscription multiples consistently held between 30 and 60 times. The early months of 2026 have introduced headwinds, driven by global trade tensions and geopolitical uncertainty, which have weighed on market sentiment and slowed issuance activity. Even so, the underlying pipeline remains substantial, with more than 180 companies at various stages of the SEBI review process.

MNC listings also attracted significant attention. After Hyundai Motor India's October 2024 listing, one of the largest IPOs in Indian market history, LG Electronics India debuted, and many more companies are in the pipeline. For global brands, listing in India is becoming a strategic move to unlock value.

Capital with conviction: what the proceeds reveal

Encouragingly, India's issuers are deploying capital with growing discipline and intent. In 2025, nearly 80% of primary proceeds went into core business priorities, i.e., funding working capital (32%), repayment of loans (27%), and capital expenditure (18%), signaling a strong focus on sustainable growth and financial prudence. Early 2026 carries the same conviction forward in capex, with capex rising to the largest share at 30%, loan repayment to 24%, and working capital to 21%, with around 75% of proceeds channeled into core priorities.

Governance as the next growth engine: SEBI's constructive lens

If the story brings investors to the door, governance is what India's maturing market increasingly rewards once they are inside, and the regulator is helping to raise that bar constructively. Our analysis of SEBI observation letters shows that each company receives an average of close to 100 comments, with nearly 46% relating to the Risk Factors section and a further 13% to Compliance and Regulations. The success of a time-bound IPO depends on the depth, clarity, and credibility of the disclosures placed before investors.

In our view, these observations are best read as opportunities rather than obstacles. SEBI consistently asks issuers to rank risks by materiality, quantify rather than generalize, set out the commercial justification for transactions with promoters and related parties, confirm that no proceeds flow to promoters, substantiate working-capital estimates, and explain peer selection and any areas of underperformance.

Before the bell: building governance into the story

A successful governance-based organization begins with an honest IPO diagnostic that assesses financial reporting, controls, and governance against listed-company standards, and a clear plan to close any gaps. In our experience, three priorities anchor this phase, typically over a six- to nine-month preparation runway.

First, the financial reporting foundation: accounting close, restatement, and consolidation of financial statements; quarterly reporting readiness; KPI mapping aligned with the equity story; and disclosures robust enough to meet SEBI's risk-factor expectations with confidence. Second, internal financial controls (IFC) - a fully implemented and tested IFC framework spanning management controls, IT general controls, and information produced by the entity, so the control environment is demonstrably ready before public-market deadlines arrive. Third, the governance architecture itself - a board with genuine independence, functioning audit and governance committees, codified charters and a code of conduct, and a real enterprise risk management framework with policies and processes behind it.

After the bell: compounding investor confidence

The transition from a privately held company to a publicly accountable one is, in practice, an uplift of the finance and risk function from periodic, internally focused reporting to disciplined, time-bound, externally scrutinized disclosure. The companies that sustain their valuations are those that treat reporting, governance, and compliance as an operating capability, with accurate and transparent financial reporting, high-quality corporate governance, a clean regulator and stock-exchange history, and a credible, consistent investor-relations cadence.

Here, the shift in domestic ownership becomes a genuine advantage. With mutual funds, insurers holding close to INR 17.5 lakh crore and a broad retail base now anchoring the market, the audience for governance is large. It rewards consistency, and each clean quarter, transparent related-party disclosure, and well-explained variance adds to trust that supports the share price through every cycle. Confidence-building, in this market, is cumulative, and it is precisely what converts a strong listing into a strong decade.

The decade ahead

India's IPO market is moving, as we have observed, from capital formation to value discovery, and the trajectory is decisively positive. The structural foundations are strong, with deep domestic liquidity, a broadening and more democratic market, and a substantial pipeline of 200+ filed DRHPs, representing over INR 1.81 lakh crore (around USD 20 billion) of potential issuance, with 140+ companies already holding active SEBI approvals. The years to come can provide a strong foundation for these IPOs, driven by disciplined capital formation.

The story will always matter on listing day; founder vision and positioning are what bring investors to the table. But the company that intends to stand for decades builds governance into its DNA before it files and operationalizes it relentlessly after it lists. The narrative opens the door, and governance keeps it open. In the confident cycle now unfolding, the issuers who pair both, preparing thoughtfully on either side of the listing bell, will be the ones who turn a successful listing into sustained, compounding value for every investor who believed the story.

33% Women Representation on Corporate Boards

Arun Duggal
Founder-Centre for Sustainability and Corporate Governance Research (CSCG)
Indian Institute of Management, Ahmedabad

This is to propose 33% representation on Corporate Boards by 2030 in top 1000 NSE Companies.

The Companies Act, 2013 (effective from 1 April 2014) introduced a requirement for companies to appoint at least one woman director. Subsequently, SEBI strengthened the framework by mandating at least one Independent woman director for the top 1000 listed companies.

Impact:

The requirements re Independent Women Directors by Companies Act & SEBI has increased the participation of women on Boards. It has increased from 4.5 % in 2014 to nearly 20% now. This has had a very positive impact in Boards functioning and Corporate Governance. It has been established by research that women bring slightly different perspective to the Boards because own life experiences, instincts and empathy. They generally go into important Board issues in greater depth, are more careful in risk management and compliance, have better understanding of perspectives of women customers (majority of customers are women for some businesses) and women employees, They also act as Role Models for women executives in the company who are concerned about the "Glass Ceiling". Women Directors also take greater interest in Sustainability, CSR, and HR issues.

Overall greater women participation in Boards have created more value in the companies and has been good for shareholders and society.

Current Status in India:

Most companies comply with the requirement of at least one woman director; however, the majority have only one or two women directors, indicating that representation remains limited.

Regretfully, a few companies have not complied with the requirement and no apparent penalty has been imposed on them.

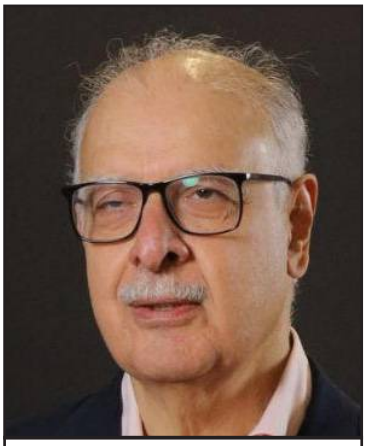
On the other hand, some progressive companies have 3/4 Woman Directors, Committee Chairs and Board Chairs.

International Position:

In the United Kingdom, listed companies follow a 'comply or explain' framework with a target of 40% women on boards. Women currently hold over 40% of board positions in FTSE 350 companies. In the United States, there is no federal quota, but women hold approximately 35% of board positions in S&P 500 companies. Canada and Australia follow disclosure-based models, encouraging companies to set diversity targets, with women representing around 35–38% of board positions in leading companies.

Proposal:

It is proposed that, at least one-third of the Board of Directors in top 1000 companies to be women by 2030. This can be done by inducting women when current men directors retire and /or by expanding the Board.



1. At least one half of the Committee Chairs should be women.
2. At least half of women directors to be independent directors.
3. SEBI should promote training and mentorship Programs by FICCI, CII, and Management Institutes to increase "supply" of talented and trained women to become Board members.
4. In case of non-compliance by a company by 2030, the Chairman of the Board and the CEO of such company should not receive any remuneration or benefits from the company until compliance is achieved.

Conclusion:

This initiative would move India from a minimum-compliance framework to a meaningful representation model, improving corporate governance, enhancing board effectiveness, and promoting gender inclusion in leadership positions in companies.

Owning the Auditor Relationship

Nawshir H.Mirza
Professional Independent Director

In recent years, a growing number of corporate frauds have surfaced in listed companies. Fraud itself is not new, but the scale and frequency of deception affecting shareholders, lenders, and the investing public have reached alarming levels. This trend presents a striking paradox. Corporate governance frameworks have never been stronger. Audit committees, independent directors, fraud reviews, and extensive regulatory oversight are now standard features of listed companies. One would expect these mechanisms to reduce fraud. Instead, the opposite appears to be happening.

Auditors occupy a central role in safeguarding corporate integrity. Internal auditors are expected to identify risks—including fraud risks—and recommend controls that both, prevent wrongdoing and increase the likelihood of its detection. External auditors, meanwhile, are tasked with identifying material misstatements and frauds that distort financial statements so as to mislead their users.

Why, then, are major frauds continuing to evade detection?

The answer is uncomfortable but straightforward: auditors either lack the necessary competence or they lack true independence.

This raises an important question. How can such failures occur when audit committees are responsible for appointing auditors and receiving their reports directly? Audit committees are, after all, expected to operate independently and free from management influence. Yet when audits fail, the root cause almost always lies in one of two areas: insufficient capability or compromised independence.

While competence remains a critical issue, the focus of this article is auditor independence—and the role audit committees must play in protecting and strengthening it.

The Illusion of Independence

Formally, statutory auditors are appointed by shareholders at a company's general meeting. In practice, however, shareholders are typically presented with a single recommendation from the board and can do little more than approve or reject it. The board, in turn, is required to nominate the auditor recommended by the audit committee. Because audit committees are dominated by independent directors, the assumption is that their choice of auditor is free from management or controlling-shareholder influence.

Reality is often quite different.

Controlling shareholders and senior executives naturally prefer auditors who are cooperative and unlikely to create difficulties. Once such a firm is identified, subtle signals may be sent to the audit committee chair indicating a preferred outcome. The committee then follows a formal selection process, complete with presentations and evaluations, before recommending the pre-chosen firm.

Prospective auditors understand this dynamic. Consequently, many devote significant effort to cultivating relationships with controlling shareholders, CEOs, and CFOs. Maintaining a reputation for technical competence remains important, but winning the confidence of those who wield real influence is often the priority.

The result is predictable. Once appointed, an auditor's loyalty may drift toward management or the controlling shareholder rather than toward the audit committee. The relationship with the committee becomes largely procedural, governed by regulations, reporting requirements, and formal interactions rather than trust and mutual confidence.

Why the Audit Committee Must Take Ownership

The importance of auditors to an audit committee cannot be overstated.

The internal auditor serves as the committee's eyes and ears across the organisation, assessing risks and evaluating corresponding controls. The external auditor provides independent assurance over the financial statements that the committee must ultimately approve.

Together, these two functions discharge most of the committee's responsibilities. In effect, they are the committee's agents.

For this reason, both auditors must be loyal to the committee and trusted by it. Their relationship cannot remain merely formal. It must be built on confidence, candour, and mutual respect.

Trust, however, is not established between institutions. It is built between people. In practice, that bond must exist between the chair of the audit committee and the lead audit partner—or, in the case of internal audit, the chief audit executive.

The committee must therefore "own" the auditor relationship.

Building an Environment for Effective Auditing

An effective audit committee can strengthen auditor independence and effectiveness through several practical measures.

1. Establish Regular Private Dialogue
The committee chair should meet privately with the lead audit partner on a regular basis. These conversations create rapport and encourage openness. Auditors must feel confident that concerns raised privately will be taken seriously and pursued appropriately.

2. Hold Executive Sessions with Auditors
Audit committees should meet periodically with auditors without management present. Such sessions allow auditors to discuss concerns they may hesitate to raise in open meetings—particularly those based on intuition, behavioural observations, or incomplete evidence.

Issues such as organisational morale, leadership style, or management integrity often emerge through these conversations.

3. Create a Trusted Channel with the CFO
The committee chair should cultivate a relationship with the CFO that encourages candid discussion of concerns regarding business practices or organisational behaviour. Where appropriate, these concerns can then be communicated to the auditor and incorporated into audit procedures.

4. Share Strategic Developments
Significant board decisions, strategic shifts, or emerging business risks should be communicated to the auditor promptly. These developments may have immediate or future implications for financial reporting and should inform audit focus areas.

5. Publicly Support Auditor Independence
In committee meetings, and in the presence of auditors, the committee should make clear that it expects prudent accounting judgments, conservative assumptions, and full cooperation from management. Such signals strengthen auditors when they face pressure to limit the scope or depth of their work.

6. Ensure Auditors Attend Full Meetings
Auditors should participate throughout audit committee meetings rather than only during agenda items directly related to them. Full attendance provides broader context and deeper insight into organisational risks and governance dynamics.

7. Direct Attention to High-Risk Areas
The committee should actively evaluate how business strategies, transactions, financing structures, and operating practices affect financial reporting. This analysis helps auditors focus their efforts where the risks are greatest.

8. Ask Better Questions
Auditors should be challenged with probing questions regarding:

- The quality and reliability of evidence received
- The conservatism of accounting judgments
- The culture of the finance function
- The adequacy of management explanations
- The time available to conduct the audit
- The effectiveness of internal audit, compliance, secretarial, and whistleblowing functions

A diligent committee strengthens the auditor's position. When management pressures auditors to defer or minimise concerns, auditors can point to the committee's exacting scrutiny and insist that issues will inevitably surface.

9. Demonstrate Genuine Independence
Nothing undermines an audit more quickly than a perception that the committee is aligned with management or beholden to a controlling shareholder. Independence must be demonstrated consistently through conduct, decision-making, and questioning.

10. Challenge Assumptions Relentlessly
Major assumptions, forecasts, valuations, estimates, and management commitments should be rigorously tested. When issues are deferred for future resolution, the committee must satisfy itself that management has both the intention and capability to deliver corrective action.

Failure to follow through on such commitments is often not merely a management failure—it is a governance failure.

11. Inform the Full Board
Significant financial reporting concerns should be communicated to the entire board. Accountability for financial reporting quality must extend beyond the audit committee and auditors to all directors.

The Auditor as Protector

Audit committees must give auditors a full voice and never create the impression that the committees serve primarily as defenders of management's position. The committee's own protection—and that of independent directors—depends upon the effectiveness of the audit process.

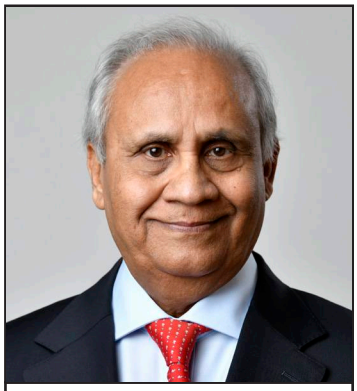
Auditors are, in many respects, the committee's protectors. Equally, the committee must protect auditors by creating an environment in which they can exercise independent judgment without fear or favour.

Where committee members are perceived as insufficiently independent, the chair bears a special responsibility to demonstrate, through actions rather than words, that the committee seeks rigorous auditing and financial statements that are both true and fair.

Shared Accountability

The audit committee's responsibility extends beyond appointing a reputable audit firm. It must ensure that the audit team possesses the expertise necessary to challenge management's arguments and understand increasingly complex business arrangements.

If auditors fail to inspire confidence in either their competence or independence, the committee should seek a change.



A failed audit is not solely the auditor's failure. It is also a failure of the audit committee that oversaw the process.

Ultimately, the effectiveness of an audit committee depends heavily on its chair. Leadership, judgment, courage, and independence at the top determine whether the committee merely fulfils formal requirements or genuinely safeguards the company and its stakeholders.

The safety of both the organisation and its auditors may rest on that distinction.

Which raises a provocative question: Is it time for auditors to have a veto over who chairs the audit committee?

Corporate Governance and Human Resources: Distant Friends or Close Siblings?

Dr.Anil K.Khandelwal
Former Chairman & Managing Director
Bank of Baroda

Dr.Anujayesh Krishna
Board Member
Institute for Advanced Studies in Complex Choices, Hyderabad

Corporate Governance and Human Resources (HR) are important functions that despite their seemingly very different roles, share many similarities. At a fundamental level, both functions are tasked with important responsibilities that shape a firm's foundation towards its long-term success. In practice, both functions (unfortunately) also spark a general sense of disappointment with their failures to deliver as expected. The purpose of this article is to look at the nature of these functions and reflect on how they can complement each other. This is important given that organisations of all types are likely to face radical challenges in future, which include AI transformation, social and demographic changes, political volatility, and economic uncertainties. Are our governance and HR functions fit for purpose in the emerging environments of radical uncertainty, and how can they be better siblings?

Role/ Mandate of Corporate Governance and Human Resources

Corporate Governance has a fiduciary responsibility to act in the best interests of shareholders (or owners) and to do so by providing governance oversight into how the strategic matters (whether by intent or consequence) of the firm are conducted. Corporate governance works under a set of statutory governance requirements that, with the passage of time and with each major instance of public/ corporate governance failure, whether it was Enron in 2000, or the Great Financial Crisis of 2008, have become more onerous. Following multiple iterations of new requirements and processes, its main tasks and processes are generally crystallised as governance standards, whether in law or through a general guidance set out by the relevant professional bodies. Indeed, there is an argument that such requirements and processes are excessively administrative and constrain decision-making without a corresponding benefit to show for them.

Unlike Corporate Governance, Human Resources function, at least in practice, has a fluid and less formalised mandate. Additionally, HR means different things to different stakeholders, such as business leaders, employees, HR professionals, academicians and trade unions. It is not that the HR function did not have its role and mandate scrutinised in its long history, which included attempts to evolve it from an administrative function to a personnel function and thence to HR/HRD and finally to a strategic HR function. Nor was there a lack of tools and techniques (including employee satisfaction surveys, selection methodologies, etc), dashboards and matrices. Yet, the function did not get traction for many complex and contextual reasons, including – and speaking in general terms – it lacked the accountability, visibility and risks of public failures that exist for the corporate governance function unless an extreme or systemic failure happens.

Corporate governance may have its challenges, both in theory and practice, but it is less fuzzy and less prone to "marking your own homework" and self-certification errors, particularly when failures happen.

Human Resources in Governance, and Governance in Human Resources

Organisational governance is a challenging and intense function, and its effectiveness, like any other area of business, depends on the quality of people, mainly the directors in it. There is both a demand and supply challenge when it comes to the quality of talent available for such important roles.

On the demand side, for a long time, it was not uncommon to select directors for reasons of relationship and their likelihood of not challenging questionable decisions. On the supply side, given the general state of practice, low remuneration and risks of loss of reputation, many excellent candidates are less willing to join the field. Anecdotally speaking, in the corporate governance realm, this limited supply is at a tipping point, and failure to get or attract good directors can push an organisation into a seriously fragile and governance-deficient situation. In theory, the composition of executive and non-executive membership means independent and diverse inputs, protection of minority shareholders and checks and balances that overcome partisan interests. In practice, the limited supply of good independent directors and pressures to get along thwarts the goals of having them in the first place.

HR functions for Boards, such as induction/recruitment of a board member or chair, Compensation, Board evaluation, succession and refreshment are now in the statutory purview of the Board's NRC (Nomination and Remuneration Committee), which is one of the mandatory committees along with the Audit Committee under the Indian Companies Act 2013. It is a different matter that in most companies (especially promoter-driven companies), promoter dominance prevails in such HR matters.

Governance in Human Resources is a trickier area, because it is not always clear, beyond the rhetoric, what should and can an HR function accomplish, and therefore what should be governed. HR governance remains largely discretionary by its very nebulous nature, except for blue-collar workers whose conditions of service are governed by statutes in force. However, beyond such requirements, HR governance is "optional" and even when it does exist, it is not uncommon to be more focused on its administrative compliance rather than following the intent behind it. In a few areas of HR, such as culture building and learning & development, it is not always easy to understand how to apply the governance, except perhaps in the case of serial "culture" offenders, who produce excellent business results, in which cases, HR faces an uphill and mostly losing battle in any case. This has implications, inter alia, on the quality and motivation of talent that enters the HR field, and how the talent is used within the field. It is not a surprise that HR is not a preferred career option in most business schools, and experienced business managers do not prefer to have responsibilities for HR functions through career rotation unless this is a long-established organisational practice.

Who Keeps the Score and What is Score Anyways?

How well do the two functions (Corporate Governance and HR) work? The answer depends to a great extent on what we expect from them and on the context in which they work. Though there have been studies on their effectiveness, in the court of practitioners and public opinion, rightly or wrongly, their effectiveness is largely based on anecdotal experience, views of stakeholders, and subjective analysis.

Corporate governance, in view of the statutory oversight and requirements, has (relative to HR) specific tasks and responsibilities to which, if failures happen, a reference can be made. Both failures and successes are public (for publicly owned firms) and hard to miss, and potentially attributable to acts of commission or omission. Various (mostly external) stakeholders keep the score, the main ones being the owners, though understandably, each stakeholder would focus on their part of the score, a sub-score, so to speak. This, along with the obligations of fiduciary responsibilities and emerging practices, such as activist investors, keeps the Board members (to varying extents) accountable. It should be noted that for executive members, the scrutiny is increasing through the increased usage of "Balanced Scorecards" and other interventions (such as Senior Management Regime in financial services in the UK). It is possible to argue that for the governance function, the score could mean not having governance failures, which is a very broad term, and can be met tactically without focusing either on the real health or the long-term performance, noting that directors do not usually have a long-term tenure.

What is a score for HR is an even more difficult question to answer. In theory, HR is about ensuring that human and organisational values are adhered to, human potential is maximised and employees grow and contribute to their fullest. In reality, at least in many organisations, it is anything but that. In practice, HR mandates are mostly discretionary in nature, and, unless HR is "institutionalised in the right way", can dramatically change with a change in the firm's fortunes and/or in the senior leadership teams. The term "institutionalised in the right way" is the key, as it can be argued that the abundance of processes, dashboards and surveys implies that HR function is already institutionalised. It can also be argued that such scores and dashboards represent the HR score, and they are reviewed regularly by various stakeholders, and even find a mention in the Annual reports and employee forums. Though this argument is not without its merits, the presence of processes and matrices is not institutionalisation per se, it is, at best, a means towards an end (institutionalisation) and at worst, managing narratives. The real institutionalisation is the embedding of a culture in a way that the need for governance starts receding into the background, and perhaps over time similarly leads to less need for motivating and engaging employees using external motivators.

It can be argued that statistically speaking, a very few cases of corporate governance and HR failures come to light, and therefore, in general, for the large number of organisations, the two functions are effective. This argument, too, requires some reflection as it assumes that a failure exists only when it is public or the outcome of failure speaks for itself. As the saying goes, absence of evidence is not the same thing as evidence of absence. Systemic failures can remain hidden for a long time and usually they do not happen overnight, which is precisely why effective governance is needed ideally before they become toxic.

The way forward

The discussion above suggests that whilst the two functions have commonalities, they have been at best remote friends as opposed to being close siblings. There is a need – and opportunity - for them to embrace and leverage the intent and practices of each other more.

Two additional areas merit attention. Firstly, both functions have a common but largely unutilised performance area, namely, culture, which is key to effective governance, managing people and indeed everything that goes on in the organisation. Governance is, inter-alia, an outcome of behaviour and judgement, and that cannot be legislated. Whilst it is undeniable that culture itself cannot be mandated or legislated, it can be mindfully nudged towards outcomes geared towards better compliance and governance. Secondly, for corporate governance and HR to become better siblings, it is important that they recognise that compliance with set standards and processes enables them to meet the lowest threshold of their performance, that is, survival and maintenance, and it is merely the means to an end. The higher threshold – the end itself – is building lasting, long-term and strategically successful organisations that generate value, but also general welfare, well-being and responsible use of resources, including the trust of employees and customers.

Beyond Compliance - Why Financial Governance is India's most Urgent Economic Priority

From Box-Tick Compliance to Inner Consciousness — The Imperative of Trust, Integrity, and Accountability in the Disruptive Era

Dr.Ashok Haldia
CA,CMA,CS

Foundation that We Cannot Afford to Neglect

Financial governance is the bedrock for the Indian economy, which aims at GDP growth to $5 trillion by 2029 and to become a developed economy by 2047. Digital public infrastructure has placed India at the frontier of financial innovation. Our capital markets are highly dynamic and technologically advanced. The legal framework for corporate governance in India is comprehensive and constantly evolving.

Our aspirations for economic growth require us to continually strive for increased trust of investors and other stakeholders — within India and globally. In a world marked by technological disruption and a highly geopolitically volatile landscape, robust financial governance is core to sustaining the confidence of investors, regulators, and other stakeholders.

Regulatory Pressure and the Governance Imperative

Regulatory expectations are not only expanding but have become highly onerous. Managing finance in a highly unpredictable business environment, while maintaining organisation-wide highest standards of integrity and transparency, has become the cornerstone of financial governance. AI is reshaping systems, processes, and risk profiles of companies. RBI, SEBI, and MCA are progressively tightening governance and reporting norms. The BRSR framework is being gradually extended both in scope of disclosure requirements and in coverage of entities.

Investors place a premium of 15 to 20 percent on companies that are responsibly governed. Financial, entrepreneurial, and intellectual capital flows toward integrity, transparency, and trust in quality of governance.

India's regulatory framework has evolved over the years, benchmarked with global standards. However, a series of corporate failures and financial frauds — masked by financial reporting failures — have raised serious questions on the role of boards, audit committees, directors, CFOs, auditors, and internal auditors. A box-tick approach to compliance will harm not only the long-term value of companies but will also hamper our aspirations to become a leading economy of the world.

From Form to Substance

The challenge is to build inner consciousness for responsible governance and to evolve resilient internal governance systems that resist and prevent governance failures and hold misdemeanour accountable. Enhancing the trust of stakeholders is not only a moral and legal obligation — it is an imperative for the long-term survival and sustainability of companies themselves. We are aware of instances where an anonymous social media report, a so-called research report, an institutional investor's note, or even a rumour can damage corporate valuation overnight. What is important is intent and substance — not box-tick compliance.

NFRA's Warning — Financial Reporting Under Scrutiny

Despite India following international standards, serious concerns remain on the quality of financial reporting. NFRA reports highlight how brazenly related party transactions, off-balance sheet exposures, and aggressive revenue recognition are being resorted to in order to perpetuate frauds — and how basic principles of auditing are ignored in unearthing them. Stakeholders today demand assurance that is reflective of the true state of affairs and that can be trusted and relied upon. Auditors are the last line of defence. Their obligation is to those who read financial statements and form opinions on the quality of financial governance — not to those who appoint them. Reforms are urgently needed to safeguard the independence of auditors and ensure they have the capability and competence to deliver audit quality amidst the challenges of AI, real-time audit, and changing geopolitical risk. If not addressed, the auditing profession may face an existential threat.

The Boardroom Must Wake Up

The governance culture in boardrooms must change. Governance is not a part-time or pastime responsibility. It demands holistic engagement no less than any other profession — informed scepticism, the courage to question management, fearless expression of well-considered views, and where required, the recording of dissent.

Independent directors must exercise well-informed scepticism on related party transactions, attempted siphoning of funds, aggressive revenue recognition, unreasonable valuations, auditor independence, AI governance, cybersecurity, risk profile, and ethical breaches. Failure to do so will invite regulatory and public accountability.

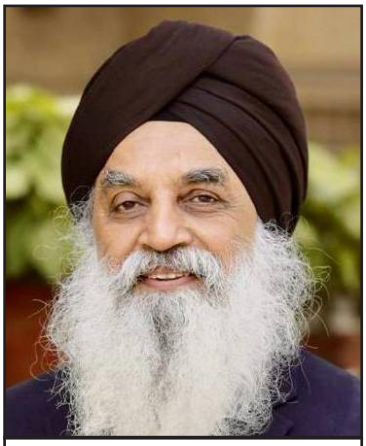
The responsibility of the board extends equally to creating an ethical culture across the organisation. It must create an environment where the CFO, risk managers, and compliance officers can freely and fearlessly speak their concerns. It must further ensure that the audit committee functions efficiently as an oversight body — acting as the guardian of financial probity and transparency.

CFO as a conscience keeper

Expectations from the CFO have transformed — from a number cruncher or fund raiser to a conscience keeper and navigator for the creation of long-term value. The CFO must be credible and courageous enough to rank stakeholder interests above the short-term or personal interests of promoters. AI is a powerful tool. However, its governance is a far bigger challenge. As has been rightly said — we must govern what we cannot fully see. The CFO's focus must also shift from financial reporting, which does not tell the complete truth, to integrated reporting covering ESG and reputational risks.

Financial systems face the challenge of data deluge with vulnerability to data integrity and cyber risks — posing severe systemic financial risks. Aiming at rapid growth without robust governance frameworks may lead to catastrophic collapse. The CFO must therefore walk a tightrope, balancing growth with financial discipline.



Valuation- a non Negotiable Governance Standard

Valuations sit at the heart of financial governance. Almost every significant corporate decision requires a valuation. When valuations are manipulated, they become exploitative to minority shareholders — a tool for masking weak balance sheets, raising debt on false premises, or justifying manipulative acquisitions. Boards, audit committees, and CFOs must therefore treat independent, rigorous, and transparent valuation as a non-negotiable governance standard — not a formality to be outsourced and rubber-stamped. The CFO in particular bears the responsibility to question valuation assumptions, challenge conflicts of interest in who conducts the valuation, and ensure that the methodology is sound and disclosed.

Conclusion

Financial governance is the foundation on which India's economic ambitions must be built. The quality of governance in boardrooms, finance functions, and audit firms will determine whether that aspiration becomes reality. Technology is transforming business at an unprecedented pace — but no algorithm can substitute for integrity, courage, and accountability. Boards, CFOs, auditors, and compliance professionals must move from form to substance — from the appearance of governance to its living practice. Trust, once lost, is extraordinarily difficult to rebuild, as markets have repeatedly demonstrated. Every participant in the financial governance ecosystem must act not merely as a custodian of compliance but as a guardian of long-term value — for their organisations, their stakeholders, and for India.

The mantra for macro-financial stability

Dr.Gurbachan Singh
Independent Economist (Previously Visiting Professor, Ashoka University)

Over the last 1-2 years, we have gone through a period of some macro-financial instability in India. Some observers feel that this kind of significant instability is somewhat inevitable at times and that it is hardly possible to do anything very meaningful about this beforehand. This author differs.

This article will provide the policy mantra for ex-ante substantially improving macro-financial stability. This means that the frequency and the intensity of macro-financial instability can be reduced. For this, we need policy for not just macroeconomic stability but also policy for financial stability. The article includes new policy tools, and newer or extended versions of some policies that are familiar. It is all a very long story but a simplified version is presented here. It is based on a part of this author's forthcoming book[1] (and the references therein).

The emphasis here is on five Fs, which are

(1) Flexible Inflation Targeting (FIT) - an extended version here,
(2) fiscal responsibility, with minimal side-effects of policy,
(3) floating exchange rate regime, with Fair to Impose Sudden Tax (FIST) policy,
(4) financial regulation without financial repression, and
(5) Financial Advice is Mandatory for Everyone (FAME) policy, though every investor is free to choose.

The first three Fs are for macroeconomic stability while the last two are for financial stability. The five Fs are not mutually exclusive and are not collectively exhaustive but the essence is included here.

Let us consider the five policies one by one somewhat in isolation. This is followed by a perspective. The article includes a brief discussion of where we stand on macro-financial stability in India.

1 Flexible Inflation Targeting (FIT) - an extended version here

Given the paucity of policy tools with the Reserve Bank of India (RBI), it helps to prioritise, and target some inflation rate, though with some leeway. Also, the RBI can be flexible in taking care of other macroeconomic objectives including the stability of output. All this is, very briefly, the familiar FIT.

Under an extended version of FIT here, it helps if monetary policy by the RBI is accompanied by a tax or subsidy scheme by the Ministry of Finance (MoF) for stabilising the domestic price of oil and food. While the RBI takes care of core inflation, the MoF can take care of cost-push inflation to the extent possible. Overall, we move towards low and stable headline inflation.

Of course, there is a need to accept the idea of variability in tax/subsidy rates over an oil price cycle and over a food price cycle; this is unlike the idea of somewhat fixed tax or subsidy rates that we are used to at present. But there can be some rules, instead of discretion, for the variation needed. Also, we need some reserves of not just oil but gas as well, and some long-term plans for renewable energy. This is useful for energy security as well.

Finally, FIT is meaningful and realistic, provided the MoF does not have high fiscal deficits, which can affect inflation. This brings us to the next part of the policy package.

2 Fiscal responsibility with minimal side-effects of policy

In India, we have in place already the Fiscal Responsibility and Budget Management (FRBM) Act, 2003. There is a need for an amendment to make it more effective. Also, an appropriate yardstick needs to be used to gauge the fiscal situation. This can be interest payments as a percentage of public spending, or fiscal deficits as a percentage of public spending. These figures stand at 20 percent and 24 percent respectively for India. These figures are very high compared to the figure of 4.2 percent, which is the fiscal deficit as a percentage of the gross domestic product (GDP), which captures private spending and public spending on output.

At present, the fiscal situation is, appropriately measured, not good in India (and in many other countries). So, the government bonds are actually not safe. But it does not show up as high real yields on government securities. This is because there is voluntary demand for "safe" and liquid government securities. Also, there is a captive market for government securities in India - thanks to "prudential regulations" like the statutory liquidity ratio (SLR) requirement on banks, and even the cash reserve ratio (CRR) requirement. But all this is basically financial repression. This has a downside for the bank customers and for the economy.

The bottom line here is that we need to move towards fiscal responsibility without financial repression and without violating FIT in letter or spirit. So far, we considered domestic macroeconomic stability. We turn now to exchange rate stability.

3 Floating exchange rates, with Fair to Impose Sudden Tax (FIST) policy

Floating exchange rates have the virtue that these provide an adjustment mechanism for international balance of payments but the flexibility can turn into high volatility. So, it helps that the RBI holds a good inventory of foreign exchange reserves and meaningfully varies these to bring about stability in the exchange rates. However, this whole policy has its limitations.

Another less familiar but more useful policy can be that the legislation provides for a new tax. The MoF can invoke the tax on a temporary basis on the international capital flows, when these are large and sudden. This policy can stabilise the flows and the exchange rates. This is, what is called here, Fair to Impose Sudden Tax (FIST) policy. It is fair because the cost of stabilisation here is borne by investors who benefit from international capital flows, and the MoF gets some tax revenues. This is unlike what happens under the prevailing policy wherein the RBI bears the net cost of using foreign exchange reserves.

A variant of the FIST policy has, in fact, been used this year when the MoF imposed a 15 percent tax on imports of gold at a time when the outflows of dollars was suddenly large. This policy needs to be extended to sudden and large financial capital flows. This completes the policy for macroeconomic stability. We turn now to financial stability.

4 Financial regulation without financial repression

We need stable banks and stable non-bank financial intermediaries. So, we need appropriate regulations. We need appropriate capital adequacy norms to take care of solvency in financial institutions. Also, the RBI needs to be ready to act as the lender of last resort to deal with any systemic liquidity issues. It also helps that deposit insurance is in place.

In the aftermath of the Global Financial Crisis in 2007, new financial regulations were conceived. These include the liquidity coverage ratio (LCR) and the net stable funding ratio (NSFR). While these may be useful in case of the advanced economies, it is not clear if these are needed in India, which has other regulations like SLR and CRR already. What we do need in India is some variant of the Asset Quality Review (AQR) on a somewhat regular basis.

Financial regulation is very much needed for the stability of financial institutions. However, this needs to be without financial repression (see Section 2). We turn now to the least familiar policy. This relates mainly to asset markets.

5 Financial Advice is Mandatory for Everyone (FAME) policy

As we know, there is considerable irrationality in the stock market and even asset markets more generally. The result is that the stock prices are excessively volatile. It is true that policymakers cannot make investors rational! An important difficulty at present is that many investors do not know that they do not know finance adequately and meaningfully. Their decisions affect stock prices. But policymakers can help here. The usual emphasis in this context is on expanding and improving financial literacy but this is neither necessary nor sufficient. People need credible financial advice.

Policymakers can adopt the FAME policy, which is that Financial Advice is Mandatory for Everyone. Though it is, under the proposed policy, mandatory for investors to seek financial advice, they are free to choose. It is reasonable to expect that most investors would gradually listen to the financial advice; it is in their own interest. This can reduce the role of sentiment or irrationality in the market. And, stock prices can become less volatile.

An analogy will help. In the field of medicine, people can buy medicines on the basis of a medical prescription. Similarly, there is a need for a financial prescription.

At present, the policy framework for financial advisors is not appropriate. Of course, there is a need for a big improvement in the selection, education and certification of financial advisors. And, the latter are all, under the proposed policy, required to advise on the basis of “fundamentals”, and not sentiment.

The policy suggested here is for a transition to a stage where investors get used to the idea that financial advice is indeed useful. If financial advice is mandatory, the size of the market for such advice will be huge. It is expected then that we will have greater economies of scale in the industry and the consultation fee will be affordable. The policy is useful in not just the stock market but asset markets and the financial system more generally.

This completes the five-point mantra for macro-financial stability. We turn now to an overview.

A perspective

The “new” policy tools here include (a) two tax/subsidy schemes to stabilise the domestic price of oil and food, and deal with cost-push inflation, and (b) a tax scheme to stabilise the exchange rate. Of course, the least familiar is the FAME policy here. There are also nuances here to, what are otherwise, familiar policies.

With multiple schemes, we have some “diversification” and so the burden on the fiscal deficit in any year need not be large, if at all. However, in case there is a significant effect on the fiscal deficit in any year, there can be a cut on some less important expenditure items temporarily to reduce the fiscal deficit. This makes the proposed policy here an improvement over what has come to be unconventional fiscal policy, which was used in Europe in the aftermath of the Russia-Ukraine war to deal with cost-push inflation.

A safeguard against political pressure at the MoF in framing tax or subsidy schemes for macroeconomic stability can be that we have an independent body/council which advises the MoF on the fiscal policy in so far as it deals with macroeconomic stability. The advice can be somewhat mandatory. The model here is inspired by an institution like the Finance Commission in India though this is for a different purpose.

How are we actually doing in India on maintaining macro-financial stability? Our strength is FIT though this can be improved. Also, it is good that we have low external debt. However, the fiscal deficit is, appropriately measured, very high. This needs to change. Also, we have financial repression in banks; this needs to be phased out.

Though the foreign exchange reserves have fallen substantially (particularly after considering the short positions of the RBI in the forward market) we still have large foreign exchange reserves at the time of completing this article (early June 2026). These are useful but it is better to increasingly switch to the FIST policy. Also, an important weakness in India lies in the lack of competitiveness in international trade, and inadequate preparation in energy security, which is why the real effective exchange rate (REET) has fallen substantially over the last several quarters. So, we need to go beyond policy that is directly relevant for macro-financial stability.

On asset price stability, we do not score well but that is the case across the globe (it is a different matter that in the last several quarters the stock indices have been doing very well in several countries but not in India). There is a vulnerability in the derivatives segment, which is particularly serious in India. We could pioneer the FAME policy in India.

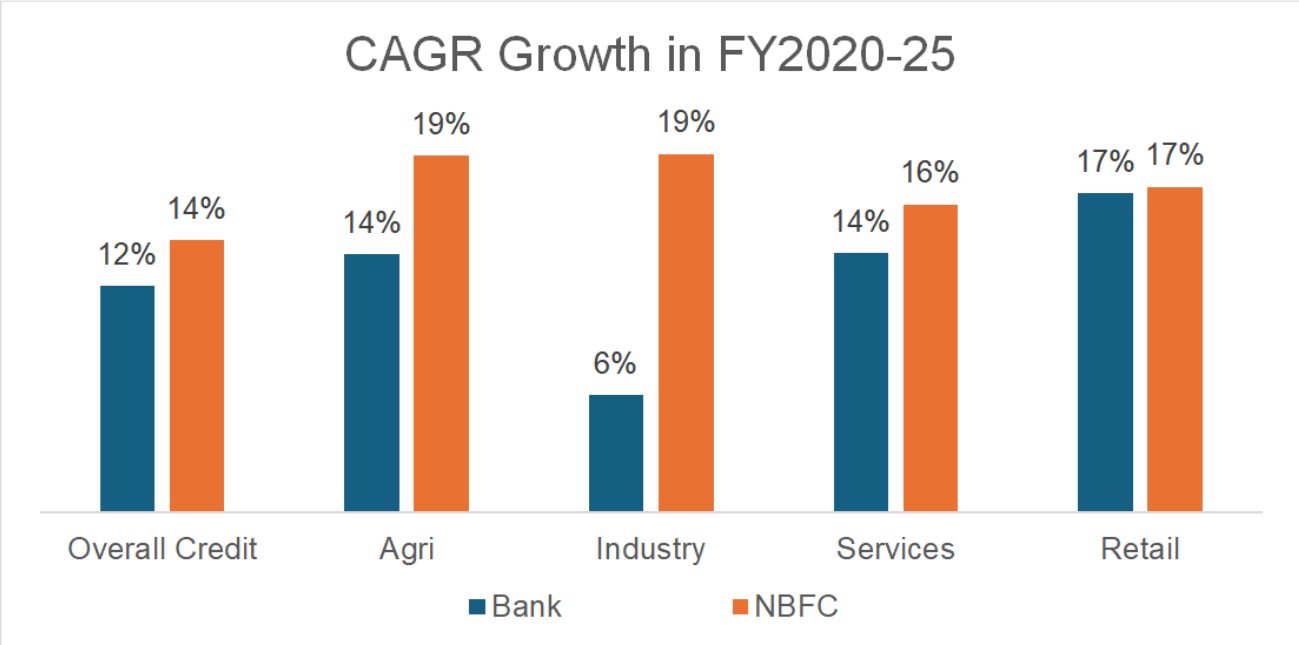
Banks vs NBFCs: Emerging Trends and Outlook

Anurag Mittal
Senior Executive Vice President & Head-Fixed Income
UTI Asset Management Co.Ltd.

India's credit market is entering a more mature phase, where the debate is no longer about banks versus NBFCs, but about how both can finance the next leg of growth. Banks bring scale, low-cost funding and systemic stability, while NBFCs offer specialised underwriting, flexibility and deeper access to underserved borrowers.

This complementarity is becoming increasingly important as India's credit cycle broadens beyond large corporates into households, MSMEs, services, trade, supply chains and semi-urban markets.

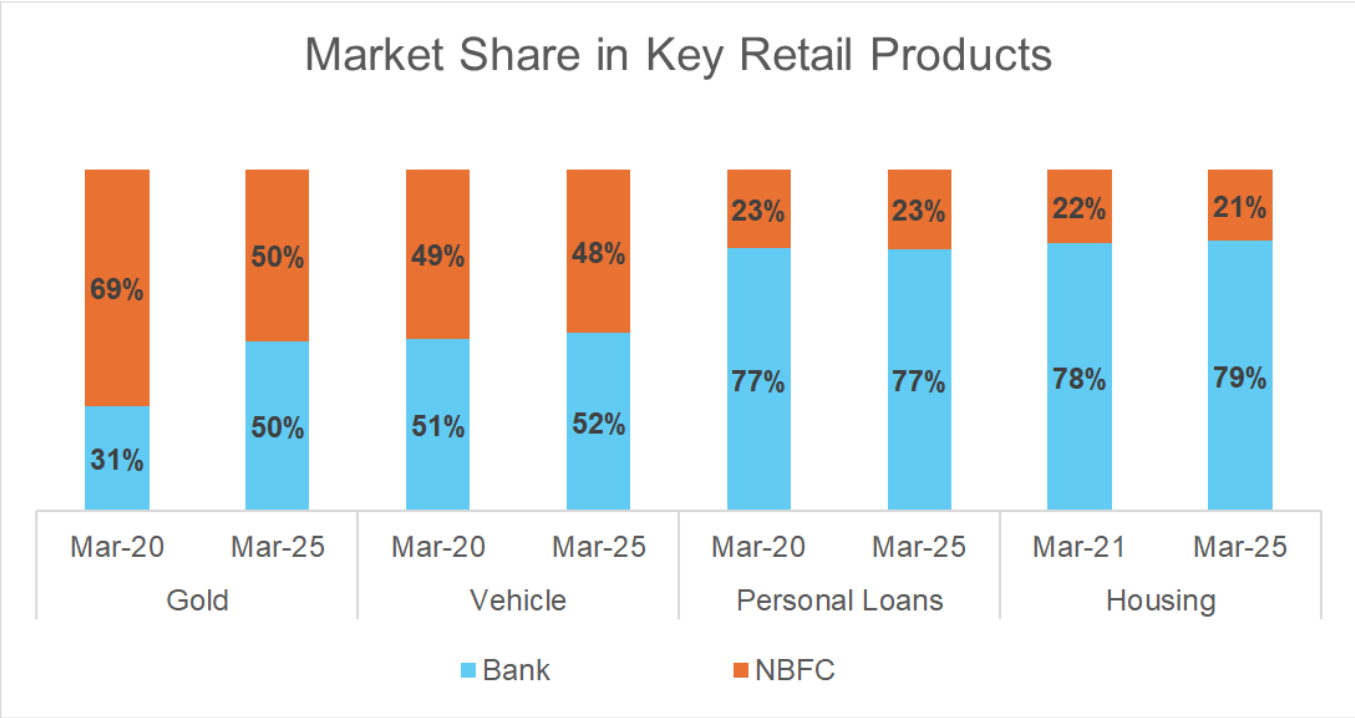
Growth Trends: Banks and NBFCs



Over the last few years, both banks and NBFCs have recorded strong credit growth, though the drivers have differed significantly.

Scheduled commercial banks' non-food credit increased from Rs. 103.2 lakh crore in March 2020 to Rs. 212.9 lakh crore in March 2026, reflecting a CAGR of around 13%. Growth was led by retail and services lending, with personal loans[1] rising from Rs. 27.3 lakh crore to Rs. 69.4 lakh crore and services credit increasing from Rs. 26.7 lakh crore to Rs. 60.6 lakh crore, registering growth of 16.8% & 14.7%, respectively. Agriculture credit also expanded steadily, while industrial credit grew at a comparatively slower pace of 8% during the period. This underscores the shift in bank lending towards households, MSMEs, trade and services rather than large corporate borrowers.

NBFCs have grown even faster, with loans and advances rising from Rs. 24.6 lakh crore in March 2020 to Rs. 52.1 lakh crore in September 2025, implying a CAGR of around 15%. Growth was broad-based, with retail loans expanding faster at about 18% over the same period.



Gross Loans (Rs. lakh crore)	FY20	FY21	FY22	FY23	FY24	FY25	CAGR FY2020-25
Banking Sector	103.2	108.9	118.4	136.6	164.1	182.1	12%
NBFC Sector	24.6	27.1	29.0	34.1	40.5	48.4	14%

Market Share Dynamics: Winners and Losers
While both banks and NBFCs have grown their retail loan book, the competitive landscape between banks and NBFCs varies significantly across different retail products.

Source: RBI; CRISIL Intelligence, CRIF Highmark. For housing loans market share, NBFCs include HFCs as well

Housing Finance
Banks continue to dominate housing finance. Following the merger of HDFC Ltd. with HDFC Bank, the banking sector's share in housing loans increased substantially. Banks now account for the majority (~80%) of outstanding individual housing credit, benefiting from lower funding costs and strong customer relationships. While housing finance companies remain important players, banks have strengthened their leadership position in this segment.

Gold Loans
Gold loans present a contrasting trend. Historically, NBFCs dominated this market due to their specialised branch networks and quick disbursement processes. However, banks have gained market share in recent years by expanding secured retail lending and leveraging their lower cost of funds. By FY2025, the market share of Banks has inched up to ~50% as compared to 31% a few years earlier. Regulatory efforts aimed at harmonising lending norms for gold-backed loans are likely to further reduce differences between the two sectors.

Vehicle Finance
Vehicle finance remains one of the strongest segments for NBFCs. RBI data indicate that NBFCs increased their share of the combined bank-NBFC vehicle finance market from around 44% in FY2023 to nearly 48% in FY2025. NBFCs possess deeper dealer networks, faster approval processes and greater expertise in financing used vehicles and self-employed borrowers. Their presence in semi-urban and rural markets also gives them access to customer segments that banks often find difficult to serve efficiently.

Personal Loans and Consumer Lending
Personal loans have become one of the most contested retail segments, attracting both banks and NBFCs due to their favourable risk-reward profile. The market is dominated by banks on account of their wide presence. However, NBFCs have carved out a niche in consumer finance, particularly in small-ticket loans, point-of-sale financing and digital lending. Their ability to leverage technology and alternative data has enabled them to serve customers who may not qualify under traditional bank underwriting models.

Over the past two years, growth in these segments has moderated after the rapid expansion of FY2021–FY2024, which led to borrower overleveraging and higher credit costs in some pockets. Going forward, the regulatory action on risk weights as well as intervention with respect to market practices is expected to create a more conducive environment for this segment to grow.

Regulatory Convergence: RBI's Push Towards a Level Playing Field

A key development has been the RBI's move toward regulatory convergence between banks and NBFCs. After the liquidity stress that followed the IL&FS crisis, the RBI strengthened oversight of NBFCs through tighter governance, prudential, liquidity and disclosure norms.

The introduction of the Scale-Based Regulation (SBR) framework for NBFCs marked a significant shift in regulatory philosophy. Under this framework, larger and systemically important NBFCs are subject to tighter prudential norms, governance standards and supervisory oversight, bringing them closer to the regulatory standards applicable to banks. The RBI has also progressively aligned regulations relating to capital adequacy, liquidity risk management, asset classification, provisioning and disclosure requirements.

The increase in risk weights on unsecured consumer credit for both banks and NBFCs, the harmonisation of norms governing lending against gold collateral, and the emphasis on responsible digital lending practices reflect a common regulatory approach across lender categories. The co-lending framework has also been refined to facilitate collaboration between banks and NBFCs while ensuring consistent customer protection standards.

The broader objective is not to make NBFCs identical to banks, but to ensure that similar risks are regulated in a similar manner. This convergence is strengthening confidence in the NBFC sector, improving financial stability and creating a more balanced competitive environment where institutions compete based on efficiency, customer service and underwriting capabilities rather than regulatory differences.

Improving Health of Banks and NBFCs

The health of both banks and NBFCs has improved materially since 2020, supported by balance-sheet repair, stronger capital buffers, tighter regulation and better risk management.

For banks, the improvement is most visible in asset quality and profitability. The gross non-performing assets ratio of banks, which stood at 7.3% in March 2021, declined to a multi-decadal low of 2.3% by March 2025 and further to 2.2% by September 2025. Capital buffers have also remained strong, with the capital to risk-weighted assets ratio of scheduled commercial banks at 17.2% in September 2025, well above regulatory requirements. Profitability has strengthened as well, with banks reporting return on assets of 1.4% in FY2025 as against 0.7% in FY2021.

NBFCs have also emerged stronger after the liquidity and confidence challenges of the FY2018-2020 period. As the RBI highlighted in its recent Financial Stability Report, NBFCs maintained robust capital buffers (CRAR of 25.8% as of March 2025) and recorded an improvement in asset quality with Gross NPA ratio dropping from 6.4% in March 2021 to ~3% in March 2025.

While the improvement in financial health across both sectors provides a stronger foundation for credit expansion, lending remains inherently cyclical and sensitive to underwriting discipline. Institutions with diversified loan portfolios, granular exposures and prudent risk management are likely to deliver more stable performance through credit cycles, compared with lenders with high concentrations in relatively riskier segments such as unsecured personal loans and microfinance. Recent trends in FY2025 and FY2026 further reinforce that entities with higher share of personal and microfinance loans saw weakness in profitability.

Banking Sector	FY2019	FY2021	FY2023	FY2025	H1FY26
Gross NPA (%)	9.2%	7.3%	3.9%	2.3%	2.2%
Net NPA (%)	3.8%	2.4%	1.0%	0.5%	0.5%
Return on Assets (%)	-0.1%	0.7%	1.1%	1.4%	1.3%
CRAR / Capital adequacy (%)	14.3%	16.2%	17.2%	17.4%	17.2%

NBFC Sector	FY2021	FY2022	FY2023	FY2024	FY2025
GNPA ratio (%)	6.4%	6.2%	4.3%	4.0%	3.0%
Return on Assets (%)	~1.5%	2.1%	3.3%	3.3%	2.4%
CRAR / Capital adequacy (%)	25.0%	26.9%	27.5%	26.6%	25.8%

Outlook and Emerging Trends

The outlook for both sectors remains stable, although growth is likely to become more balanced.

For banks, credit growth should continue to be supported by retail lending, housing, MSMEs and services. Asset quality remains strong, capital levels are comfortable and corporate balance sheets are healthier than in previous cycles. However, deposit mobilisation and margin pressures may emerge as key challenges.

For NBFCs, growth opportunities remain significant in vehicle finance, gold loans, equipment finance, supply-chain finance and MSME lending. Well-capitalised NBFCs with diversified funding sources and strong governance standards are likely to deliver healthy growth with stable profitability.

Several structural trends are likely to shape both sectors –

1. Co-lending partnerships between banks and NBFCs will expand, combining low-cost funding with specialised origination capabilities.
2. Securitisation and direct assignment will remain important tools for liquidity management of NBFCs. These provide access to priority sector and retail loans for banks without expanding their physical infrastructure.
3. Secured lending is likely to gain preference over unsecured consumer credit as lenders focus on risk-adjusted growth. There will be pockets where unsecured consumer credit will grow at a healthy pace, albeit with a better risk calibration by lenders.
4. Digital public infrastructure, including Account Aggregators and GST-based underwriting, will improve credit access for underserved borrowers.
5. NBFCs often serve as the first point of formal credit for borrowers with informal income streams. Over time, many such borrowers graduate to the banking system after building a formal repayment record. This trend is likely to continue to expand the formal credit network amongst borrowers.
6. Regulatory convergence between banks and NBFCs will reduce arbitrage opportunities and strengthen systemic resilience.

Conclusion

India's credit ecosystem is unlikely to be defined by a zero-sum contest between banks and NBFCs. Its future will depend on how effectively both sectors combine bank balance-sheet strength with NBFC origination, underwriting and last-mile capabilities. Banks provide stability, scale and low-cost funding, while NBFCs offer innovation, flexibility and last-mile reach.

Market share will continue to shift across products—banks may gain ground in secured retail and gold loans, while NBFCs are likely to remain strong in vehicle finance and specialised MSME lending. At the same time, collaboration through co-lending, securitisation and digital partnerships will become increasingly important.

As India moves toward becoming a larger and more formalised economy, both banks and NBFCs will remain indispensable pillars of the financial system, working together to expand credit access and support sustainable growth.

Ind AS 118: Redefining Financial Storytelling for Investors

Dr.Anand Banka
Partner/ Risk & Quality - Technical Accounting Lead Audit & Assurance
M S K C & Associates LLP - A member firm of BDO International

Introduction

In India's boardrooms and investment committees, financial performance is often debated less on what is reported and more on how it is interpreted. Over time, a parallel language of "adjusted EBITDA," "core profit," and "exceptional items" has emerged - shaping investor perception as much as, if not more than, the audited numbers themselves. The result is a peculiar paradox: financial statements are technically robust, yet comparability and clarity remain elusive.

This is particularly noteworthy given that the preparation and presentation of financial statements in India are governed by the structured requirements of Schedule III to the Companies Act, 2013. Schedule III prescribes a uniform format for presenting financial statements, including the Statement of Profit and Loss, with the objective of ensuring consistency and comparability. Yet, despite this standardised framework, variations in interpretation, classification, and supplemental performance measures continue to create divergence in how financial performance is understood in practice.

The proposed Standard Ind AS 118, aligned with IFRS 18, seeks to reset this equilibrium.

At first glance, the Standard appears to address presentation - a reshuffling of line items and subtotals. In reality, its implications are far more consequential. It challenges the flexibility companies have historically exercised in narrating financial performance and replaces it with a structured, disciplined framework anchored in consistency and transparency. In doing so, it shifts the centre of gravity from management-defined, non-comparable non-GAAP measures to standardised and auditable performance metrics.

For investors, this represents a move toward sharper insight and reduced noise. For directors and audit committees, it raises the bar on oversight and accountability. And for India's capital markets, it marks a critical step toward greater credibility in an increasingly global and scrutinised investment landscape.

Why This Matters

This reform is particularly timely. India's capital markets have witnessed a surge in retail participation in recent years, with investors increasingly relying on headline metrics such as EBITDA, operating margins, and "adjusted" earnings. Concurrently, companies have broadened their use of management-defined performance measures to shape financial narratives—often without consistent reconciliation or standardisation, a common example being the widespread use of "exceptional items." The result is an environment where narrative-driven interpretations increasingly overshadow the underlying financial statements, influencing investor perception more than the reported numbers themselves.

Ind AS 118 seeks to correct this imbalance by introducing clearly defined categories—operating, investing, and financing—along with mandatory subtotals such as operating profit. By reducing flexibility in classification and presentation, it enhances comparability across companies within sectors. For investors, this translates into a more reliable basis for benchmarking performance and making informed capital allocation decisions.

A particularly significant change is the introduction of Management Performance Measures (MPMs). Adjusted metrics—such as adjusted EBITDA, adjusted EPS, and constant currency growth—must now be explicitly disclosed, reconciled to Ind AS-defined numbers, and explained. This introduces long-overdue discipline and enables users of financial statements to distinguish between sustainable performance and management adjustments.

Sectoral Implications

The impact of these changes becomes clearer when viewed through the lens of specific sectors in India.

One of the most significant, yet less discussed, implications of the proposed Ind AS 118 for India relates to the presentation of expenses, particularly in the manufacturing sector.

A large number of Indian manufacturing companies currently incur expenses by nature, with a significant portion of key production-related costs aggregated under "Other Expenses." This often obscures visibility into cost structures and makes it difficult for investors to derive critical metrics such as Gross profits, Gross margins and Cost of goods sold (COGS).

Under the framework proposed by Ind AS 118, there is likely to be a shift towards presentation by function. This will enable clearer identification of the cost of sales, distribution expenses, administrative overheads, etc.

This shift allows for direct computation of gross margins—bringing Indian manufacturing reporting in line with global norms and significantly strengthening comparability across companies.

In the IT sector, companies frequently report adjusted operating margins and growth metrics that exclude one-offs or currency effects. While useful, these have lacked standardisation.

With MPM disclosures, such adjustments will now be reconciled and explained, allowing investors to assess whether exclusions are genuinely non-recurring or form part of a recurring pattern that inflates performance.

In infrastructure and capital-heavy sectors, the distinction between operating performance and financing costs is critical. Significant borrowing and interest costs can often blur true performance. The clearer segregation mandated under the proposed Ind AS 118 improves visibility into Core operating efficiency and Leverage-driven returns. This is particularly valuable for both equity investors and lenders assessing risk and sustainability.

Large, diversified conglomerates in India present another interesting case. With operations spanning multiple sectors, including manufacturing, energy, infrastructure, retail and financial, the classification of income and expenses can significantly influence how performance is perceived. Ind AS 118's requirement for structured categorisation will enhance transparency, enabling stakeholders to better understand the underlying drivers of profitability.

Governance Perspective

From a governance standpoint, Ind AS 118 significantly elevates expectations for boards and audit committees.

With SEBI already tightening oversight around disclosures, investor communication, and transparency, this standard reinforces regulatory intent by embedding discipline into financial reporting. Audit committees will need to focus more closely on the definition and consistency of MPMs, the rationale for adjustments and the alignment between reported numbers and investor messaging.

The role of regulator is expected to remain central in this transition. Heightened scrutiny of earnings presentations and adjusted metrics is likely, and over time, regulatory guidance on MPM usage may emerge. This will further strengthen the linkage between audited financials and market communication, reducing the risk of selective or misleading disclosures.

Implementation Challenges

Despite its benefits, the implementation of Ind AS 118 in India will not be without challenges. Companies will need to reconfigure their chart of accounts and reporting systems, enhance data granularity for classification and disclosure and revisit internal KPIs and performance reporting frameworks.

Equally important is the cultural shift required. Many organisations have historically relied on EBITDA and similar metrics as primary performance indicators. Moving toward standardised operating profit as a central metric will require change across finance functions, leadership teams, and investor relations.

Certain sectors—such as financial services and platform-based businesses—may also face interpretational complexities requiring additional guidance.

However, these challenges should be viewed in the context of the broader transformation that the standard enables. By enhancing comparability, tightening discipline around performance measures, and improving the clarity of financial statements, Ind AS 118 strengthens the overall credibility of financial reporting in India.

Conclusion

Ind AS 118 represents far more than a change in presentation—it is a shift toward comparability-driven capital discipline in Indian markets.

As the standard takes hold, the gap between "reported performance" and "explained performance" will narrow. Investors will rely less on adjusted narratives and more on standardised, audited numbers. Boards will face greater accountability for how performance is measured and communicated. And regulators will have a stronger foundation for ensuring consistency and fairness.

Looking ahead, this could trigger a deeper transformation. Over time, companies that rely excessively on adjustments may find it harder to sustain credibility, while those with strong underlying economics will stand out more clearly. Financial reporting, in effect, will become less about persuasion and more about precision.

Further, one of the emerging considerations in the Indian context is whether Schedule III of the Companies Act, 2013, would require amendments to align with the principles proposed to be introduced under Ind AS 118, or whether the existing framework already provides sufficient flexibility to accommodate these requirements. While Schedule III prescribes a structured format for presentation, its ability to absorb the enhanced classification and disclosure principles under Ind AS 118 remains a subject of discussion. Preparers of financial statements would therefore need to closely monitor regulatory developments in this area to ensure timely and compliant implementation.

The next phase of Indian capital markets will not be defined by how well companies tell their story—but by how transparently their numbers speak for themselves.

India's Insurance Story: Building a More Resilient Nation

Anand Rathi
Chairman
Anand Rathi Group

India's economic journey over the last three decades has been remarkable. Rising incomes, entrepreneurial ambition, deeper capital markets and greater financial inclusion have transformed the way Indians create wealth. Yet, one important aspect of financial planning continues to receive less attention than it deserves, protecting that wealth.

Insurance penetration in India has improved steadily over the years, but it still remains below that of many developed economies and several Asian peers. Behind this statistic lies a more important reality. Millions of Indian families and businesses continue to remain financially vulnerable to unforeseen events such as illness, accidents, natural disasters and the loss of a family's primary source of income.

This is not merely an industry concern. It is an economic one.

Years of savings and hard work can be undone by a single unforeseen event. As India aspires to become a developed economy, building financial resilience must become as important as building financial prosperity. Wealth creation and wealth protection are not competing objectives; they complement each other.

Having spent over four decades in financial services, I have seen India's financial priorities evolve, from encouraging savings to enabling investments and wealth creation. The next phase, in my view, is about protecting what people have worked so hard to build. Insurance should therefore not be viewed merely as another financial product. It is an essential pillar of long-term financial security for individuals, businesses and the economy.

A Decade of Policy Momentum

The encouraging aspect is that India's insurance sector is entering one of the most promising phases in its history.

The Government's vision of "Insurance for All by 2047" has provided a clear direction for the industry. Equally important, that vision is being supported by a series of regulatory reforms that are making insurance more accessible, more innovative and easier to distribute.

The regulatory approach has become increasingly progressive. The introduction of the "use and file" framework has enabled insurers to introduce products faster and respond more quickly to changing customer needs. Initiatives such as Bima Sugam have the potential to simplify the insurance journey by creating a common digital marketplace where customers can compare, purchase and manage policies more seamlessly.

The decision to permit 100% foreign direct investment in the insurance sector is another significant milestone. Beyond capital, it brings access to global expertise, product innovation, technology and risk management capabilities. Every mature insurance market has benefited from a healthy exchange of global knowledge and local execution. India is now well positioned to do the same.

Taken together, these reforms send a clear message. Insurance is increasingly being recognised not merely as a financial service, but as an important instrument of economic resilience and social security.

Technology Will Expand Reach

Technology is changing every segment of financial services, and insurance is no exception.

Artificial Intelligence, advanced analytics and digital platforms are transforming underwriting, fraud detection, claims servicing and customer engagement. Data is helping insurers understand risks more accurately, while digital platforms are making insurance available to customers who previously had limited access to financial advice.

Perhaps the greatest contribution of technology will be its ability to reduce the cost of distribution. India has thousands of towns and villages where traditional distribution models have not always been economically viable. Digital infrastructure and AI-driven processes can help bridge that gap, making insurance more accessible across geographies and customer segments.

Technology will undoubtedly improve efficiency. It will make insurance simpler to buy and easier to service. But technology alone cannot build confidence in insurance. That depends on trust.

Trust Will Continue to Define Success

Insurance is unlike most financial products. Customers are making decisions about risks they hope never materialise. The value of a policy is often realised years after it is purchased. That makes trust fundamental to the relationship between the customer and the insurance ecosystem.

Trust is built through sound advice, transparency and consistent service. It is also tested at a very specific moment, the moment a claim is made.

A policy may be purchased in a matter of minutes, but a claim is when the customer discovers whether the promise made on paper translates into meaningful financial support. In many ways, the claims experience defines the credibility of the industry. A transparent, fair and efficient claims process does more than settle a claim; it reinforces confidence in insurance itself. Equally, delays, unnecessary complexity or poor communication can erode years of trust, not just in one insurer but in insurance as a whole.

As the industry works towards greater insurance penetration, improving the claims experience must remain as important as expanding distribution. Customers must feel confident that when they need insurance the most, the system will respond with speed, fairness and empathy.

Distribution Will Drive India's Insurance Story

One lesson has remained constant throughout the evolution of India's financial sector: products alone do not create markets. Distribution does.

India's aspiration of achieving universal insurance coverage cannot be realised unless insurance reaches every district, every town and eventually every pincode. This requires a distribution ecosystem that is broad, accessible and customer-centric.

Banks, insurers, brokers, corporate agents, PoSPs, digital platforms and fintech partnerships all have very important role to play. No single channel will be sufficient for a country as diverse as India.

Equally important is the quality of advice. Customers often know what they wish to insure. They may not always know what risks they should be protecting against. The role of an advisor is to bridge that gap by understanding the customer's needs before recommending a solution.

At Anand Rathi Insurance Brokers, we have always believed that advice should begin with understanding risk rather than selling products. The objective is not merely to place insurance. It is to ensure that customers receive protection that is appropriate to their circumstances. As products become more sophisticated and customer expectations continue to evolve, trusted advice will become even more valuable.

The Decade Ahead

Every industry experiences moments when multiple forces come together to create long-term structural growth. I believe Indian insurance has reached such a moment.

Economic growth is expanding the insurable population. Regulatory reforms are encouraging innovation. Technology is reducing distribution costs. Global investment is bringing fresh expertise and capital. Consumer awareness is steadily improving. Each of these developments is significant in its own right. Together, they have the potential to reshape India's insurance landscape over the coming decade.

The opportunity extends well beyond metropolitan India. Tier II and Tier III cities are witnessing rising incomes, greater financial literacy and growing demand for comprehensive financial solutions. Healthcare costs continue to rise. Climate-related risks are becoming more visible. Businesses are becoming more organised. All these trends make insurance increasingly relevant to everyday financial planning.

I believe India has the opportunity to evolve from an underpenetrated insurance market into one of the world's most dynamic and mature insurance ecosystems. Success, however, should not be measured only by premium volumes or market size. It should be measured by the number of families that remain financially secure after an unexpected event, the number of businesses that recover quickly from adversity, and the confidence with which people pursue their aspirations knowing that their risks are adequately protected.

For insurers, brokers, regulators, technology partners and investors, the opportunity is significant. More importantly, so is the responsibility.

India's insurance story is no longer about catching up with global benchmarks. It is about building an ecosystem that reflects the country's strengths; progressive regulation, digital innovation, trusted advice and an unwavering focus on the customer.

India's aspiration of Insurance penetration at 8% of GDP by 2047 can be achieved by a viable , motivated and trusted distribution ecosystem , which will develop in free-market forces of determination of commissions and brokerage .

A resilient economy is built not only by creating wealth, but by protecting it. If the industry remains committed to expanding access, strengthening trust and delivering on its promise when it matters most, I believe the coming decade will mark a defining chapter in India's insurance journey.

Board Effectiveness: A Strategic Reset for Modern Boards

Navnit Singh
Chairman & Regional Managing Director
Korn Ferry India

When SEBI mandated board evaluation through the LODR Regulations in 2015, it brought board effectiveness into the formal governance agenda. For many years thereafter, board evaluations provided a structured opportunity to review how the board was operating and reinforce good governance practices.

Today, leading boards are approaching this exercise very differently. What began as a governance mechanism is evolving into a broader conversation on board effectiveness. Done well, it becomes one of the few structured moments in the year when the board pauses to ask itself a more fundamental question: Are we truly adding the value the organization needs from us at this stage of its journey?

From Review to Readiness

While oversight, risk management and governance remain foundational responsibilities, today's boards operate in an environment shaped by technological disruption, evolving stakeholder expectations, capital volatility and geopolitical uncertainty. Growth itself has become more complex, requiring boards to engage not only with performance but with resilience, capability and long-term competitiveness.

As a result, board effectiveness assessments are evolving into exercises in strategic readiness. They provide an opportunity to examine whether the board is directing its attention, expertise and influence toward the issues that will matter most in the years ahead.

This distinction matters. A board may be compliant and still not be effective. It may receive detailed information and still not focus on the most consequential issues. It may have highly experienced directors and still not fully leverage their expertise. It may maintain a constructive relationship with management and still not create sufficient challenge. It may discuss strategy and still struggle to shape critical choices.

Ultimately, board effectiveness is not simply about how well the board functions. It is about the value it creates.

The most effective assessments therefore focus on four dimensions that shape the board's ability to create value: purpose, people, process and partnership.

Purpose: Ensuring the Board Focuses on What Matters Most

Every board operates under the same constraint: time.

Yet the demands on that time continue to expand. Financial performance, risk, succession, technology, sustainability, stakeholder expectations and growth all compete for attention. In such an environment, the board agenda becomes more than a schedule. It becomes a signal of what the board truly values.

A strong board effectiveness exercise therefore prompts more fundamental questions: Is the board spending sufficient time on the issues that will shape the organization's future? Is it anticipating shifts in markets, technology and customer behavior? Is it engaging deeply enough on long-term competitiveness, capital allocation, leadership readiness and strategic risk?

If future-oriented topics consistently receive insufficient airtime, the board risks becoming highly efficient at managing the present while underprepared for the future.

This is a critical shift. It encourages boards to move beyond oversight to foresight. The Chair plays a particularly important role in this regard. Through agenda-setting and prioritization, the Chair helps ensure that the board's limited time is directed toward the issues that will have the greatest impact on the organization's future.

People: Moving from Credentials to Contribution

Board composition has traditionally been discussed in terms of experience, independence, stature, domain knowledge and governance credibility. These remain important. But the effectiveness lens pushes the conversation further. It asks not only who sits at the table, but how effectively the table operates.

The exercise brings attention to the dynamics within the boardroom: Are all directors contributing meaningfully? Are some voices more dominant than others? Is expertise being used only within committees, or is it shaping broader strategic discussion? Are new directors being onboarded deeply enough to contribute early? Does the board have sufficient exposure to future-facing capabilities such as AI, cybersecurity, new business models or emerging market shifts? This is where board effectiveness becomes a capability conversation.

The future-ready board does not need every director to be an expert in every emerging topic. But it must have access to the right perspectives through board refreshment, external advisors, structured learning, business immersion and deeper engagement with management.

The effectiveness exercise often uncovers capability gaps and contribution patterns that traditional governance reviews overlook. The objective is not to identify these gaps after disruption arrives, but to surface them early enough for the board to adapt. The shift is from viewing board capability as static to something that must continually evolve alongside the organization.

The most effective boards are learning boards. They do not rely solely on accumulated experience. They continuously renew their understanding of the markets, technologies and leadership challenges shaping the future.

Process: Designing for Better Decisions

Board processes - agendas, pre-reads, meeting cadence, information flow and decision protocols - are often treated as procedural elements. In practice, they shape how effectively the board can think, debate, and decide.

If materials arrive too late, directors cannot reflect deeply. If presentations consume most of the meeting, discussion is compressed. If committee insights do not flow into the full board, it loses an integrated view. If strategic discussions are always placed after statutory items, the future is discussed when energy is lowest. If decision rights are unclear, management either over-escalates or under-engages.

A strong board effectiveness exercise brings these elements under scrutiny. It asks whether current processes enable meaningful engagement or constrain it. Ultimately, the objective is not better administration. It is better judgment.

Most importantly, it helps boards distinguish between information, discussion and decision. Not everything requires equal attention. Some items require noting, others debate, alignment or decision.

The best boards are disciplined about where they spend their cognitive energy. The Chair plays an important role in shaping the quality of board process — ensuring that meetings create sufficient space for discussion, that strategic issues receive appropriate attention and that the board's time is deployed where it can create the greatest value. They recognize that the quality of board time is one of the strongest predictors of its impact.

Partnership: Trust Is the Foundation, Challenge Is the Multiplier

The relationship between the board and management is one of the most important determinants of board effectiveness. Yet it is also one of the most difficult to calibrate.

Too little trust can create defensiveness and limit transparency. Too much comfort can reduce challenges. Excessive distance can prevent meaningful insight, while excessive involvement can blur the distinction between governance and management.

A strong board effectiveness exercise helps assess whether the balance is right.

It examines whether management is comfortable bringing early-stage ideas, strategic dilemmas and trade-offs to the board, or whether only polished proposals are presented. It also asks whether directors are able to challenge assumptions without creating friction, and whether engagement is broad enough beyond the Chair and CEO.

The best board-management partnerships are not merely cordial. They are candid. They allow disagreement without loss of trust. They encourage management to use the board as a sounding body. They allow directors to ask persistent questions while respecting management's role. They create enough chemistry for openness, and enough independence for objectivity.

This is especially important in moments of transition: rapid growth, listing readiness, portfolio shifts, succession, technology disruption, international expansion or regulatory change. In such moments, management needs more than oversight. It needs a board that can challenge, advise, connect patterns and help accelerate decisions.

Trust creates access. Challenge creates value. The effectiveness exercise helps boards strengthen both.

The Chair as the Orchestrator of Board Effectiveness

No board effectiveness journey can succeed without the Chair.

The Chair plays a unique role in shaping the board's tone, agenda, rhythm and quality of conversation. An effective Chair does more than orchestrate governance; they orchestrate board energy. They ensure the board does not become trapped in operational detail, encourage management to bring sharper strategic choices forward, broaden engagement beyond the Chair-CEO axis and help the board increase pace without compromising rigor.

This is why board effectiveness often becomes a Chair effectiveness conversation — not in a personal sense, but in an institutional one.

The Measure of Board Effectiveness

The real output of a board effectiveness exercise is not an evaluation report. It is a better board.

The board should emerge with a practical action plan. What will change in the next meeting? What will change in the next quarter? What will become part of the annual rhythm?

The answers may include a sharper annual board calendar, dedicated strategy deep-dives, clearer agenda-setting principles, better pre-read discipline, more focused succession reviews, structured exposure to business heads, informal director interactions, learning sessions and a clear follow-through mechanism.

The true measure of this exercise is the shift it creates. Has the board become more focused on the issues that matter most? Has it improved the quality of strategic debate and decision-making? Has it strengthened its ability to challenge and support management effectively? Has it increased its contribution to long-term enterprise value?

Without meaningful change, board effectiveness remains reflective. With it, it is transformative.

Rise of Alternatives in India

Piyush Gupta
Chief Executive Officer
Investec Funds India

Historically, Indian investor allocations have been dominated by traditional savings and investment products such as term deposits, public equities, government securities, top rated corporate bonds, tax free bonds and mutual funds. While these continue to represent the largest pools of capital, the composition of the investment landscape has evolved meaningfully over the last decade. Investors today are increasingly allocating capital towards alternative asset classes including private equity, venture capital, private credit, infrastructure, real estate, REITs and InvITs.

This shift is visible across India's asset management industry. As of FY25, bank term deposits remained the largest pool of savings at c. 43% of GDP. In comparison, mutual fund AUM stood at c. 20% of GDP and SEBI-registered alternatives at c. 4% of GDP.

Alternative investments have been one of the fastest-growing segments within the asset management industry and have become an increasingly important part of India's broader investment ecosystem.

The global investment landscape has undergone a similar evolution. Alternative asset classes, once viewed as niche allocations within institutional portfolios, have become an established part of the investment ecosystem and have emerged as mainstream asset classes in their own right. As global allocations to alternatives have increased, similar trends have begun to emerge in India, supported by a growing investor base, an expanding alternatives ecosystem and an evolving regulatory framework.

Rise of Global Alternatives

Global private alternatives assets under management (AUM) have expanded significantly over the last decade, increasing c. 4x since 2014. The growth reflects the increasing role of alternative investments within institutional and private wealth portfolios.

Private equity continues to represent the largest segment of the global alternatives market. As of CY24, Private equity accounted for c. 69% of global private alternatives AUM, followed by Private credit at 12%, Real Estate at 10% and Infrastructure at 9%. Based on current forecasts as per various estimates, private equity is expected to grow at 9%-11% annually till CY30, while private credit is expected to grow at a faster rate of 12%-14%. Within real assets, infrastructure is projected to grow at 11%-13% annually and real estate at 7%-9%.

Institutional capital allocation to alternatives has also increased steadily over recent years. As per Preqin, average institutional allocation to alternatives has reached c. 23%. The trend reflects the growing acceptance of alternatives as a core portfolio allocation rather than a tactical allocation on account of diversification benefits, lower correlation with traditional asset classes and public markets, potential for higher risk-adjusted returns and, in certain asset classes, ability to provide inflation protection.

Despite the strong growth witnessed globally, alternatives penetration varies significantly across markets. Private alternatives AUM as a percentage of GDP varies significantly across regions – with North American at 28%, Europe at 17%, APAC at 10% and India at 5%. The gap highlights the significant headroom for growth in emerging markets, particularly India, as institutional capital pools deepen and investor participation broadens.

Growth of India's Alternatives Ecosystem

India's alternatives industry has expanded rapidly over the last decade. Cumulative commitments raised by SEBI-registered Alternative Investment Funds (AIFs) have increased from a mere c. INR 15bn in FY13 to over INR 17tn in FY26. Further, these are expected to grow to c. INR 50tn by FY30, compounding annually by c. 32%.

As of FY26, REITs and InvITs have scaled to an AuM of c. INR 10tn, with REITs representing c. INR 3tn and InvITs representing c. INR 7tn. Further the combined AuM is expected to double to INR 20tn by FY30.

Term deposits have declined as a share of GDP from c. 46% in FY14 to c. 43% in FY25, highlighting the gradual shift of household savings towards capital market investments. Over the same period, mutual fund AUM increased 2.7x from c. 7% in FY14 to c. 20% in FY25, and SEBI-registered alternatives grew nearly 36x, from just 0.1% in FY14 to c. 4% in FY25. The scale of growth in alternatives is particularly notable given that the asset class has developed largely over the last decade.

The growth has also been supported by a rapidly expanding investor base. India has one of the fastest-growing HNI populations globally, with the number of HNIs expected to grow at c. 16% CAGR through 2027, compared to around c. 8% in the United States. The growth in private wealth has increased demand for differentiated investment strategies and contributed to higher allocations towards alternative assets.

The growth of the industry has been supported by an evolving regulatory framework. Over the last decade, SEBI has institutionalised the AIF framework and improved regulatory clarity across fund structures, governance standards and investor participation.

GIFT City has also emerged as an important platform for India's alternatives industry. As of March 2025, GIFT City has 162 registered Fund Management Entities (FME), with cumulative commitments of US$15.7bn.

The growth of AIFs, increasing HNI participation, the dominance of Category II AIFs and the development of GIFT City have collectively strengthened India's alternatives ecosystem and laid the foundation for the next phase of growth.

Alternatives in India Today

The growth of India's alternatives ecosystem has been accompanied by a broadening of investment strategies and an increase in participation across investor segments. What began largely as a private equity and venture capital market has evolved into a significantly larger and more diversified alternatives landscape including private credit and real assets.

Private Equity currently represents c. 60% of the total Indian alternatives AuM, followed by Real Assets at 21% and Private Credit at 19%.

Category II AIFs continue to account for the majority of commitments within the industry and have been the primary driver of growth over the last decade, currently representing c. 75% of total commitments as of FY26. These funds span private equity, private credit, infrastructure, special situations and other private market strategies. The concentration of capital within Category II AIFs reflects investor preference for long-term investment strategies that can benefit from India's economic growth and increasing capital requirements.

Private equity remains one of the largest segments of the alternatives market and continues to play an important role in funding business expansion, ownership transitions and strategic growth initiatives. The market has also witnessed an increase in control transactions, larger buyouts and more sophisticated deal structures over recent years.

Alongside private equity, real asset strategies have gained traction as investors seek long-duration assets backed by predictable cash flows. The continuing requirement for capital across transportation, logistics, energy, digital infrastructure and other real asset sectors has supported the growth of these strategies within the alternatives ecosystem.

The alternatives market has also witnessed the emergence of new strategies and deeper specialisation. Secondary funds, structured capital solutions and private credit strategies have become increasingly relevant as the market has matured and transaction requirements have become more complex.

Private credit, in particular, has emerged as one of the fastest-growing segments within the India alternatives ecosystem. Increasing private equity activity, larger deal sizes and evolving financing requirements have created demand for flexible capital solutions that sit between traditional bank lending and public debt markets.

The increased participation of domestic and global investors has also contributed to the growth of private credit. Dedicated private credit funds have raised larger pools of capital, transaction sizes have increased and a broader range of financing structures are now available to borrowers. As the ecosystem continues to mature, private credit is increasingly being viewed as a distinct asset class rather than a subset of broader private market strategies.

As the market continues to scale, investors are allocating capital across a broader range of alternative asset classes rather than relying on a single strategy. This diversification of capital has contributed to the depth and resilience of the ecosystem and has supported the development of a more sophisticated private markets landscape in India.

Outlook

The growth of alternatives in India has been accompanied by increasing sophistication across transactions, fund structures and capital solutions. Larger fund sizes, greater availability of capital and a broader investor base have helped expand the market across private and venture equity, private credit, infrastructure and real assets.

India's alternatives industry is at a relatively early stage of evolution compared to developed markets. While alternatives account for a meaningful share of institutional portfolios globally, penetration levels in India remain significantly lower. At the same time, the underlying building blocks for growth are increasingly in place: a growing investor base, increasing institutional participation, a well-established regulatory framework, expanding fund commitments and the emergence of offshore jurisdictions such as GIFT City to incentivise global GPs and LPs.

The next phase of growth is likely to be characterised by larger fund sizes, greater participation from domestic and international institutional investors, increasing strategy specialisation and advent of new formats such as secondaries funds, perpetual funds, continuation funds etc. Insurance companies, pension funds, family offices and other long-term pools of capital are expected to play a larger role in the coming years. In recent years, domestic wealth has come to be the mainstay of capital raise. However, if Indian alternatives asset classes have to scale up significantly, institutional capital both international and domestic will need to be tapped into at a much bigger level. With respect to domestic institutional capital, the allocations to alternatives remain a fraction of the regulatory limits across life and general insurers providing a significant headroom to unlock capital commitments to alternatives asset classes in the coming decade. With regard to international institutional capital, despite the fund raising environment currently being quite challenging and even more so for single country funds, it is expected that international institutional capital will increasingly find Indian opportunity hard to ignore given the relative risk adjusted returns. Further, it is expected that some of the asset classes like private credit will benefit as over time US yields come off the recent elevated levels and as we also see some strategic rebalancing by global allocators to allocate away from US markets to gain diversification away from some of the froth surfacing there of late in assets classes like private credit. As capital availability increases, managers will need to differentiate through sourcing capabilities, sector expertise, underwriting discipline and execution capabilities. Further, managers will also need to win the trust and confidence of the capital allocators by adopting best in class governance and transparency in practices pertaining to valuation, reporting etc.

Global experience suggests that alternatives grow alongside the development of capital markets and institutional capital pools. India's alternatives ecosystem has already demonstrated significant progress over the last decade. The growth in AIF commitments, increasing participation from domestic investors and continued development of the regulatory framework suggest that alternatives are likely to become an increasingly important part of India's financial landscape over the coming years.

Listed equally. Understood unequally.

Going public doesn't change what a business does. It changes who gets to have an opinion about it: permanently, publicly, and in real time.

Few management teams seriously consider what that shift demands of them. That gap between how a company believes it is perceived and how it is actually discussed in investment committees is where investor confidence is quietly won or lost.

Before listing, the relationship with capital is largely negotiated. The company tells its story, investors decide whether they believe it, and the ones who don't simply don't participate. Post-listing, that dynamic inverts. The market forms a continuous, public, real-time opinion of the business; one that a company influences but does not control. And unlike a private fundraise, it cannot choose its audience. It inherits one.

What a company can control is the quality and consistency of how it communicates. That starts with knowing what its equity narrative looks like from the outside; benchmarked against the peers its target investors are actually comparing it to, not the ones it would choose itself.

This sounds straightforward. In practice, it requires a kind of discipline that most organisations are not structured to maintain. Quarterly reporting cycles create natural pressure points since results need to be framed, guidance needs to be set, management commentary needs to be calibrated. In that pressure, the temptation to manage perception rather than shape understanding is significant. The two feel similar in the short term. Over time, they produce very different outcomes.

Investors, particularly institutional investors who've been around long enough, are remarkably good at detecting the difference.

They're not always listening to what management says. They're listening to how it is said. Whether the confidence in a strong quarter sound earned or performed. Whether the caution in a weak one sounds analytical or defensive. Whether the CFO's commentary and the CEO's commentary are genuinely aligned, or whether they've each been briefed separately, and it shows. These are not subtle signals. They accumulate into a judgment about whether management has genuine command of their business, or whether they're narrating it from a distance.

That judgment has a direct bearing on valuation; not just in moments of volatility, but structurally, over time.

The companies I've seen command consistent valuation premiums relative to peers are rarely the ones with the most impressive growth trajectories. They tend to be the ones with the most predictable communication patterns. They set guidance that is realistic rather than aspirational. When they miss, they say so early, explain the variance clearly, and lay out what changes rather than waiting for the results call and hoping the narrative holds. When they beat, they don't over-celebrate in ways that make the next quarter harder to manage.

This kind of discipline is harder to maintain than it looks, because it runs against some instincts that are otherwise useful in business.

The instinct to project confidence. The instinct to protect sensitive information until one is certain. The instinct to present the best case rather than the honest one. All of these serve a purpose in other contexts. In investor relations, they create friction between what the market expects and what the company delivers.

Between the story management tells, and the reality analysts eventually piece together: that friction compounds.

I've worked with companies where the Investor Relations (IR) function was essentially a scheduling operation which included coordinating earnings calls, managing disclosure timelines, and answering inbound queries. Technically compliant, functionally passive. I've worked with companies where the IR function was treated as a genuine strategic interface: where the head of IR had real access to leadership thinking, where the external narrative was built from the inside out rather than retrofitted to the numbers, where management actually debated what to say before they said it and not just how to say it. Where the strategy was shaped around what the leadership and board could credibly own, because a narrative that doesn't fit the people delivering it doesn't survive contact with a serious investor.

Valuation is numbers multiplied by narrative. Companies that treat IR as a back-office function are essentially leaving one of those two variables unmanaged.

The difference in how those two types of companies is perceived by the market, over a three-to-five-year horizon, is substantial. This requires knowing the capital markets with genuine precision, right from which institutions matter for a company's specific story and which tier-one and tier-two research houses shape how a sector is read, to more importantly, what the street is actually thinking between results cycles; not just what gets said on the record.

Accessibility is part of this, but it's often misunderstood.

Accessibility isn't about being available for every investor query or doing more NDR days. It's about giving investors enough genuine visibility into how management thinks that they can form their own informed view rather than constructing one from inference and rumour. When that visibility is absent, investors don't sit quietly with uncertainty. They fill it, using whatever information they have, and increasingly, that includes what's being said about the company in digital spaces, across platforms and financial communities that move faster than any disclosure cycle. The conclusions they reach are not always charitable.

India has nearly 5,000 companies listed on the BSE mainboard. Barely 1 in 4 sit in active AMC portfolios. The rest are not invisible because they are fundamentally broken. Most are overlooked because they have never been legible to institutional capital. That is a communications failure, not a business one.

The most dangerous place to be in public markets is not underperforming. It is being misunderstood while underperforming because then a company is managing both the reality and a narrative that's running ahead of it, and that is genuinely difficult to recover from.

Investor credibility is not just established at IPO. It is rebuilt every quarter, and often lost faster than it is built. Trust accumulates slowly, through repeated evidence that what is said and what is done are the same thing. Through showing up consistently in good quarters and bad ones. Through communicating with investors as partners, not as a constituency to be managed.

Companies that understand this tend to view the post-listing period not as a continuation of the IPO roadshow, but as the beginning of a fundamentally different kind of relationship with capital.

One where the prospectus is already forgotten. And every quarter is a fresh test of whether the company is worth believing.

Why Science and Technology Must Be Part of Every Philanthropist's Portfolio

Many of India's most consequential scientific institutions, from the Indian Institute of Science (IISc) to the Tata Institute of Fundamental Research (TIFR), were born not only of state ambition but also of philanthropic vision. This allowed them to think long term, operate with autonomy and attract global talent. At a moment when India is rethinking its development pathways, that tradition of science philanthropy deserves renewed attention.

During recent times, common discourse around development and progress in India tends to lean heavily towards physical infrastructure, growth rates, and our ability to influence geopolitics. Yet history shows that durable, inclusive progress is often powered by sustained investments in science and technology. South Korea is a good example for this - Its rise to a high-income, industrialised, innovation-driven economy was fueled by decades of commitment to scientific capability, engineering talent, and applied research, allowing its firms to move from manufacturing to innovation leadership. India faces a similar inflection point and in order to move up the value chain, it must strengthen its commitment to science and technology, and in doing so, it may find a powerful and underleveraged ally in philanthropic investment.

Almost every social priority that matters for India's development, such as health, climate resilience, agriculture, manufacturing, and urban issues, has a scientific and technological dimension that shapes how far and fast progress can travel. Yet this upstream dimension remains significantly underfunded within philanthropic portfolios, which often prioritise immediate service delivery over long-term capability building. This is understandable: delivery shows visible results. However, it is investment in science that builds the conditions that make these future results possible. The rapid development of mRNA vaccines globally, for instance, was enabled by decades of curiosity-driven work with no immediate application in view.

Today, philanthropy and science are engaging in a strategic and coordinated manner to make this possible. Organisations like the Anusandhan National Research Foundation (ANRF) have been designed to connect research funding with national priorities while enabling participation from non-government actors. Under ANRF, the recently announced Anusandhan Translational Research & Innovation (ATRI) initiative is committing significant resources towards co-funding, allowing philanthropic capital to be matched with public funding. Such mechanisms matter because they reduce fragmentation and give donors clearer pathways to scale impact.

In parallel, collaborative philanthropy is expanding what is possible. Supporting science & technology often requires sustained funding, technical judgment, and long timelines, conditions that can be challenging for individual donors to shoulder alone. Initiatives such as India's Translational Research Initiative (ITRI) illustrate how pooling philanthropic capital and sharing expertise can support translational research across multiple technologies and institutions. As an example, ITRI has catalysed the Mumbai Biocluster, a collaborative platform that brings together academic institutions, industry leaders, and funders to strengthen translational life sciences research and accelerate innovation in health and biomedicine. Through participation in these platforms, philanthropists need not build deep scientific capability in-house to participate meaningfully in innovation ecosystems in India.

Translational research focuses on bridging the gap between laboratory results and real-world use through validation, scale-up, and regulatory readiness. Early de-risking for adoption helps promising technologies gain acceptance by industry, government, or communities. In India, early philanthropic and public support for clean energy pilots, indigenous diagnostics, and electric mobility has helped demonstrate feasibility, enabling wider uptake. In this way, philanthropic capital can act as catalytic risk capital, enabling solutions to reach society at scale.

On the other hand, it is essential to understand that philanthropy that engages with science does not replace delivery or implementation; it strengthens the underlying capability that determines whether delivery systems succeed or stall, by providing long-term patient capital. This is best seen in the case of health. For instance, India currently relies extensively on global biomarkers, which does not fully reflect the realities of India's population, limiting the precision of diagnosis, risk assessment, and treatment. The Advanced Research Unit on Metabolism, Development & Ageing (ARUMDA) at TIFR Hyderabad is working to bridge basic biological research with clinical and contextual public health insights from India, which in turn will inform more effective health interventions. Philanthropic support for such work does not compete with care delivery; rather, it helps ensure that care systems become more precise, effective, and sustainable, thereby acting as catalytic capital.

A similar logic applies to climate action as well. As per the Economic Survey of 2024-'25, India is the seventh most vulnerable country to climate change. Adaptation will be essential, particularly from a climate justice perspective. But the quality of adaptation, how anticipatory it is, how affordable it becomes, and how widely it can be deployed, depends on progress in areas such as climate modelling, materials, storage, and monitoring. Philanthropic support from Tata Trusts has helped climate-resilience initiatives in Mira-Bhayandar, including data-driven planning for heat risk management in partnership with organisations such as the Aga Khan Agency for Habitat - demonstrating how early philanthropic funding can help cities pilot solutions before public systems scale.

India's innovation ecosystem is increasingly producing solutions with relevance beyond its borders. For example, India's low-cost vaccine manufacturing capabilities have contributed significantly to routine immunisation vaccines across developing countries. These solutions travel well because they are developed under constraints similar to those faced by other low - and middle-income countries. Philanthropic capital that supports such innovation contributes not only to national goals, but to broader global public goods too.

Science and innovation need not dominate philanthropic giving. But they should be present, as patient, long-horizon, risk capital that supports knowledge creation, translation, and early adoption. Even a modest allocation can shape what solutions are available to India a decade from now.

For philanthropists thinking about enduring impact, science is not a detour from social good. It is one of the ways social progress becomes durable, sustainable and takes humanity forward on the path of progress.

Debt Capital Markets Reform Agenda for Viksit Bharat

Arnab Choudhury
Executive Vice President & Group Head
SBI Capital Markets Ltd.

Viksit Bharat requires shifting from "credit rationing through banks" to "risk priced capital through markets."

Debt capital markets are not just a financing tool, they are economic plumbing for a developed nation.

A developed India requires large, patient, low cost domestic capital to fund:

- Infrastructure (₹100+ trillion requirement by 2047),
- Urbanisation, energy transition, manufacturing, and logistics,
- Asset monetisation (NMP), public sector reform, and private CAPEX.

India's bond market (~60–65% of GDP) remains bank dominated, concentrated in G-Secs, and shallow in risk pricing well below developed economy benchmarks (150 to 200% of GDP).

Infrastructure financing: Issues and Possible Solutions

Problem: Corporate bond market heavily skewed to PSU/AAA issuers; limited flow to mid risk corporates, infrastructure SPVs, urban entities.

Reforms

- Standardised project bond frameworks for infrastructure/SPVs aligned with cash flow based ratings
- Expanded issuance by:
  - o InvITs/REITs (including construction period debt)
  - o Urban Local Bodies (ULBs) & state utilities
  - o Development finance vehicles (DFCs, sectoral lenders)

Outcome: Direct market access for infrastructure & sub sovereign credits.

Move from Loan Substitute Bonds to True Risk Capital

- Encourage longer tenor amortising structures (15–30 yrs)
- Promote non bankable projects via partial risk sharing
- Reduce reliance on short tenor bullet bonds

Deepen Sustainable & Transition Finance

- Scale beyond "green labels" to:
  - o Transition bonds (coal to clean, steel, cement)
  - o Blended finance bonds (MDB + domestic capital)

Reform Investment Norms of PFs, Insurance & NPS

Structural Constraint: Long term savings exist but are under allocated to credit risk.

Key Reforms

- Risk based capital vs rating based caps
- Portfolio level exposure limits (instead of issuer wise)
- Encourage buy and maintain credit strategies

Impact: Stable demand for 15–30 year corporate & infra bonds.

Allow more flexibility of tenor for Banks Infrastructure Bond issuances

Structural Constraint: Long term bond issuances by Banks are for minimum of 7years tenor.

Key Reforms

- Allow Banks to issue Infrastructure Bonds for lower tenor as well.
- Explore possibilities of issuing Bonds with specific themes like sustainability, ESG linked.

Impact: Will allow Banks to manage their ALM profile better. It will also allow Banks to manage the pricing based on the shape of the curve.

Urban Infrastructure Development: Urban Infrastructure is Economic Infrastructure

Why Cities Are Central to Viksit Bharat

By 2047:

- Urban population: ~600 million
- Cities will generate ~75% of GDP
- India will add the equivalent of another Chicago every year

Yet India's urban challenge is not just scale; it is governance, finance, and delivery capacity.

Structural Challenges

Fragmented Urban Governance

- Weak Mayoral System
- Multiple parastatals (water boards, transport authorities, development authorities) with overlapping mandates
- Many of the Municipalities still follow single entry accounting system.

Chronic Underfinancing

- ULB revenues <1% of GDP (vs 4–6% in developed economies)
- Heavy dependence on state and central grants
- Poor balance sheets restrict borrowing.

Bank Dominated Financing

- Short tenor bank loans ill suited for 20–30-year urban assets
- Minimal use of capital markets

Weak Project Preparation & Execution

- Poor DPR quality
- Cost overruns and delays
- Limited use of PPP outside transport

Reform Pillars for Viksit Bharat Urbanisation

- ✓ Empower Cities as Economic Units. 5-10Year city level Capital Investment Plan (like state Budgets). Professional City Management (urban Cadre).
- ✓ Functional Coordination of Urban Agencies. Unified Urban Infrastructure Authorities at City/Metro level. Shared data platform for land, utilities and transports. Ring fencing the utility finances.
- ✓ Strengthen Municipal Balance Sheets. Universal GIS linked property tax. User charge rationalisation (water, sewerage, SWM). Monetisation of Municipal Land and Commercial Assets.
- ✓ Scale Municipal Bonds Market. Move from Pilot issuances to system level reforms. Pooled Municipal bond structure for smaller ULBs. State level intercept mechanism for investor comfort (short fall mechanism). Credit enhancement via DFIs/MDBs. Standardised Disclosures and Accounting Norms.
- ✓ Long Term Institutional Capital for Cities. Enable PFs, NPS and Insurance funds to invest in Urban Bonds, Pooled Infrastructure SPVs and City InvIT like platforms.

Few Implementable ideas to give a boost to the Indian Debt Capital Markets

a. Make it mandatory for the institutions holding long term Capital Instruments in their HTM book to test the liquidity of those instruments at periodic intervals. This will automatically bring in liquidity and help repricing the risks.
b. Allow Banks to issue Infrastructure Bonds for shorter tenors as well.
c. Allow Regulated entities to invest in instruments that has been Credit Enhanced by another regulatory entity. Current regulation is restrictive and will not be serving it's intended goal.
d. Build in a mechanism by which the State Government can give a "short-fall undertaking" for the urban infrastructure issuances. State Government can help escrow the proceeds from land parcels in and around the ULBs for the same.
e. To make these Municipal Bonds attractive for retail clients and make the people in those Municipalities a part of the whole process, give incentives like waiver of Parking charges or discounts in other Municipality tax, should they be holding these bonds. Direct tax exemptions make these Muni Bonds very popular in Western Countries. In India, in absence of Direct tax exemptions, other benefits can be explored.

Re-thinking Financial Inclusion: Using Capital Markets and Taxation to Spread wealth

Prof.Trilochan Sastry
Visiting Faculty
IIM Bangalore

The source of wealth shifted over the last one hundred or more years. In earlier days it was land, then it was ownership of other natural resources like oil, steel, coal. Later it moved to ownership of industries. Today financialization of economies in most parts of the world has resulted in wealth being held in shares. One measure of financialization of an economy is its comparison to the GDP of the country as a whole. Another important issue is the percentage of a country's population that participates in this through ownership of shares. This could be directly owned by individuals, or through intermediate organizations like Insurance, mutual funds and so on which in turn own shares on behalf of individuals. The following table gives an International comparison of India with a few countries.

Country	Financial Sector Assets-to-GDP Ratio	Population Owning Shares (Direct & Indirect)
India	~120% to 150%	~ 9.5% to 11%
China	~350% to 400%	~13% to 16%
United Kingdom	~600% to 700%	~33%
South Korea	~300% to 350%	~ 44%
United States	~350% to 450%	~ 58% to 62%

India has the lowest ratio of Financial Sector Assets to the GDP, and also has the lowest percentage of people who own shares. The number is rapidly rising though. One possible conclusion is that wealth has not yet spread among the population. There are many reasons for all these differences. For instance China's ratio of financial sector assets is high because of banking rather than the capital markets.

However that is not the point of these comparisons. We focus here on financial inclusion of wealth, not income. Here we see that India is low. No doubt many families own property or gold and so the low percentage may not reflect wealth exclusion. Comparing wealth inequality gives a more complete picture. The US has by far the highest wealth inequality with the bottom 50% having less than 2%. For the other countries, the bottom 50% have between 5% to 7% of the total wealth. However, India is highest in another type of wealth inequality: the top 1% have about 41.5% of the nation's total wealth. The US is next with the top 1% having about 37% of the wealth, followed by China at 33%, UK and South Korea at about 23%. One interesting conclusion is that South Korea transitioned from a developing country to a fully developed one resulting in a more financially inclusive wealth distribution.

What can we do to incentivize wealth distribution among a larger base in India? If we look at a few other countries, they have come up with a very interesting means of achieving this. Companies that distribute shares to the lowest paid workers for instance get tax incentives.

Some countries use some variation of the following method to give tax incentives to corporations. They calculate the free public float. The exclude the following shares held by : Sponsors and Directors, Government Holdings, Strategic Corporate Stakes or equity held by private corporate bodies or individuals that exceeds 5% of the total outstanding shares , cross-holdings or equity held by parent companies, sister concerns, or subsidiaries and Regulatory Lock-in Shares held by pre-IPO investors and promoters. Listed companies with a high percentage of public float shares get a direct tax benefit. Usually emerging economies use this including Philippines, Indonesia, Egypt and Bangladesh. Many companies have taken advantage of this through one of four principal methods. One is by promoters and strategic investors selling their shares. Another is by issuing more shares. A third method is to sell to designated public financial institutions that do not have large strategic controlling investors holding more than 5% (or any other number). Another is to speed up ESOPs so that public float increases.

Various studies show that this has had an impact and public float has increased the number of share holders. However in developing economies it has not really affected wealth inequality. (Wealth inequality is not the issue – the real issue is lack of wealth of a sizeable segment of the population). That is because the bottom 50% of the population rarely buys shares. It is the middle class or upper middle class who do so.

Developed economies have a variant of this where the focus is on shares given to blue collar staff or to other employees as well. If companies in the UK give free shares to a wide base of lower-level employees, the company receives a direct corporation tax deduction for the market value of those shares. It is called a Share Incentive Plan. In the US, if a company forms an ESOP[1] that owns 100% of the business on behalf of its thousands of employees, and registers as an S-Corporation, the company pays 0% federal corporate income tax. All corporate profit flows tax-free into the employees' retirement accounts, creating widespread wealth. However if it is not 100% an ESOP, then they pay tax only on the portion of profits not transferred to the ESOP.

Some large examples in the US include Publix Super Markets with a turnover in 2025 of $62.7 b, and net profits of $.47 billion, with 260,000 workers. It is privately held, but an independent evaluator determines the share value, which is currently (as of June 2026) $19.25. The company is well known for creating thousands of blue collar millionaires who retire with something between $1 and $3 million. The company puts in about 8% to 10% of wages annually to the ESOP, amounting to between $500 and $800 million. Over and above that, since the ESOP owns 80% of the company, the dividends are paid to employees. This dividend is not double taxed – the company deducts the dividend paid into the ESOP as expense before arriving at final profit. This is not an "S-Corporation" with 100% corporate tax exemption because the ESOP owns less than 100% of the stocks.

An ESOP with 100% ownership enjoys full 100% corporate tax benefit. Such companies like WinCo Foods has a turnover of $10 billion with an estimated profit of 2% to 3% or about $200 to $300 million. All this is tax free and used for further growth and for annually topping up the ESOP funds.

If such a rule were implemented in India for genuine Farmer Producer Organizations where ownership is entirely with members, then they would get a tax break. For agriculture businesses with low net margins, profits would more than double. This can make a huge difference as more than 100 million Indians are farmers. Other countries allow regulated listing of Cooperative shares, but India does not. The regulation ensures that control remains with the farmers and not with external investors. We do not have that as yet.

India has taken some initiatives like a minimum percentage for small share holders. However unlike US, UK, Philippines, Indonesia, Bangladesh and Egypt, there are no tax based incentives.

But the broader idea is to get more Indians to participate in the financial boom. Some of these measures would help.

[1] An Employee Stock Ownership Plan (ESOP) in the USA is a highly regulated, tax-advantaged retirement benefit plan. Instead of directly buying stock, employees acquire shares through a dedicated trust, which holds the stock for them and distributes the value when they retire or leave the company. For the profits transferred to the ESOP no tax is paid.

Ruin and Discipline: How Behavioural Finance Explains India's Investing Paradox

Why the Same Mind that Loses ₹1 Lakh Crore in F&O Builds ₹32,000 Crore a Month in SIPs

Dr.Rachana Baid
Professor & Dean - Academics
National Institute of Securities Markets

Two numbers from the same market, in the same year, drawn from the same population of investors, tell contradictory stories. The first: in a study of the equity derivatives segment released in July 2025, SEBI found that the net losses of individual traders in futures and options had widened to about ₹1.06 lakh crore in 2024-25 and more than nine in ten traders, roughly 91 per cent, ended the year in the red. This was not a one-off. An earlier SEBI study, covering the three years from 2021-22 to 2023-24, had already put cumulative individual F&O losses above ₹1.8 lakh crore, with barely one per cent of traders earning a profit greater than ₹1 lakh after costs. More than three-quarters of those who lose money keep trading anyway. The regulator's curbs have slowed the activity but not the bleeding: with equity indices falling through 2025-26 and trading still skewed toward options, there is little reason to think the losses eased much in the year just ended. The second: monthly contributions through systematic investment plans, or SIPs, crossed ₹32,000 crore in early 2026, powered by close to ten crore SIP accounts and an investor base past 27 crore folios. Where the F&O figure is wealth destruction, the SIP figure is the opposite: disciplined wealth creation, and very likely the most successful savings habit the Indian financial system has cultivated.

Here is the puzzle - these are not two different species of investor. They are drawn from the same population. The mind that loses money in one channel and builds it in the other is, very often, the same mind. The comfortable reading is that this is simply rationality versus recklessness, the prudent investor's SIP set against the gambler's option trade. That reading is shallow. Neither the F&O trader nor the SIP investor is the cool, calculating homo economicus of the textbooks. Both are driven by behavioural biases. The difference is not that one is rational and the other irrational. It is that one environment switches on a cluster of biases that compound toward ruin, while the other switches on a cluster that compounds toward wealth. What decides which instincts fire, and whether they enrich or strip you, is the architecture into which the psychology is poured. In the same India, the two architectures, a casino and a compounding machine, are pointed at the same crore-strong stream of investors. It is indeed a striking experiment in behavioural finance in the world today.

The Casino

Begin with the machine that sucks money. The F&O numbers are not an Indian anomaly. They are an Indian instance of a pattern that behavioural finance documented decades ago. Brad Barber and Terrance Odean, in their landmark study published in The Journal of Finance in 2000, titled "Trading Is Hazardous to Your Wealth," found that the most active fifth of investors underperformed the market by about 6.5 percentage points a year. Their later work with Yi-Tsung Lee and Yu-Jane Liu on the entire Taiwanese day-trading population from 1992 to 2006 reached a verdict that reads like a prophecy of India's data: fewer than one per cent of day traders could reliably earn positive returns net of fees, and the losses persisted, year after year, in the same people.

Why do rational adults keep doing this? The first, and perhaps the most explanatory for index-option buying, is the mishandling of probability, what Kahneman and Tversky's prospect theory calls the overweighting of small chances. People systematically overvalue tiny probabilities of large payoffs; it is the same wiring that sells lottery tickets. A cheap, far-out-of-the-money weekly option is a lottery ticket dressed in the language of finance: it has a high probability to expire worthless, but the slim chance of a large multiplier is overweighted by the buyer. Nicholas Barberis's "A Model of Casino Gambling" (2012) explains why that thrill keeps players at the table long past the point of rational exit. The individual option buyer seems to sit in exactly that seat.

The second is overconfidence. Barber and Odean's 2001 paper, memorably titled "Boys Will Be Boys," showed that the more confident investors are in their own skill, the more they trade, and the more they trade, the less they earn. Every winning F&O trade feels like vindicated skill. Every loss feels like bad luck or a near miss.

The third is the illusion of control, described by Ellen Langer in 1975, our tendency to believe we can steer outcomes that are largely random. The charts, the alerts, the one-tap order and the gamified frictionlessness of the trading app manufacture a feeling of mastery.

The fourth is the disposition effect. Odean's 1998 study documented investors' deep reluctance to realise losses. The pain of booking a loss, which per Kahneman and Tversky is roughly about twice as large as the pleasure of an equivalent gain, drives traders to hold losers and double down to "get even". SEBI's finding that over three-quarters of loss-makers keep trading despite consecutive years of losses is this reluctance written across a crore of accounts.

Binding all of these together is the herd mentality, amplified by survivorship and availability bias. Index-option volumes exploded partly because trading became a social, viral activity, fuelled by Telegram tip-groups and finfluencer reels in which the visible winners, floated to the top of every feed, makes it look like easy moany. SEBI's data lays the transfer bare. In 2023-24, foreign portfolio investors and proprietary traders made profits of ₹28,000 crore and ₹33,000 crore respectively, the overwhelming majority through algorithms, while individuals supplied the losses. On a casino floor the house always wins. Here, the house wears the clothes of an algorithm.

The Compounding Machine

Now the machine built to make you money. The SIP is, at heart, a piece of behavioural engineering, a textbook application of the ideas that won Richard Thaler the Nobel Prize in 2017. Its genius is that it does not ask the investor to be rational. It asks for one decision, once, and then nothing.

The first instinct it enlists is inertia, or status quo bias. Brigitte Madrian and Dennis Shea's celebrated 2001 study, "The Power of Suggestion," showed that simply switching a retirement plan's default from opt-in to opt-out lifted participation from well under half of employees to above four-fifths. The behaviour did not change. The default did. The SIP performs the same trick. Once the standing instruction is set, doing nothing is the act of investing. The investor's natural laziness, ruinous at the casino, becomes the engine of accumulation.

The second is the self-control problem, and the SIP's answer to it, the commitment device. Thaler and Hersh Shefrin's "economic theory of self-control" (1981) models each of us as a far-sighted "planner" at war with a myopic "doer" who wants to spend now. Left to fight that war afresh every month, most people lose. The SIP lets the planner win in advance, pre-committing the doer through automation, so the impulsive present self never gets a monthly vote. Thaler and Shlomo Benartzi's "Save More Tomorrow" programme (2004) made the same principle explicit by channelling future pay raises into saving, lifting participants' savings rates from around 3.5 per cent to over 13 per cent within a few years. The SIP is "Save More Tomorrow" with an auto-debit.

The third is mental accounting, Thaler's insight that we treat money differently depending on the bucket we file it in. The SIP corpus, ring-fenced as a long-term, almost untouchable "investment," is protected from the everyday raids that deplete a general savings balance.

The fourth is the benign use of narrow framing. A lump-sum decision to invest ₹60,000 feels weighty and fraught. A monthly debit of ₹5,000 feels almost painless. By slicing the commitment into small, recurring bites that the mind evaluates one at a time, the SIP turns our habit of judging the small sum rather than the large annual total to the investor's advantage.

The fifth is the neutralising of regret aversion. Much of what paralyses the lump-sum investor is the fear of buying at the wrong moment. By spreading purchases mechanically across time, rupee-cost averaging removes the timing decision altogether, and with it the regret that keeps anxious money sitting idle. The SIP is, among other things, a regret-minimisation machine.

Around all of these plays a milder optimism, faith in India's long-run growth story that keeps investors buying equity. There is a constructive herd at work too. "Everyone my age has an SIP" is social proof at national scale, and the "Mutual Funds Sahi Hai" campaign was an effective attempt to move a generation toward a good habit. AMFI's record of relentless monthly inflows, sustained even through bouts of sharp foreign selling, is the signature of a herd moving, for once, toward the machine that compounds rather than the one that consumes.

The Regulator's Two Hands

The same regulator is working both machines at once. With one hand, SEBI is shrinking the casino. Since October 2024 it has tightened the screws with fewer weekly expiries, larger contract sizes, upfront collection of option premiums and intraday monitoring of position limits. The early results are visible: the number of unique F&O traders fell sharply, from 61.4 lakh in the first quarter of 2024-25 to 42.7 lakh in the fourth, with overall participation down about 20 per cent year on year. This is necessary work, grounded in SEBI's own transaction-level evidence.

With the other hand, SEBI is trying to feed the compounding machine. In May 2026 it floated a proposal to let employers deduct a portion of an employee's salary and route it directly into mutual fund units on the employee's behalf, with consent. Read against the behavioural logic of the SIP, this is no small administrative tweak. It takes the commitment device that already makes the SIP work, the automation that lets the far-sighted planner overrule the impulsive doer, and hard-wires it one step earlier, into the payslip itself. It is "Save More Tomorrow" written into the salary structure.

Put the two hands together and a strategy comes into focus. We cannot legislate away the appetite for risk; it is human nature, and human nature does not respond to circulars. What a regulator can do is make the destructive machine harder to reach and the constructive one harder to avoid: raise the cost and friction of the casino, lower them for the compounding machine. The aim is not to make Indian investors rational, as that may be futile ambition, but to engineer the environments their biases flow into. Call it behavioural judo: the regulator is trying to ensure that the same person, with the same instincts, meets the right machine more often than the wrong one.

The gambler and the saver are the same person. Only the machine is different, and the machine is something we choose to build.

REITs and InvITs: Positioning for India's Next Decade of Real Assets

Gaurav Sood
Managing Director & Head, Equity Capital Markets
Avendus Capital Pvt.Ltd.

India's REIT and InvIT market has scaled to roughly INR 5 Tn of market capitalisation and close to INR 10 Tn of AUM across 6 REITs and 26 InvITs, all built in just nine years. That is still only 1.5% of India's GDP, against 5% to 12% in mature market s such as the US, Australia, Singapore and Japan. The gap between where the asset class stands and where it is headed is the story that matters now, and the case for closing it has gotten stronger for reasons that have little to do with real estate or infrastructure at all.

The Global Interest Rate Regime is Changing

The four-decade run of falling interest rates that shaped portfolio construction from 1982 to 2021 is over. Rate cycles across the US, UK, Japan and Germany have moved from an inflation-shock era (1975-81) through disinflation and falling rates (1982-2008) and quantitative easing (2009-2021) into a present regime of persistent inflation and structurally higher rates. The forces behind this, sovereign debt, fiscal deficits, de-globalisation and tighter labour markets, are structural rather than cyclical, which makes a return to ultra-low rates unlikely.

The portfolio consequence has been sharper than most investors expected. 2022 was the first year in 50 years that global equities and bonds fell together, breaking the negative correlation that made the traditional 60/40 portfolio work. That correlation has since flipped from deeply negative through 2000-2022 to strongly positive in the post-COVID period. Bonds are no longer as reliable a hedge, and the traditional playbook, bonds for income, commodities for inflation protection, equities for growth, is having to be rethought.

Real assets are positioned to plug that gap. Contracted, inflation-linked cash flows from REITs and InvITs pick up several roles at once: the income role of bonds, the inflation hedge of commodities, part of the growth role of equities, and long -duration liability matching for pension and insurance books. That is a wider mandate than the asset class has historically been asked to fill.

What the Global Playbook Shows

India's REIT and InvIT journey is following a path that other markets have already walked.

The US REIT market, dating back to the 1960s, is the world's largest and most mature, with its FTSE NAREIT All Equity REITs index growing from USD 9 Bn to USD 1.47 Tn since 1990, a 16% CAGR, across 188 REITs today. Much of that scale came from continuously expanding into new categories, moving well beyond traditional offices and malls into data centres, cell towers and logistics, which kept broadening the investable universe decade after decade.

The one learning worth carrying over is that sustainable growth requires capital discipline and long-term distribution growth depends on sponsor quality, funding flexibility and prudent leverage, particularly during periods of capital market stress.

Australia's A-REIT market, dating to 1971, now stands at roughly USD 102 Bn, equivalent to 5.6% of GDP. Its defining feature is that superannuation funds allocated around 12% of a A$650 Bn pool to securitised property in the 1990s, a natural fit given the long-duration, income-generating nature of the assets. That is the closest parallel to what EPFO and NPS could eventually do for Indian REITs and InvITs.

Japan's J-REIT market, launched in 2001, is now the world's second-largest at roughly USD 105 Bn, but its growth leaned heavily on Bank of Japan intervention and negative rate policy for over a decade; valuations have since corrected as that support has been withdrawn, a reminder that policy-driven liquidity is not the same as structural demand.

Singapore's S-REIT market has gone from a single listing in 2002 to roughly USD 75 Bn in 20 years and carries the highest REIT market cap to GDP ratio globally at 12.2%. Continuous regulatory evolution, higher leverage limits, permission to acquire overseas assets, pass-through tax treatment, did much of the work, alongside diversification beyond retail and office into logistics, healthcare and data centres.

India, having listed its first REIT in 2017, sits earliest in this cycle. Pension integration, retail participation and passi ve ETF adoption, all of which took these other markets one to three decades to build out, are only now beginning to take shape domestically.

Why Sponsors Keep Building

Supply depends on why sponsors choose to inject assets into these structures in the first place, and two distinct models are doing the work.

Developer sponsors build, stabilise, inject and recycle. Equity locked up in a stabilised asset on a developer's own balance sheet typically carries an 8-9% borrowing cost; the same asset inside a REIT or InvIT is valued at a lower yield, creating an immediate valuation premium. Once listed, the developer becomes a de facto permanent counterparty through a right of first offer over the next generation of assets, while retaining upside through unitholding that often runs to 30 -40%.

Financial sponsors accumulate, govern and list. Because a REIT or InvIT has no fixed termination unlike a 10 -year closed-end fund, mature assets can move from fund to trust while the sponsor keeps the management relationship indefinitely. The value creation here comes from multiples arbitrage: assets aggregated privately at a 12% cost of capital can list as a governed, liquid platform at a 10% implied IRR, with the governance and liquidity premium captured immediately at listing.

Both models feed into the same asset creation flywheel: a developer builds a greenfield asset, it stabilises over two to four years as occupancy or traffic ramps up, it gets injected into a REIT or InvIT at an independently appraised NAV, the develope r redeploys the proceeds into the next project, and the trust often has first right to acquire that next asset too. It is this rec ycling mechanism, more than any single listing, that has kept new supply coming even through periods of weak investor sentiment.

The Capital Still on the Sidelines

The most concrete part of India's opportunity is not new listings; it is capital that already exists but is not yet deployed. EPFO (AUM INR 31.2 Tn), NPS (INR 16.0 Tn), life insurers (INR 67.8 Tn) and mutual funds (roughly INR 22.1 Tn of relevant AUM) each operate under regulatory caps ranging from 3% to 10% of AUM for REIT and InvIT exposure, and collectively they are using only about 7.5% of that available headroom. Full utilisation could redirect close to INR 7 Tn into the asset class, 2.6 times the current free float market capitalisation of all REITs and InvITs combined.

Household savings tell a similar story from a much larger base. India's household savings pool, now roughly INR 1,300 -1,400Tn, remains two-thirds locked in physical assets such as real estate and gold, with growth financial products such as equities and mutual funds still accounting for only around 6% of the total. But annual mutual fund flows have grown at a 50% five -year CAGR, evidence that the financialization of savings is underway even if REITs and InvITs have not yet captured much of it.

Taken together, an additional investible pool of roughly INR 11.6 Tn could be unlocked for REITs and InvITs by 2030: mutual funds (INR 4.5 Tn), insurers (INR 3.2 Tn), pension funds (INR 2.2 Tn), retail and HNI investors (INR 1.2 Tn), foreign investo rs (INR 0.3 Tn) and corporate treasuries (INR 0.2 Tn).

Yield Is Not the Answer

Distribution yield is the number most investors look at first, but it is also the most misleading one on its own. Two InvITs can carry near-identical yields and very different economics: a road InvIT yielding 11% with 8 years of concession life remaining could carry an equity IRR of under 6%, while a power transmission InvIT yielding 8% with 28 years remaining and a credible renewal path could carry an IRR of 8-9%. Yield analysis has no mechanism to force that adjustment; IRR analysis does.

The full IRR calculation rests on four inputs: entry price, the distribution trajectory (annual NDCF per unit, including contracted escalation), NAV evolution, and terminal value, the one variable yield analysis ignores entirely. Terminal value itself splits into three categories. Concession Cliff assets, such as toll and annuity roads and select transmission lines, see terminal value decline toward zero as the concession nears expiry. Regulated Renewal assets, including transmission, renewables and gas pipelines, carry terminal value that depends on tariff reset or PPA renewal outcomes. Perpetual Real Estate assets, such as office, retail and warehousing, have no concession expiry at all and are valued instead on stabilised NOI against an exit cap rate, making them more sensitive to long-term rate moves than to near-term operating performance.

Base case equity IRRs vary accordingly by sector: commercial office and retail REITs at 12-14%, gas pipelines at 12-14%, warehousing at 11-13%, toll roads at 11-12%, telecom towers at 10-12%, renewables at 10-11%, and annuity roads and power transmission at 9-10%. Spreads over the 10-year G-Sec range from around 200-300 bps for annuity roads and transmission, the most bond-like categories, to 500-700 bps for office, retail and gas pipelines, where inflation linkage and growth optionality are stronger.

Picking the Right Trust

No two REITs or InvITs carry the same terminal value profile, making a holistic assessment across multiple dimensions more meaningful than relying on a single scorecard. Key areas include distribution quality, leverage architecture, asset quality, sponsor alignment, NAV integrity, growth visibility and regulatory resilience. Indicative benchmarks include a payout ratio of 90–100% of NDCF, loan-to-value below 30% for REITs and 60% for InvITs, interest coverage above 3.5x, sponsor unitholding exceeding 30%, and related-party transactions limited to less than 3% of revenue. No trust is expected to outperform across every metric; the objective is to identify where the key vulnerabilities and trade-offs lie.

Equally important is monitoring specific behaviours that have historically eroded unitholder value, including above-NAV asset injections, distributions exceeding NDCF, aggressive DCF or occupancy assumptions, refinancing cliffs, concentrated floating-rate exposure, sponsor sell-downs, and concession expiries that are inadequately reflected in NAV. The greatest risks typically arise when potential issues combine high severity with low detectability-for example, aggressive valuation assumptions embedded within an independent valuer's report-underscoring the importance of diligence that extends beyond public disclosures.

The Catalysts That Could Unlock the Next Leg

Five specific catalysts could move the needle over the next few years. EPFO opening to non-PSU trusts could channel over INR 600 Bn with just a 2% allocation. A 1% incremental rise in IRDAI's proposed combined insurance cap could unlock a similar amount. Dedicated passive ETF products could channel over INR 240 Bn from current passive AU M at a 2% allocation, while inclusion in global indices at a 2% weightage could pull in over INR 1 Tn of foreign capital. New sector listings, such as data centres, airports and urban infrastructure, would diversify a market that is currently concentrated in office and roads.

The primary market opportunity that follows is not trivial either: 2-3 IPOs alongside 15-25 follow-on issuances, together adding up to a potential annual opportunity of close to USD 10 Bn.

The Outlook

None of this requires a reset of what already exists, only an extension of drivers already in motion: a strong and growing ba se of monetizable assets, household savings that are slowly financialising, a regulatory framework that keeps maturing, and global capital that has already shown it is willing to underwrite Indian real assets. The regime shift toward structurally hi gher rates looks durable rather than temporary, and it has made durable, contracted, inflation-linked cash flows more valuable than they were during the previous decade of near-zero rates.

India's REIT and InvIT market is still a fraction of the size it will likely become. The comparison that matters is not what the market looked like a year ago, but how much of the institutional capital, household savings and infrastructure pipeline already sitting in India has yet to find its way into a structure built to hold exactly this kind of asset.

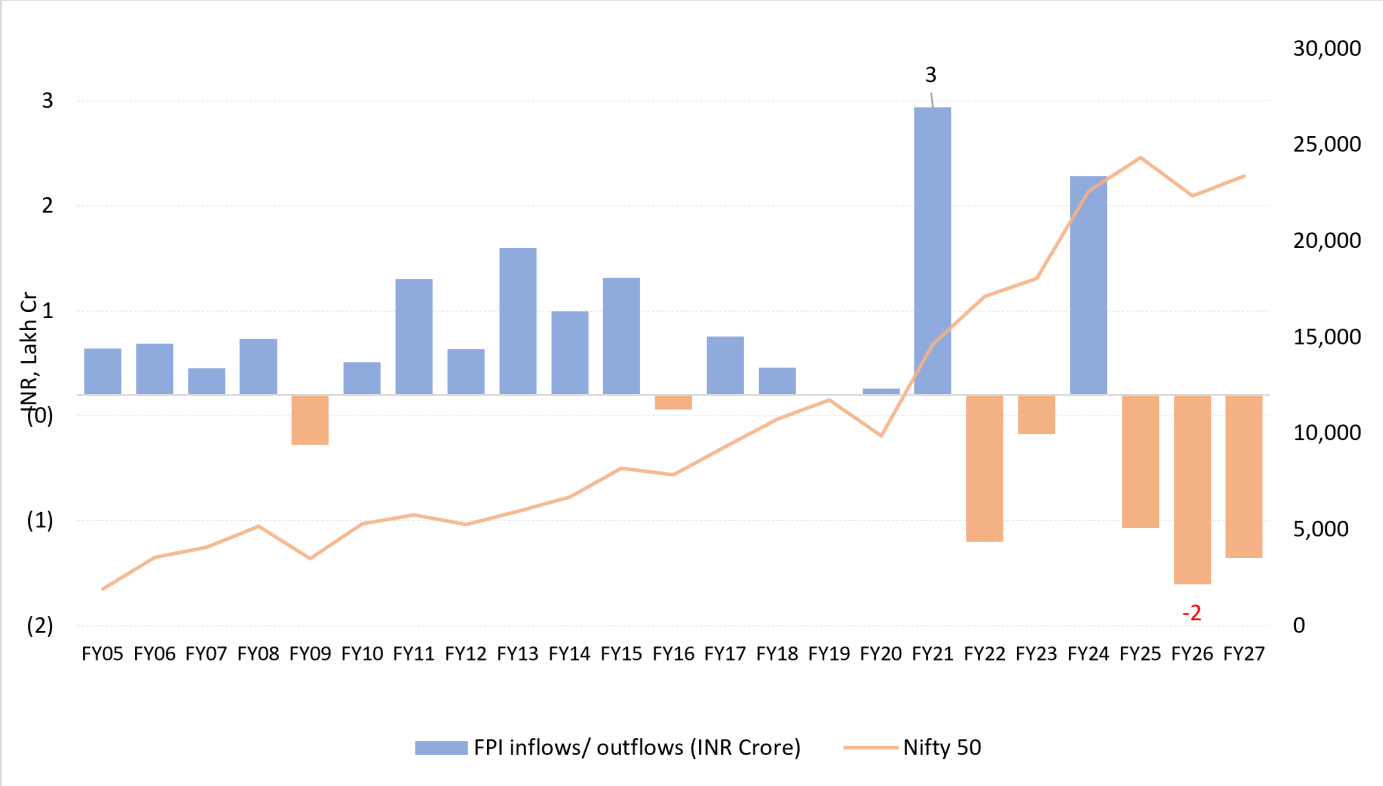
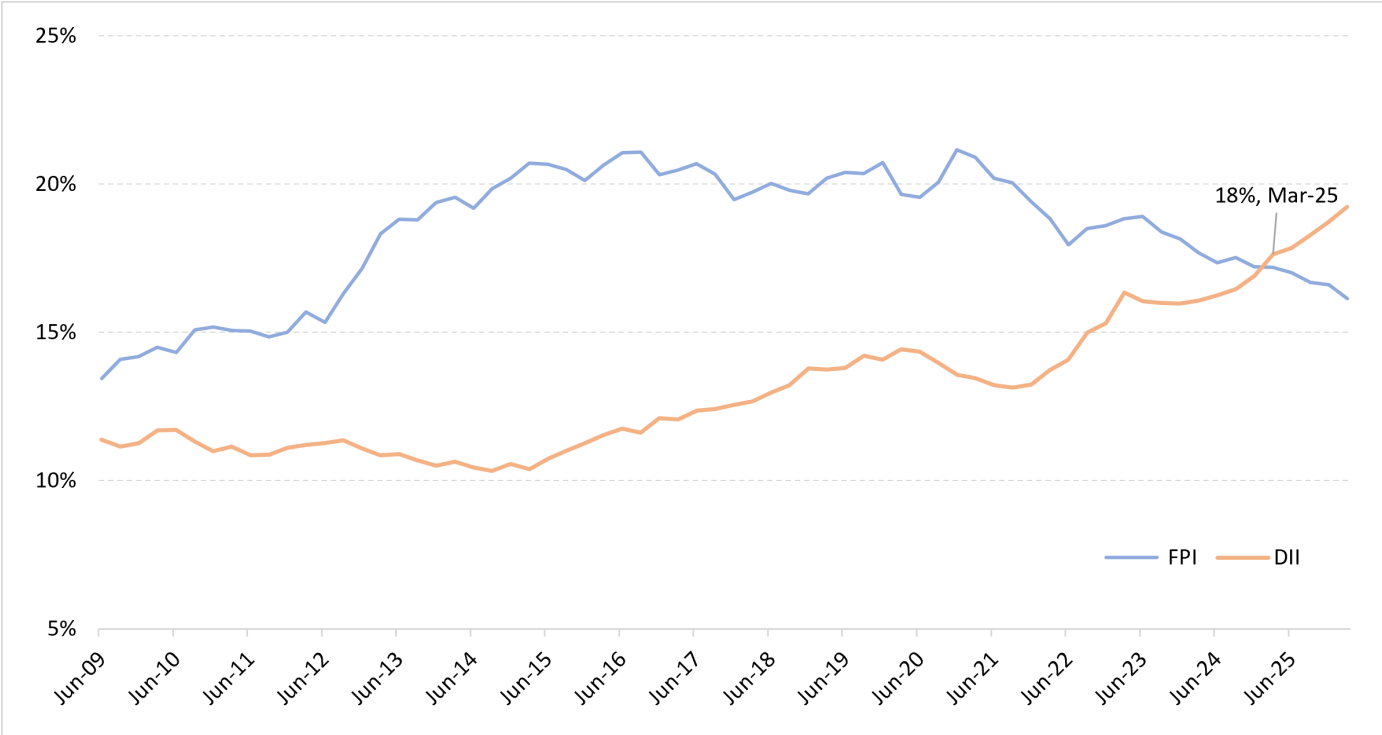
Structural transformation of Indian capital markets and the rising dominance of domestic investors



Vikas Khattar
Managing Director & Co-Head-Investment Banking & Head-ECM & FSG Coverage
Ambit Pvt.Ltd.

For most of India's post-liberalisation story, global sentiment and foreign capital flows played an important role in shaping the domestic stock market's trajectory. The story, however, has been changing.



Over the past few years, Foreign Portfolio Investors ("FPIs") have pulled roughly INR 4.3 lakh crore from Indian equities (net outflows between FY22 and FY27 YTD). And yet, the market held. IPOs got done and how! Liquidity did not vanish. Between FY22 and FY26, Indian capital markets absorbed these external shocks and still raised an astounding c. 3 lakh crore of equity capital (through a combination of 356 IPOs and 218 QIPs).

The changing ownership profile tells an equally compelling story. FPI ownership in NSE-listed companies declined to c.16% in the Mar'26 quarter, the lowest level in 14 years. In contrast, DII ownership rose to a record c.19%. This was not merely an ownership crossover, it marked the arrival of a fundamentally different Indian market, increasingly driven by large domestic institutional investor base.

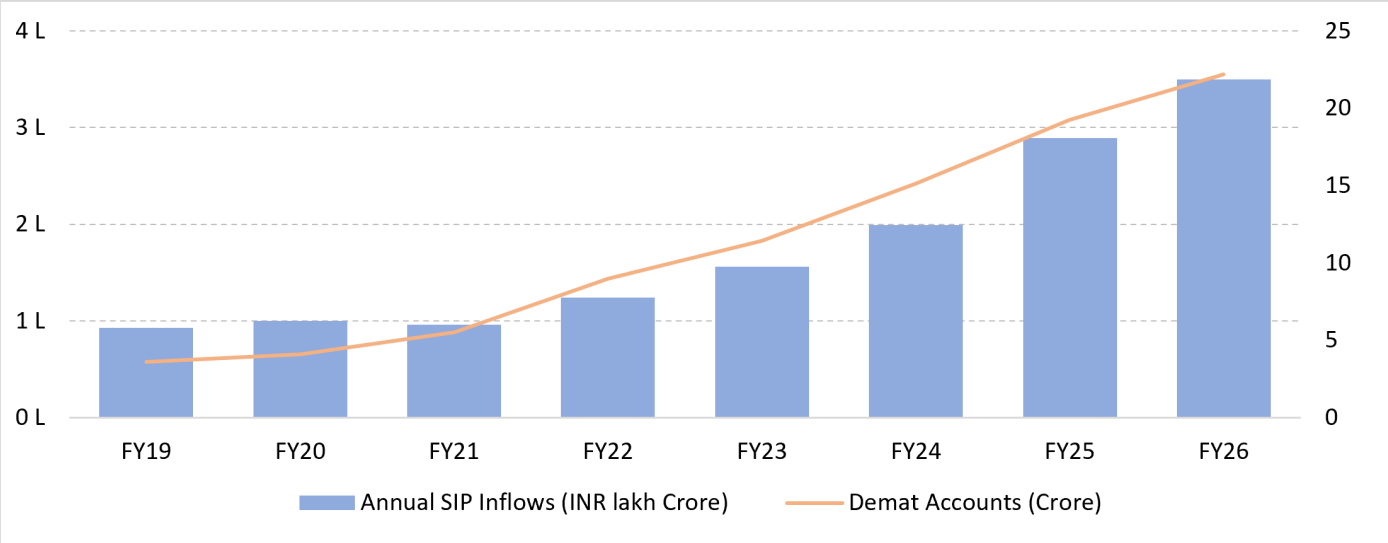
When India opened to FPIs in 1992, the first year's inflow was INR 13 crore, symbolic more than substantial. Foreign capital deepened its presence steadily over the next two decades and eventually became the market's dominant mood-setter. The Global Financial Crisis of 2008-09 exposed the vulnerability starkly. FPIs pulled out, markets collapsed, and the lesson was uncomfortable: India's market moved to sentiments prevailing in global financial centers, like New York, London, Hong Kong but not in Mumbai.

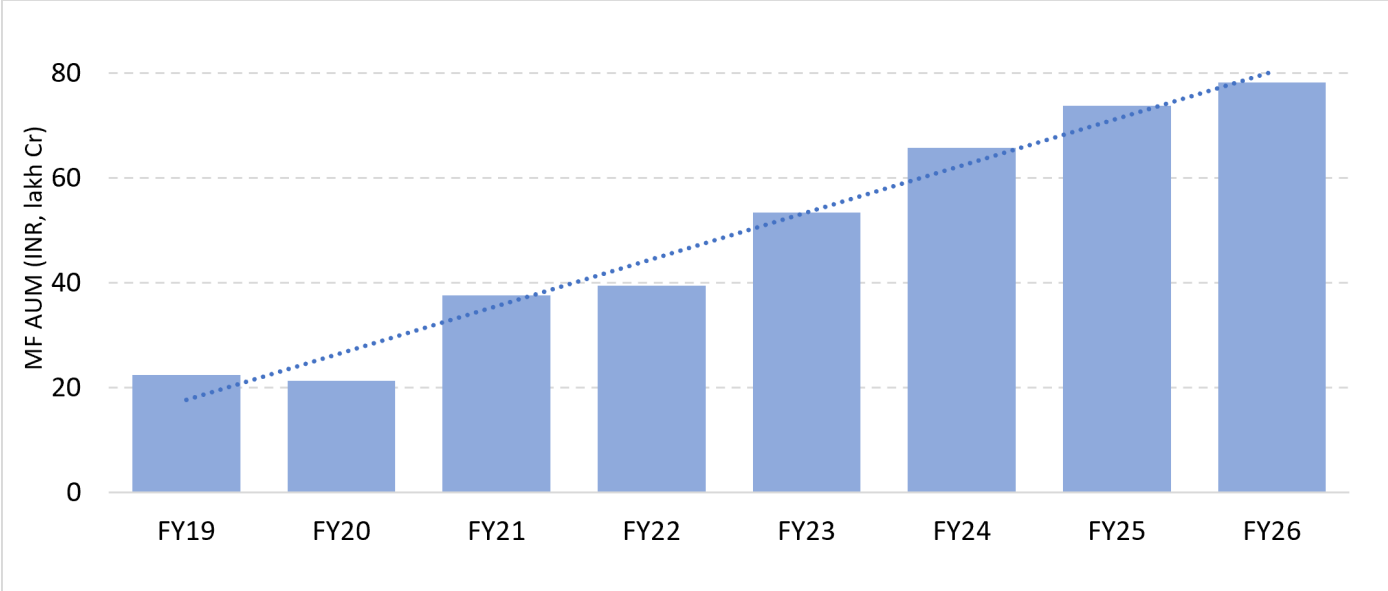
The decade that followed saw India benefit from an extraordinary period of global liquidity. Near-zero interest rates across major economies pushed investors further out on the risk curve, directing substantial capital toward emerging markets, including India. In FY21, in the middle of a pandemic, FPIs poured around INR 2.7 lakh crore into Indian equities in a single year. The Sensex doubled and the partnership felt mature, only it was not. When the US Federal Reserve began hiking rates in 2022, the reversal was swift and sustained. Record outflows followed in three of the last four years, with outflows peaking at INR 1.8 lakh crore in FY26. The Indian market has underperformed global peers through this period; the correlation between FPI selling and Indian market weakness still does exist and should not be wished away. But for the first time, the selling did not break the floor, because something else had been quietly built underneath.

What built that floor is a story that begins not in institutional boardrooms but on smartphones, in Tier-2 cities, in the middle of a lockdown. India had c. 4 crore demat accounts in Dec'19. By Mar'25, that number had crossed 19 crore, a near fivefold increase in five years. It took 25 years to cross 11 crore accounts; it took just 2 more to nearly double again.



Technology was a critical enabler of this transformation. Discount brokers fundamentally altered access to financial markets. Pioneering this shift, Zerodha demonstrated that low-cost investing models could be commercially viable. Groww, Upstox and Angel One subsequently simplified onboarding to the point where opening an investment account became as frictionless as ordering food. What was once a relatively narrow investor base has broadened significantly. As of Sept'25, the NSE counted nearly 12 crore unique registered investors (unique-PAN base), almost four times the level seen six years earlier. Participation has deepened alongside growth, with the number of investors executing at least one trade annually increasing from about 1 crore in 2020 to 3.5 crore in 2025. This expansion has been accompanied by a generational shift, with the median investor age declining from 38 years to 32 years over the same period.

Systematic Investment Plans have institutionalised this behavioural shift. Annual SIP inflows increased from approximately ~INR 70k crore in FY18 to INR 2.9 lakh crore in FY25, that's more than 4 times in just 7 years Mar'26 recorded an all-time monthly high of INR 32k crore. More than 9.6 crore SIP accounts are now active.



The MF industry's average assets under management have grown at a robust 20%+ CAGR since FY14 to over INR 83 lakh crore as of May 2026, outpacing the c.17% growth in the market capitalization of NSE-listed companies.

Unlike cross-border capital, these domestic flows are not calibrated to interest-rate differentials, currency movements or shifts in global risk appetite. They represent recurring domestic savings entering capital markets with increasing regularity, and that consistency has fundamentally altered the market's ability to absorb external shocks.

(CHART: Demat Accounts + Annual SIP Inflows)

(CHART: Mutual fund AUMs since FY19-26)

The clearest signal that FPIs are repricing India rather than abandoning it comes from what they sold and what they did not. For instance, in FY25, some sectors like IT bore the heaviest blow (the hyped-up AI story). Meanwhile, telecom, financials (still 30%+ of FPI India holdings as of May'26) and chemicals attracted consistent buying, sectors with domestic pricing power and earnings insulated from global impact.

Meanwhile, telecom, financials (which still accounted for over 30% of FPI holdings in India as of May 2026), and chemicals witnessed sustained inflows, supported by strong domestic pricing power and earnings that remain relatively insulated from global headwinds.

Consider the contrast: when TCS listed in 2004, nearly 80%+ of QIB demand came from foreign investors; domestic institutions barely featured. Two decades later, Tata Capital's IPO had domestic institutions at approximately c.65% of the anchor book. When Bajaj Housing Finance went public in Sep'24 with a 6500 crore IPO - Capital Group led the anchor book (INR 170 crore anchor investment). At INR 85 crore anchor investment each, HDFC Mutual Fund, SBI Mutual Fund and ICICI Prudential matched the Government of Singapore, ticket for ticket. Interestingly, number of retail investors rose from ~17 lakh in Sep'24 at IPO allotment to 26 lakh in Dec'24, a 55% increase in retail shareholding in just a quarter post listing, demonstrating valuable brand's pull from non-institutional household capital.

This transition however isn't entirely unprecedented. Nations like South Korea and Taiwan went through a version of this transition before us: domestic ownership surpassing foreign, greater stability, lower volatility on global risk-off days. While both saw P/E multiples expand, captive domestic capital chased a concentrated universe of Samsung, TSMC and semiconductors. India's opportunity set on the other hand is considerably broader. Financials, manufacturing, healthcare, consumer businesses, digital platforms, infrastructure and energy transition themes together provide a far larger investable universe. As domestic savings continue migrating toward financial assets, the breadth of listed opportunities should help capital find productive avenues across sectors rather than concentrating in a narrow group of market leaders.

None of this diminishes the importance of foreign capital. FPIs remain critical participants in India's capital markets, bringing global perspectives, valuation and price discovery discipline and access to pools of capital that domestic markets alone cannot replicate. Their presence improves price discovery and connects Indian companies to the broader global investment ecosystem.

What has changed, however, is the balance of influence. The real significance of this transition extends beyond market resilience. Every SIP instalment, mutual fund contribution and domestic institutional allocation expands the pool of patient capital available to Indian businesses. That capital supports new listings, funds corporate expansion and strengthens the market's ability to absorb volatility without disrupting long-term growth.

India's capital markets are no longer merely recipients of global capital flows; they are increasingly becoming engines of domestic capital formation in their own right. Foreign investors will continue to matter, and rightly so. But the defining story of the next decade may be that the growth of Indian markets is being funded not only by capital coming into the country, but by savings generated within it.

Let the Countdown Begin

Vineet Suchanti
Founder &
Managing Director
Keynote Financial Services Ltd.

Everyone is dressed up to the nines—the promoter, key management, their families, and stakeholders gathered beneath the lights of the BSE International Convention Hall on Dalal Street. There is celebration, recognition, and a sense of achievement. For most companies, this is a once-in-a-lifetime occasion.

Yet what the market sees that morning is only the final scene of a journey that began long before the DRHP was filed.

An IPO may appear to culminate with the ringing of the opening bell, but in reality, the real work starts much earlier. Listing day is simply the visible outcome of hundreds of decisions taken in boardrooms, auditor meetings, legal reviews, and strategy sessions. It is the result of preparing a business not just to raise capital, but to withstand the scrutiny that comes with being public.

The bell rings, the shares begin trading, and the headlines are written. But the companies that enjoy successful listings are rarely those that prepared for six months. They are the ones that started the countdown well in advance.

Put on Your Running Shoes

Once the decision to go public is made, the countdown has truly begun. While an IPO is often viewed as a transaction, it is more accurately a marathon that unfolds over many months. The formal process typically moves through three broad phases—preparation, execution, and marketing and pricing—but long before the filing begins, management must ensure that the business itself is ready for public markets.

Phase One: Preparation

This is where the foundation is laid.

The company begins by engaging with merchant bankers, evaluating advisors, and refining its equity story. Early discussions focus on investor positioning, valuation expectations, dilution, transaction structure, and the overall feasibility of the offering.

At the same time, the company prepares itself for rigorous due diligence. Restated financial statements are finalised, reporting systems are strengthened, a legal data room is established, and corporate governance frameworks are enhanced through an independent board and its committees.

Much of this work happens behind the scenes, but it often determines the success of everything that follows. None of it, however, can be achieved through the efforts of the founder alone. IPO readiness is a team sport. A company secretary ensures compliance and governance standards are maintained. A capable CFO takes ownership of the financial narrative and reporting framework. Auditors bring credibility to the numbers through detailed scrutiny of the financials and key metrics. Lawyers guide the company through diligence and documentation while helping resolve issues before they become obstacles.

Together, these professionals form the core team that transforms IPO readiness from an aspiration into a structured and executable plan.

Phase Two: Execution — Where IPOs Are Won or Lost

By this stage, the advisory team should already be in place. Lawyers do more than identify issues—they help solve them. Merchant bankers coordinate the process, advise on structure, valuation and timing, and ultimately lead execution. Engage them early; once the filing clock starts, every unresolved issue becomes more expensive to fix.

With the team assembled, attention turns to the long-lead items that often determine whether an IPO proceeds smoothly or becomes a scramble.

Capital Structure

The capital structure of a private company is rarely built with a public listing in mind. Shares issued decades ago to relatives, former directors, employee trusts, or dormant entities often remain unnoticed until due diligence brings them into the spotlight. Missing share certificates, disputed transfers, untraceable shareholders, and undocumented allotments suddenly become matters requiring explanation in the prospectus—and potentially to regulators.

Addressing these issues early is critical. Promoter-group classification, lock-in requirements, and minimum public shareholding norms all depend on a clean and clearly defined capital structure. In some cases, the company may need to undertake a bonus issue, stock split, consolidation, or other restructuring exercise before filing. These actions require approvals, consume valuable time, and must ultimately flow through the restated financial statements.

Deep Dive into the Business and the KPIs

Before drafting the prospectus, management should view the company through the eyes of a public-market investor.

Every key operating metric should be benchmarked against industry peers—not only to highlight areas of leadership but also to understand where the company trails the competition. The KPIs selected for the offer document become the scorecard against which the market judges performance quarter after quarter. Strengths must be defensible; weaknesses should be accompanied by a credible plan for improvement.

The financial narrative must be equally robust. Return ratios such as ROCE, ROE, and asset turnover demonstrate capital efficiency and often reveal more about business quality than headline growth rates. Revenue quality should be supported by customer diversification, marquee client relationships, and evidence of recurring demand rather than concentration risk.

Equally important is a clear articulation of how the IPO proceeds will be used. Investors respond more favourably when capital is being raised to fund growth and strengthen the business rather than simply facilitate an exit.

Arrangements and Agreements

What may have worked informally in a private company often becomes a liability under public-market scrutiny. Verbal understandings and handshake arrangements with suppliers, customers, distributors, and service providers should be formalised through written agreements that can withstand legal and financial diligence. Similar discipline should apply to employment contracts and management compensation structures, particularly where remuneration is linked to profitability or performance.

Related-party transactions deserve special attention. Services provided between group companies should be documented and priced on arm's-length terms, with a clear rationale that can withstand external review. Companies should begin operating like listed entities long before they become one.

Ownership of key assets should also be reviewed carefully. Trademarks, brands, licences, permits, intellectual property, and other critical rights should reside with the company itself rather than promoters, family members, or affiliate entities. Resolving such matters after filing is invariably more difficult than addressing them beforehand.

Phase Three: Marketing and Pricing

Once the filings with SEBI and the stock exchanges are substantially complete, the focus shifts from preparation and execution to what ultimately determines the success of the offering—meeting investors and building demand.

By this stage, the equity story has already been developed through months of diligence and analysis. It is now distilled into an investor presentation and financial model that institutional investors use to evaluate the business, its growth prospects, competitive positioning, and valuation. The objective is not merely to market the company, but to discover the right price at which the market is willing to participate in its future.

At this stage, the founder and CFO become the face of the offering. Investors are assessing more than the numbers; they are evaluating the credibility of the management team, the clarity of the strategy, and the ability of leadership to execute against the opportunities being presented.

The BRLMs coordinate the marketing process through investor meetings, roadshows, and anchor investor discussions. Feedback from these interactions helps shape the final valuation and price band, while institutional demand ultimately determines how the order book is built.

Preparation is critical. Management should expect rigorous questioning on financial performance, margins, competitive risks, governance standards, capital expenditure plans, and future growth assumptions. Well- structured mock sessions and comprehensive FAQs help ensure that management presents a consistent, confident, and credible message throughout the marketing process.

Once the book is built and pricing is finalised, the IPO moves into allocation, regulatory completion, and ultimately listing. By then, the market has already formed its first view of the company.

Celebrations Last a Day. Scrutiny Lasts for Years.

The bell at the listing ceremony is not a finish line; it is the starting gun. From the moment a company lists, every quarter becomes a report card, every investor call a test of credibility, and every strategic decision is judged in the public domain.

The companies that navigate this transition successfully are not the ones that prepare the fastest. They are the ones that prepare the earliest. A clean capital structure, strong governance, credible KPIs, disciplined reporting, and a management team ready for public-market scrutiny are not built during the IPO process. They are built long before the filing begins. The promoter who starts early enters the process prepared. The one who waits enters it exposed.

Put on your running shoes.

The countdown begins long before the IPO.

We live in an age of radical transparency — the expectation that institutions must not only act with integrity, but demonstrate it visibly, in real time, to anyone who asks. Institutions of every kind — governments, courts, corporations — are being asked to open their doors, share their deliberations, and demonstrate their integrity in public. And for the most part, this is welcome. But there is one room where pushing transparency too far becomes a threat to the very accountability it is meant to serve. The boardroom is not a place for performance. It is a place for judgment — honest, uncomfortable, sometimes dissenting judgment. And judgment, to mean anything, requires protection. The real question is not whether boards should be accountable — of course they should. It is whether the transparency we are demanding actually serves that goal.

How We Got Here

The case for boardroom transparency was not made in a seminar room. It was made in the wreckage of corporate failures that devastated investors and exposed boards that had either looked away or actively participated in what was happening beneath them. Enron's collapse revealed a board that approved structures it did not adequately scrutinise. Satyam's fraud showed how a founder could falsify accounts for years while a board remained insufficiently curious. In India, IL&FS's near- collapse and Yes Bank's crisis demonstrated what happens when boards fail to exercise independent judgment on risk and management accountability. In each case, regulators — SEBI, RBI, MCA — were forced to intervene, and the transparency frameworks we now debate were built, clause by clause, in direct response.

This history matters. Boards that invoke confidentiality to avoid scrutiny or protect insider interests have done real damage — to shareholders, to markets, and to the credibility of the institution itself. The question is not whether those boards should have been held to account. They should have been. The question is whether complete openness is the right answer — or whether something more considered is required.

The Case for the Closed Door

Boardroom confidentiality is not about concealment. It is about creating the conditions under which honest, consequential conversation becomes possible at all.

The quality of board deliberation depends entirely on trust — the shared understanding that what is said in the room stays in the room. Directors must be able to dissent from management recommendations, question the assumptions behind a strategic pivot, raise concerns about leadership capability, and stress-test a proposed acquisition without fear that their words will be reported externally, misrepresented in the financial press, or surfaced in a shareholder query or legal proceeding. These are not hypothetical risks. In an environment of heightened disclosure, activist shareholders, and real-time social media commentary, the consequences of a traceable opinion can be swift and severe.

When confidentiality erodes, the efficacy of the structure inside the boardroom shifts — quietly but decisively. A director who knows that a dissenting view may appear in a proxy advisory note, a corporate governance rating, or a website disclosure required under Listing Obligations and Disclosure Requirements is less likely to raise the uncomfortable question in the first place. Interventions are pre-cleared. Positions are hedged. Consensus is performed rather than reached.

The result is not better oversight — it is the appearance of oversight, which is considerably more dangerous than its absence.

The consequences of this shift are not theoretical. When the Tata Sons–Cyrus Mistry dispute became public in late 2016, the subsequent legal proceedings pulled boardroom correspondence and director deliberations into the public domain. The governance cost was significant — board proceedings became evidence, directors became witnesses, and the institution of the board itself became the story. Independent directors became visibly more cautious, and dissent harder to surface. Conversations that should have happened in confidence were deferred, diluted, or not had at all. Accountability and transparency are not the same instrument — and the hardest work boards do requires a protected space. Confidentiality is not a shield for misconduct — it is the foundation on which real accountability is built.

Transparency Is Not the Same as Accountability

Across global markets, the pressure on boards to open up has never been greater. ESG investors score companies on governance quality as a matter of routine — demanding data on board diversity, independence ratios, committee composition, and director tenure. Institutional shareholders — from domestic mutual funds operating under SEBI's Stewardship Code to global asset managers with explicit voting policies — are increasingly willing to vote against director appointments, flag related- party concerns, and file resolutions demanding structural change.

None of this is wrong. These forces have made boards more diverse, more answerable, and harder to capture. The era in which a promoter could populate a board with compliant nominees and face no external scrutiny is ending, at least in intent. That is progress, and it should be acknowledged plainly. But somewhere in this legitimate push for accountability, a critical distinction has been lost. Transparency in outcomes and transparency in deliberations are not the same thing — and conflating them is a governance error with real consequences.

Research by McKinsey on high-performing boards consistently identifies one variable above others as predictive of board effectiveness: the quality of internal deliberation. And deliberation quality — the willingness to disagree, to push back, to say the uncomfortable thing — is directly correlated with the protection of the space in which it happens. When directors know their words are traceable, they do not become more honest. They become more careful. And careful is not the same as good.

Accountability requires outcomes that can be measured, disclosed, and judged. It does not require that every conversation on the way to those outcomes be exposed. The closed door is not where accountability ends. It is where the honest work of accountability begins.

The India Paradox

India presents a governance challenge that is uniquely its own. The majority of listed Indian companies remain promoter-controlled — families or founding groups that simultaneously hold significant equity and occupy board positions. According to IiAS and NSE data, promoter groups hold controlling stakes in over 45% of NSE-listed companies. The board, in theory the highest oversight body, often includes the very individuals whose decisions it is meant to scrutinise.

Regulatory reform has attempted to correct for this. The Nomination and Remuneration Committee, strengthened progressively under SEBI's LODR framework, is now expected to ensure merit-based director selection — bringing rigour to a process that was historically informal and relationship-driven. The intent is sound. But the NRC can only function well if its deliberations remain protected. The moment its discussions about succession or board composition become public, the process is compromised before it begins.

Independent Directors carry an even heavier burden. Under Schedule IV of the Companies Act 2013, they face explicit fiduciary duties and personal liability for board decisions — and independent director resignations during governance crises have become a telling pattern. They are expected to question management, flag related-party risks, and dissent where necessary. Yet dissent in a promoter-dominated boardroom is never cost-free. An Independent Director challenging a founding family's preferred acquisition is navigating a social and commercial minefield. Confidentiality is not a courtesy extended to them — it is the condition under which honest scrutiny becomes possible at all.

The SEBI 2024 LODR Third Amendment — requiring detailed board profiles and rationale for shareholder proposals — adds another layer of complexity. Welcome steps toward accountability, yes. But when a director knows their position on a contentious proposal may be traceable through disclosure requirements or proxy advisory scrutiny, the incentive to hedge, abstain, or stay silent grows considerably.

This is the paradox at the heart of Indian corporate governance today. We are asking boards to be simultaneously more independent and more transparent. In a promoter-dominated system, these goals are not always compatible. True independence — the kind that involves uncomfortable questions, genuine dissent, and candid peer assessment — requires a protected space. The paradox resolves only when we are willing to draw a line — and hold it.

Drawing the Line

There is a clear line between what must be public and what must remain protected. On one side sits the board's accountability to its shareholders — the decisions made, the directors appointed, the transactions approved or rejected, the rationale for shareholder proposals, the outcomes delivered. Shareholders have an unqualified right to know what their board decided, who sits on it, and whether oversight is being exercised with rigour. SEBI's evolving disclosure framework, for all the compliance burden it imposes, is directionally correct.

On the other side sits the process — the deliberation that precedes the decision, the disagreement that stress-tests the assumption, the candid feedback on leadership that no director would offer if they knew it would surface in a proxy advisory report. This is the domain of judgment — and judgment, to be worth anything, must be exercised freely.

The two are easily conflated. A shareholder asking whether a related-party transaction was approved is asking a legitimate governance question. A shareholder asking which director raised concerns about it is asking for something different — not accountability, but access to the internal mechanics of deliberation. Granting that access does not produce better decisions. It produces more guarded ones. When a board debates CEO performance or an ambitious acquisition, directors must be willing to be wrong in front of their peers. That honesty is only possible when the room is protected. The moment directors calculate how their words might appear externally, the conversation becomes a record rather than a deliberation.

Cross that line — expose the process in the name of transparency — and you do not get more honest boards. You get more performative ones. Directors who speak for the record rather than for the decision. Governance that looks rigorous from the outside precisely because the rigour has been stripped from the inside.

The Middle Ground

None of this means the choice is binary. Governance frameworks globally have developed mechanisms that protect deliberation while preserving accountability. Executive sessions, independent directors meeting without management present are standard in US and UK boardrooms and remain underutilised in India. Delayed disclosure provisions, permitted under Securities & Exchange Commission rules where premature release would cause harm, offer a model for time-sensitive decisions. Anonymised dissent reporting — recording that dissent was registered without attributing it to a named director — protects the individual while preserving the integrity of the record. Confidential regulatory access, where SEBI or RBI are granted supervised visibility into board deliberations without public disclosure, offers oversight without exposure. These are not loopholes, they are architecture — the careful design of systems that hold both values at once.

The boardroom is not a place to hide. It is a place to think — and thinking, when it matters most, needs a closed door. Boards that are truly accountable are not boards whose every conversation is visible. They are boards whose decisions can be scrutinised, whose appointments can be questioned, and whose outcomes can be judged — precisely because the deliberation that produced them was honest enough to be worth scrutinising. Protect that space, and governance works. Erode it in the name of openness, and what remains is the appearance of governance — which is, in the end, far more dangerous than opacity ever was.

Pursuit of Excellence

Mukund M.Chitale

Mukund M.Chitale & Co.

Success in business and profession is appreciated by all. Every individual or organization tries to achieve success in the chosen field of activity. There are many factors which contribute to the success of an individual or organization. Pursuit of Excellence is one important factor which contributes largely to success. In fact, success is a tribute paid to Excellence.

The Pursuit of Excellence is the basis for existence of every business and profession in the long run. When we look around us, we find certain people and organizations who pursue their goals relentlessly by trying to achieve the best in their field. Every action and step by everybody in that organization is taken with the objective of doing it in the best possible manner. They pursue their growth through excellence.

However, there are many others who do not follow excellence as a rule. Consequently, the people in such Organization develop habits of doing things in a mediocre way. Over a period of years, inefficiency creeps in these organizations and slowly such organizations lose their position and vanish in the overall commercial atmosphere.

One must make sincere efforts to pursue excellence in whichever area the person operates. A person requires high intention to do things in an excellent manner It requires complete knowledge about the subject which you are dealing with so that you can do the work in the best possible manner. It also requires an ability to learn new things on a continuous basis. The world keeps changing so fast that one will become obsolete if one does not continue the process of learning and unlearning. In addition to knowledge of the subject, one must have full faith in what is being done and believe that it is being done rightly. The emotional ownership of the work that you do is most important. Any action without emotional ownership and a strong belief in the said action cannot produce results. Thus, high intention, knowledge supported by continuous learning and backed by strong belief and emotional ownership ensures that the work is done in the best possible manner. This is what is necessary in pursuit of excellence.

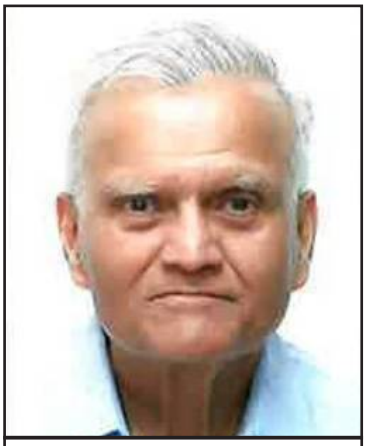
When every person in the organization decides to follow this path, the Organization is bound to grow in its chosen area of activity. When many organizations pursue this approach, it is bound to show positive results to the people connected with such organizations. When there are more organizations who are doing excellent work, it is bound to have impact on many others who may be doing it in a mediocre way. The natural impact of such illustrations pushes other people to do things in a better manner. This will ultimately result in more people pursuing excellence and produce better results. This will finally help our Nation to grow faster.

While the pursuit of excellence is the necessity for achieving success, the integrity and honesty of purpose is also very essential for long term existence. The competition to grow faster and succeed at any cost has driven some people to follow all wrong methods and finally they end up losing everything. Thus, the belief in self and the system and willingness to follow the right path in the long run is very essential.

When we look around in the commercial world, we find that the failure of few organizations either on account of economic environment or on account of fraud has become a recurring feature. Whenever such a fraud takes place, it results in loss of investments for many shareholders and loss of money for Banks. The Banks get their deposits from public and therefore any loss to a Bank is really loss to public. The history of major frauds in the country shows that whenever a major fraud takes place, the Government comes up with either a new law or amendments to the existing laws.

I feel that we need to formulate a policy about Dealing with Failures, Whenever, a fraud takes place we need to study the same properly and do a root cause analysis. We need to evaluate whether it was the failure of on individual or organization in proper compliance with the laws or was it resulting from a shortcoming in the law itself. If it is the failure of an individual or organization to comply with the laws, then it is more appropriate to punish such person or organization properly rather than changing the law itself. Mere additions to laws or amendments to the existing laws make things more complicated.

When we study the pattern arising out of various frauds, it is noticed that the greed for money has driven such people to follow all unethical and illegal means. Such frauds bring out that the hunger for more wealth without exerting has driven people to wrong means. However, if one looks at such people and organizations carefully, it is difficult to believe that nobody else knew about the wrong things done by such people. Many times, the silence of few people who are merely observing the wrongdoing or the intentional ignorance of few people who know about it, enable the fraudsters to become bold and do it in a brazen manner. In a way, the silent spectators should also be considered equally responsible for such frauds and the consequential loss of money for the public at large.



Thus, it is essential to have some principles in business if the society has to grow and enable growth of business on a sound footing.

तत्त्वात् संजायते नीतिः ! नीत्या सत्कृति जायते ।
कृतिः ददाति समृद्धिं! तत्त्वम् सिद्ध्यादि कारणम् ॥

One needs to have Principles in every activity that we carry out. Every business or profession should be based on some principles. Such Principles should be supported by proper Strategy to achieve the goals. If there is no Strategy adopted, then the mere existence of Principles would not be useful. The Strategy, which is based on Principles, must be backed by Action. A mere Strategy without Action is again of no use. Finally, a principle-based Strategy which is backed by proper Action results in Human Enrichment. It is not merely money or wealth which makes one rich. Overall Human Enrichment is much more important.

Thus, the role of every human being in the Society should be to move towards excellence. The businesses and professions who create wealth and large employment need to move towards excellence to remain relevant in their activities. Such businesses and professions will always keep growing and this will help many other people to grow in their chosen field. Finally, the goal for all of us should be to achieve human enrichment for all.

Broadening the Capital Market

K.S.Mehta
Managing Partner
S.S.Kothari Mehta & Co.LLP

Both CCI and SEBI deserve full kudos for deepening and broadening the Capital Market; and strengthening the Stock Exchanges – all for the development of the sources of long-term funds.

Some of the measures taken deserve recognition. Under Padma Bhushan, Mr. D R Mehta, (IAS Retired), CCI & then SEBI started liberalization. Successive Chairman took more measures.

(A) the rigidity of having at least 60% shares held by the public was reduced to 40%, and this 40% public shareholding the latter could even be achieved in 2 stages of 20% each

(B) Subsequently, for large infrastructure companies, even the minimum 40% was reduced to 10% public shareholding as the threshold for listing.

(C) Pvt. companies having debentures were allowed to list debt instruments – thus, their annual data are available to many potential investors as Annual Reports have to be placed on Websites. More importantly, in due course, the promoters will master the discipline of the Stock Exchange and be incentivized to turn public and issue new shares for growth.

(D) Social stock exchanges are another unique feature and avenue for funds

(E) REITS & INVITS are a very promising innovation whereby Shareholding Trusts have been allowed to raise investible resources from the public.

(F) Then came the concept of a separate Board for SME companies complying with at least 3 years profit criteria with liberalization in other criteria.

All very progressive steps which lead to greater flow of companies coming to the Market for raising debt or equity funds and hence faster growth of the economy.

It is time to develop other categories of investment vehicles to raise capital and invest for growth in businesses.

The Limited Liability Partnership Act has stimulated growth of new activity in services, trading, manufacturing, healthcare etc., by registered LLPs.

If these are allowed to be listed on the Stock Exchange, their business can grow rapidly and attract both debt and equity capital; business capacity can grow, contributing to higher employment.

For attracting outside equity in LLP some changes will be needed. These changes will evolve even more by a panel discussion if concept is accepted. Stock Exchanges could have liberal rules made as in the SME companies, e.g.to allow the LLP even to start with a 25% share offering to the public. If it is in infrastructure, 10% of capital issue to public rule could apply here also as in the main Board, if it is a large LLP.

As far as the non-Public shares are concerned in the 75% lot, they may be required to offer to sell to other promoters first in a time frame, and only thereafter to outsiders.

A framework will have to be developed for share capital for board management, for meetings for Accounts etc. once the basic proposal is accepted.

Currently, IT Act gives exemption to any Partnership Firm converting to a Pvt.Ltd.Co. from capital gains tax but on condition that the Promotors Group must continue to hold 51% of the share capital for a period of five years and all assets & liabilities be transferred to the company. In case of LLP converting to company, it needs a court process. But the biggest deterrent is the high stamp duty of 8% and above that have to be paid when a firm is converted to a company. This too is based on market value of assets and is a concurrent subject. Hence change across 27 states will be difficult.

Hence, we suggest that allow the LLP to raise capital and debentures on the stock exchange directly as it is an incorporated body. It will open up another growth investment avenue as well as a source of capital for growth.

Many procedural changes will be required.

LLPs are already playing a fast-developing role in economic growth and should be encouraged to do so by raising capital.

Prevention of Corporate Frauds – Magnificent 7 Ideas

A thought leadership perspective for global auditors, board members, and regulators

Parveen Kumar
National Head-Assurance
ASA & Associates LLP

Corporate Frauds

Corporate fraud may be defined as a 'deliberate' misrepresentation or concealment of material facts by an individual for personal gain or interests of any organisation at the expense of its stakeholders, which may include investors, creditors, employees or the public at large. Corporate fraud is different from stealing and small theft because it is generally premeditated, systemic, and executed by those entrusted with power.

According to a study on occupational fraud[1] organisations globally are estimated to lose 5% of their annual revenues to fraud each year. As per this recent study, which is based on analysis of 2402 cases across 143 countries, an estimated amount of loss was exceeding USD 3.4 billion. These are only which were detected and reported, many more might have been undetected. Within Corporate fraud, Financial Statement Fraud is significantly different from Asset Misappropriation. The paradox is stark and worth pondering on. While financial statement fraud accounts for only 5% of cases, it causes median losses more than six times greater than that in case of asset misappropriation. It is the tip of the iceberg that sinks ships. Boards, audit committees, auditors and regulators must recognise that frequency and severity are inversely correlated and calibrate their attention accordingly. Let us have a look at a couple of historical landmark cases to set the context.

Enron Corporation (USA, 2001)[2] was once the largest company in the United States, acknowledged fraudulent financial reporting spanning five years, during which it concealed massive debts and losses using off-balance sheet special purpose vehicles. When the scheme collapsed, Enron filed for one of the largest corporate bankruptcy in US history. Five years of financial statements signed off by its auditor Arthur Andersen had to be restated. Shareholders lost billions virtually overnight, and thousands of employees lost their retirement savings.

Wirecard AG (Germany, 2020)[3] was once a darling of European fintech, collapsed after it was revealed that a huge amount of cash, that was appearing in the financial statement, was actually missing. The fraud had been orchestrated for years, combining false accounting with inflated revenue from fictitious clients. Its long-serving auditor EY refused to sign the accounts because it couldn't verify the existence of €1.9bn of assets. Wirecard filed for insolvency on 25 June 2020, wiping out nearly EUR 25 billion in market capitalisation.

Magnificent 7 Ideas

Prevention is better than cure, and timely detection is superior to loss recovery. Drawing on three and a half decades of audit and consulting practice, in my experience, the following ideas represent not a theoretical checklist but a battle tested, actionable agenda for boards, executives, and professionals who are serious about making their organisations fraud resistant. Challenges are inevitable but there are tricks to manage them. We will discuss these challenges alongside.

Anonymous Reporting and Action

The data in report we discussed above is unambiguous. Tips account for 43% of fraud detection, and organisations with a reporting hotline suffer 50% lower fraud losses. Yet many organisations treat whistleblower policies and procedures as a compliance box tick rather than a genuine intelligence asset. An effective mechanism must be truly anonymous, operated by preferably an independent third party, accessible 24/7 across multiple channels (phone, web, email), and actively promoted at all organisational levels including external stakeholders like vendors and customers.

Organisations generally hush up fraud to protect reputations. Every substantiated fraud must be rigorously investigated, reported to law enforcement where required, and culprit should be prosecuted to the fullest extent possible.

On action, practicality is taken as shield. The argument that litigation is expensive and time consuming besides recoveries are minimal overshadow actions. Nevertheless, the deterrent value of consistent enforcement far exceeds its direct cost. Regulatory referrals and industry debarment are levers that organisations should use without hesitation, may be as example.

Power House called Audit Committee

Audit committees that meet perfunctorily and work like a rubber stamp of management's narrative are a governance illusion. An effective audit committee must comprise financially literate, genuinely 'independent' directors with the mandate, the skill, and the willingness to probe, challenge, and escalate. It should have a direct, unmediated reporting line from internal auditor and external auditor and must regularly meet with both of these without management present. The audit committee's independence is the one of the most important governance safeguards against top-management fraud.

Practically, in most of the promoter driven entities, audit committees are frequently populated with associates of the controlling shareholder, rarely rendering meaningful oversight. While regulators try to enforce substantive independence, the professionals could also play an important role here.

Fraud Risk Assessment Calendar

A frequent formal fraud risk assessment is required to identify vulnerability, which might be due to opportunity or gap in controls. This must be conducted at least annually if not half yearly in high risk environments. This assessment could be owned by the board, not delegated entirely to management, given that management level fraud is precisely where the greatest loss occur.

It is advisable to include 'unannounced' forensic reviews of high risk areas. These can be conducted by specialists with forensic skills can intercept emerging schemes before they scale. The element of surprise is critical; scheduled reviews give time to perpetrators.

Quite a few corners in corporate world treat fraud risk assessment as an afterthought or a periodic audit exercise. Cost and the perception that forensic reviews imply distrust of management deter many boards. The counter-argument is straightforward. The cost of a forensic review is trivially small compared to the potential cost of an undetected fraud.

Having said that, a regular fraud risk assessment must be a living process embedded in strategic planning, budgeting cycles, and change in business model, geography, or leadership.

Avoid Management Override

The Auditing standards requires external auditors to identify management override of controls as one of the fraud risk in almost every statutory audit. Controls designed only to constrain operational staff leave a dangerous vacuum at the top. Specific measures could include requirement of dual authorisation for all material journal entries besides mandatory board level approval for any accounting policy changes. Similarly, how about having independent review of all related party transactions and segregation of duties that genuinely separates initiation, approval, and recording functions even at the highest level.

Tone at the top is not a slogan. When leaders are seen to cut ethical corners, manipulate metrics to meet targets, or retaliate against bearers of bad news, they create a culture in which fraud flourishes. Codes of conduct must be lived, not laminated.

Executives resist such controls perceiving these as questioning their integrity. The framing shift and smart narrative can be game changer, for example robust controls protect honest executives from false accusation as much as they deter dishonest ones.

Data Analytics and Continuous Monitoring

Artificial intelligence, machine learning, and advanced data analytics now makes it possible to monitor 100% of transactions in real time rather than checking a sample. Anomaly detection algorithms can flag unusual journal entries, duplicate payments, vendor master data changes just before payment runs besides revenue recognition patterns that deviate from historical norms. Organisations that invest in continuous monitoring shift the paradigm from periodic detection to real time prevention.

Implementation requires data infrastructure investment and specialised skills that many organisations lack. A practical starting point could be to deploy analytics on the high risk transaction streams (journal entries, related party transactions, vendor payments, expense claims).

Mandatory Job Rotation

Prolonged, unchecked tenure in a single role is a fraud incubator. Mandatory job rotation and compulsory annual leave (may be at least two consecutive weeks) are time-tested fraud prevention tools. Many frauds are discovered precisely when a perpetrator is on leave and a replacement uncovers the irregularity.

Operational disruption and the perceived cost of knowledge transfer often cause organisations to defer rotation indefinitely. Boards must mandate it as a non-negotiable governance standard.

Background Verification

Generally fraud perpetrators will have a prior history of dishonesty. Pre employment background verification including criminal record checks, reference verification, qualifications validation, and credit history review for financially sensitive roles must be mandatory, not discretionary. Verification will be crucial to lateral hires besides promotions at senior levels, where the stakes are highest. Periodic re screening of employees in sensitive roles is an emerging best practice.

Privacy laws vary across jurisdictions and can constrain the scope of background checks. Organisations must navigate local legal requirements while designing the most comprehensive screening permissible.

Auditor - The Last Line of Conscience

Corporate frauds are not aberration. These are human phenomenon that no regulation, technology, or governance framework can ever fully eliminate. But the evidence is clear. Organisations that invest seriously in prevention, detection, and consequence management suffer significantly lower losses and recover faster.

For auditors, the profession demands more than technical competence and professional skepticism. It requires the courage to question, the independence to stand apart, and the integrity to speak uncomfortable truths. The Enron auditors signed off. The Wirecard auditors signed off. We, as a professional, must ensure we never become the last signature before the collapse.

The magnificent 7 ideas presented here are not exhaustive and no two organisations face identical fraud risks. Whether you are an auditor, board member, regulator, or promoter, the point is to take these ideas as a starting point for honest self-assessment and decisive action. The cost of complacency has never been higher.

The author is a Chartered Accountant and practicing auditor with over 35 years of professional experience.

SEBI's Confidential Pre-Filing Mechanism for IPOs: A Net Positive Step for Indian Capital Markets Despite a Modest Uptake

Just like India's economy, India's capital markets have experienced significant growth over the last decade. This growth has been fueled by proactive and innovative steps implemented by the Indian securities regulator, Securities and Exchange Board of India ("SEBI"). However, one of the reforms that has been an extremely useful one, even if not transformational yet, is the introduction of the confidential pre-filing mechanism for offer documents in initial public offerings ("IPOs"). Prior to 2022, an issuer exploring the possibility of an IPO was required to mandatorily file a draft offer document with SEBI for its review, which included various commercially sensitive information about its business operations, financial performance, competitive strategy, risk factors and proposed utilization of proceeds and such draft offer document was hosted on SEBI's public platform which is accessible by anybody and everybody. While the offer document remained subject to the review of the regulators (i.e., SEBI and the stock exchanges), they also remained exposed to the public, peers and rivals of the issuers without any certainty about the IPO from a regulatory or marketing perspective.

The confidential pre-filing mechanism was introduced to solve this real issuer-side problem of premature public disclosure of commercially sensitive information in the draft red herring prospectus ("DRHP") while still preserving eventual public disclosure before launch.

SEBI has been extremely vigilant on the disclosure and compliance hygiene of the issuers in recent times leading to even return or rejection of DRHPs for sub-par disclosures or lack of statutory or regulatory compliance on the part of the issuers or its promoters. This, coupled with volatile market conditions due to geo-political issues, has led to a number of issuers not being able to launch their IPOs despite filing the DRHPs with SEBI.

Set forth below is a list of number of DRHPs filed and their success rates in the three years prior to the introduction of the confidential pre-filing mechanism in 2022.

S.No.	Financial Year	Number of DRHPs filed	Number of issuers who executed their IPO from column 3	Number of issuers who did not proceed with the IPO from column 3
1.	2018-19	65	24 (36.92%)	41 (63.08%)
2.	2019-20	33	23 (69.70%)	10 (30.30%)
3.	2020-21	31	25 (80.65%)	6 (19.35%)
Total		129	72 (55.81%)	57 (44.19%)

It can be seen from the table above that in the three financial years from Fiscal 2019 to Fiscal 2021, out of 129 DRHPs, 57 issuers did not launch their IPOs despite filing the DRHPs with SEBI. Following stakeholder consultations through the introduction of a consultation paper on May 11, 2022, SEBI introduced a confidential pre-filing mechanism for IPOs through an amendment to the Securities and Exchange Board of India (Issue of Capital and Disclosure Requirements) Regulations, 2018 ("SEBI ICDR Regulations") in November 2022.

Since 2022, 48 companies have used the confidential pre-filing mechanism in India, with only one filing in each of 2022 and 2023, followed by a marginal increase to two filings in 2024. However, the momentum increased significantly thereafter, with 20 filings in 2025 and another 24 filings in the first five months of 2026 alone. By May 2026, confidential filings constituted 22.73% of all IPO filings, up from 11.15% in 2025 and a negligible 1.27% in 2024.

In this article, we evaluate the hits and misses of the confidential pre-filing mechanism with a focus on what more can be done to make this a more favorable and a more transformational mechanism which propels the growth of Indian capital markets.

The wins and blessings

Better protection of commercially sensitive information

This has been the core policy rationale for implementing the confidential pre-filing mechanism by SEBI. SEBI noted that, under the conventional public filing route, issuers had to disclose sensitive business information publicly even when there was uncertainty on whether the IPO would proceed; competitors could potentially use that information. The confidential pre-filing mechanism addresses this by allowing the pre-filed draft offer document to remain outside the public domain until after receiving SEBI's observations and the issuer's decision to proceed. This is especially helpful for tech, consumer platform, financial services and other data-rich businesses. Growth-stage companies operating in highly competitive sectors where disclosure of business strategies, customer acquisition metrics, technological capabilities or expansion plans can provide competitors with valuable strategic intelligence.

Greater execution flexibility

One of the primary reasons issuers choose the confidential pre-filing mechanism is to preserve flexibility in uncertain market conditions. This mechanism allows issuers to test regulatory comments, market conditions and institutional appetite before committing to full public disclosure. This is particularly relevant in periods of geopolitical uncertainty and volatile capital markets. SEBI's own data showed that, from Fiscal 2019 to Fiscal 2021, 57 out of 129 issuers that filed DRHPs with SEBI did not proceed with IPOs. That was a strong empirical basis for giving issuers a less publicly exposed preparatory route. Companies can therefore pursue an IPO opportunistically without creating expectations that a listing is inevitable which reduces reputational risk associated with IPO withdrawal.

Limited "testing the waters" is a practical addition

SEBI's framework for confidential pre-filing mechanism incorporates a "testing the waters" construct that enables issuers to engage with certain potential investors (typically qualified institutional buyers) to explore interest of such investors in the intended IPO, before formally launching the IPO. This helps issuers and bankers gauge institutional demand and valuation sensitivity before taking the reputational and commercial step of public DRHP disclosure. Such interactions may facilitate more efficient price discovery and better alignment between issuer expectations and investor demand.

More aligned with international practice

Jurisdictions such as the USA, the UK and Singapore permit confidential or pre-filing review processes. The Indian framework therefore brought the main board IPO process closer to global market practice, which is useful for companies with sophisticated financial sponsors or cross-border investor bases. While confidential filing as a mechanism has accelerated significantly since 2012, the architecture of these regimes varies substantially across jurisdictions.

Particulars	United States of America	India	Singapore	United Kingdom
Initial Filing	Issuer confidentially submits a draft registration statement (typically Form S-1) with the Securities and Exchange Commission ("SEC"). The document is not publicly available initially.	Issuer submits a pre-filed draft red herring prospectus ("PDRHP") to SEBI and stock exchanges. The document is not publicly available initially.	Confidential review of draft prospectus documents may be available in certain circumstances, but Singapore does not have a dedicated IPO confidential filing regime equivalent to India's confidential filing framework.	Draft prospectus is submitted confidentially to the Financial Conduct Authority ("FCA") for review.

Regulatory Review	SEC reviews the draft registration statement and issues comments confidentially.	SEBI and the stock exchanges review the PDRHP and issue observations/comments confidentially.	Monetary Authority of Singapore reviews prospectus disclosure requirements, while Singapore Exchange reviews listing eligibility and compliance.	FCA reviews and issues comments confidentially.
Public Disclosure Trigger	Registration statement and SEC comment letters must become public before the roadshow presentations.	PDRHP must subsequently be made public (after addressing comments of the SEBI and stock exchanges) for their review for a period of at least 21 days.	Draft prospectus review can occur before public launch, but the final prospectus must be publicly registered and available before the offering.	Draft prospectus remains confidential until publication closer to the IPO.
Withdrawal Flexibility	Issuer may withdraw after confidential review with significantly reduced public visibility.	Issuer may abandon the IPO after confidential review without extensive public disclosure of the draft prospectus.	The framework provides some confidentiality during preparatory stages but does not offer the same formalized protection associated with a confidential review process in India.	Issuer may similarly withdraw like India, prior to publication with minimal public scrutiny.

The misses

The confidential pre-filing mechanism adds additional process steps which have impact on timeline and costs. Perhaps, that's why uptake has been visible but not overwhelming. The confidential pre-filing mechanism has been used by notable issuers, and SEBI's processing-status disclosures show several pre-filing matters in the pipeline. But the same SEBI disclosure also shows that ordinary IPO filings continue to dominate the pipeline. The confidential pre-filing mechanism is not simply a confidential version of the ordinary DRHP process. It adds stages – pre-filed DRHP, SEBI observations, Updated Draft Red Herring Prospectus – I ("UDRHP-I") for public comments, Updated Draft Red Herring Prospectus – II ("UDRHP-II") after public comments, and then Red Herring Prospectus and Prospectus. SEBI's consultation process had recorded concerns from some merchant bankers that the confidential pre-filing mechanism could have negative implications for timelines, costs and process perspective, although all things considered - those concerns are outweighed by issuer benefits.

However, to streamline and rationalize the process further and to make the confidential pre-filing mechanism a transformational step in the Indian securities markets, the following steps could be considered by SEBI:

Proposed flexibility to amend objects until public filing – The current framework under the SEBI ICDR Regulations permits a fresh issue component of the IPO to increase or decrease by up to 50% after the issuance of SEBI observations, which is more than the ordinary threshold applicable in the public filing route. The commercial rationale supporting flexibility in the quantum of the fresh issue should also apply to the underlying objects of the IPO, until the public filing of the offer document. While the confidential IPO mechanism recognizes that the issuer's financing requirements may change materially before public disclosure, if the issuer is not correspondingly permitted to amend or delete an object of the IPO before the public filing, the substantive deployment plan explaining and justifying the revised size of the IPO would remain incomplete. A calibrated safeguard could be that amendments or deletions of objects until the public filing should be permitted without requiring a fresh confidential filing, provided the revised objects are incorporated in the public filing and SEBI is given an opportunity to review the updated disclosure before the document is made public or before the issuer proceeds further in the IPO process. For example, in the first instance, an issuer should be permitted to have five objects in the confidentially pre-filed document while they can reserve the right to drop a few of the objects based on regulatory review, business requirements and marketing feedback. In the second instance, an issuer who has identified repayment of loans as its object, should be allowed to replace the loans identified in the pre-filed DRHP with new loans availed at the public filing stage.

Compliance of certain corporate governance requirements – In relation to corporate governance, some requirements that are inefficient to be complied with at a confidential exploration stage (particularly where the issuer may not ultimately proceed with the IPO) can be addressed during the confidential review period and crystallized by the time the offer document is made public. SEBI expressly recognized timing flexibility for compliance of certain regulations in relation to the confidential pre-filing mechanism in its 2022 board memorandum on introduction of pre-filing of offer documents. That principle supports a practical approach on relaxation of certain corporate governance requirements such as appointment of all the independent directors in the confidential pre-filing stage. While an issuer should not assume that all governance requirements can be deferred without consequence, the company may generally use the confidential period to identify a few independent directors, as that does take additional time.

Undertake strategic material acquisition during the confidential review period – The current framework permits issuers to undertake material acquisitions during the confidential filing period along with submission of pro forma financial statements, while the acquisition may still be under negotiation, subject to closing conditions or other commercially sensitive details. Material acquisitions often involve complex negotiations, regulatory approvals, financing arrangements and integration planning, all of which may remain ongoing during the confidential review process. Requiring issuers to prepare pro forma financial statements, before the acquisition has been completed may create practical difficulties, particularly where access to the target's financial information is limited or where the transaction structure remains subject to change. Accordingly, where a material acquisition is under negotiation during the confidential review phase, only upon completion of the acquisition, the issuer should submit the pro forma financial statements and related disclosures confidentially to SEBI during the review process, with comprehensive disclosures in the public filing. This approach would ensure that public investors receive complete and accurate information regarding the post-acquisition business and financial profile of the issuer, while preserving the flexibility and confidentiality that the pre-filing mechanism is intended to provide.

Allowing pending schemes of arrangement during the confidential review period - One of the most significant advantages of a confidential filing regime is its ability to accommodate corporate evolution during the regulatory review process. In furtherance of this objective, issuers should be permitted to maintain a proposed scheme of arrangement as pending during the confidential filing phase, without being required to complete the scheme prior to the confidential submission of the draft offer document. The experience of Tata Capital Limited ("Tata Capital") provides a useful illustration of why issuers should be permitted to pursue a confidential filing even while a material scheme of arrangement remains pending. As part of its pre-IPO reorganization, Tata Capital undertook a merger of Tata Motors Finance Limited into Tata Capital. At the time Tata Capital initiated its confidential IPO filing process, the scheme of arrangement had not yet become effective and remained subject to completion of the applicable regulatory and judicial approval process. Despite the pendency of the scheme, Tata Capital was able to proceed with the confidential filing process and engage with the regulator while the scheme continued to progress towards completion. The amalgamation was subsequently approved by the National Company Law Tribunal, Mumbai Bench and became effective before the IPO process moved to the public filing stage. SEBI should specifically make it a codified regulation by providing for it in the SEBI ICDR Regulations for confidential pre-filing mechanism. This can become an exception available only to issuers opting for the confidential pre-filing mechanism and additional conditions (e.g., the scheme should have been filed, approvals of shareholders and lenders should have been obtained etc.) can be included to ensure that this mechanism is not exploited by issuers.

Conclusion

The confidential pre-filing mechanism is a net positive step for Indian capital markets. It reduces the "all or nothing" disclosure burden at the exploratory IPO stage and gives issuers a more sophisticated regulatory pathway. Since its introduction, the confidential filing route has gained increasing acceptance among Indian issuers, particularly technology companies, fintech platforms, consumer internet businesses and private equity-backed enterprises. Recent market practice indicates that confidential filing is gradually evolving from an exception to a mainstream alternative even for large and complex IPO transactions. As adoption increases, regulators may continue to refine disclosure timelines and investor engagement mechanisms. However, it is not a complete substitute for the standard public filing route. Its practical value is highest where confidentiality, timing optionality and institutional price discovery matter enough to justify the extra procedural steps.

The GIFT IFSC Listing Regime: Building India's Gateway to Global Capital

Introducing the GIFT IFSC

India has long aspired to establish itself as a global financial hub capable of competing with leading international financial centres while retaining capital formation and financial services within its own regulatory ecosystem. International financial centres have long served as gateways through which global capital is raised, intermediated and invested. Jurisdictions such as the Dubai International Financial Centre ("DIFC"), the Abu Dhabi Global Market ("ADGM"), Singapore and Hong Kong have successfully developed specialised financial ecosystems by combining regulatory certainty, efficient market infrastructure, tax incentives and access to global investors. These centres have evolved into preferred venues for cross-border banking, asset management, capital markets transactions and financial innovation, often serving regions well beyond their domestic economies.

For many years, India lacked a comparable international financial centre. As a result, a substantial proportion of cross-border financial activity involving Indian businesses, including foreign currency bond issuances, derivatives trading, offshore fund management and overseas capital raising, was undertaken through financial centres outside India. The establishment of the Gujarat International Finance Tec-City International Financial Services Centre ("GIFT IFSC"), India's first International Financial Services Centre ("IFSC"), seeks to bridge this structural gap. Designed as a specialised financial jurisdiction with a distinct legal, regulatory and tax framework, the IFSC is intended provide an internationally competitive ecosystem from which financial services may be offered to non-residents and, to the extent permitted under applicable law, to residents. At the same time, it operates alongside, rather than entirely outside, India's broader legal and foreign exchange framework.

For issuers and financial sponsors, the GIFT IFSC listing regime represents an alternative pathway to access international pools of capital from within an Indian regulatory environment. However, practical adoption remains at an early stage and continues to involve structuring, regulatory and market-facing considerations that will influence transaction execution.

Defining Features of GIFT IFSC and Underlying Rationale

A defining feature of GIFT IFSC is its regulatory architecture. While India's domestic financial system is regulated by multiple sectoral regulators, financial activities within the IFSC are supervised by a single unified regulator, the International Financial Services Centres Authority ("IFSCA"), established under the International Financial Services Centres Authority Act, 2019.

By consolidating regulatory oversight of banking, capital markets, insurance, fund management and other financial services within the IFSCA, the framework aims to create a more integrated and internationally oriented regulatory environment capable of responding to the commercial realities of cross-border financial markets. This unified approach is broadly consistent with the governance models adopted by other international financial centres. For example, the DIFC is regulated by the Dubai Financial Services Authority, while the ADGM is regulated by the Financial Services Regulatory Authority, each of which exercises comprehensive oversight over financial services activities conducted within the respective financial centre. Similarly, Singapore's Monetary Authority of Singapore functions as an integrated financial regulator with responsibility for banking, securities, insurance and other financial services. By consolidating regulatory oversight within a single authority, GIFT IFSC seeks to provide a comparable level of regulatory coherence and ease of doing business for international market participants.

While this unified model is intended to streamline oversight, transactions involving Indian issuers continue to require parallel consideration of Indian law requirements, including under the Companies Act, 2013 and the Foreign Exchange Management Act, 1999. As a result, issuers and their advisers must navigate both IFSC specific regulations and broader domestic legal frameworks, which may introduce additional complexity when compared with purely offshore listing venues.

The policy objective underlying GIFT IFSC extends beyond providing another venue for securities trading. It seeks to position India as a jurisdiction from which international capital may be raised, invested and managed, while encouraging global financial institutions, intermediaries and investors to operate within an Indian regulatory environment. The development of a competitive listing framework is therefore a natural extension of this broader vision.

The IFSC Exchanges: Building an International Capital Markets Ecosystem

GIFT IFSC currently hosts two recognised stock exchanges: India International Exchange ("India INX"), backed by BSE Limited, and NSE International Exchange ("NSE IX"), backed by the National Stock Exchange of India. Both exchanges operate under the regulatory oversight of the IFSCA.

Initially focused on offshore trading platforms for derivatives and debt securities, the exchanges have since expanded, their product offerings to include equity securities, depository receipts, exchange-traded funds, real estate investment trusts ("REITs"), infrastructure investment trusts ("InvITs"), sustainability linked instruments and other internationally recognised capital market products.

A distinguishing feature of the IFSC exchanges is their flexibility with respect to the denomination of listed securities. Unlike domestic Indian exchanges, which operate in Indian Rupees, securities listed on IFSC exchanges may be denominated in foreign currency, enabling issuers to align fundraising currency with their investor base and reducing currency mismatch risks.

From a policy perspective, the establishment of India INX and NSE IX represents more than the addition of new exchanges. Rather, they provide the core institutional infrastructure required to support an international capital markets ecosystem capable of facilitating cross-border capital formation within an Indian jurisdiction.

As the range of products available on the exchanges has expanded, so too has the need for a modern and comprehensive regulatory framework governing listings. This culminated in the introduction of the IFSCA (Listing) Regulations, 2024, which consolidated and modernised the listing regime applicable to securities listed on recognised stock exchanges within GIFT IFSC.

The Listing Framework: From Regulatory Reform to Market Access

Recent legislative and regulatory reforms have laid the foundation for listings on IFSC exchanges. The centrepiece of this framework is the International Financial Services Centres Authority (Listing) Regulations, 2024 ("Listing Regulations") which consolidate and modernise the regime governing the issuance and listing of a broad range of securities, including equity shares, debt instruments, depository receipts, REITs and InvITs.

Complementing this framework are the Companies (Listing of Equity Shares in Permissible Jurisdictions) Rules, 2024, together with related foreign exchange reforms, which permit eligible Indian public companies to directly list their equity shares on recognised stock exchanges in notified jurisdictions such as the IFSC exchanges.

This represents a significant evolution from India's traditional approach to overseas capital raising, where issuers typically relied upon offshore holding structures or depository receipt programmes. The new framework enables eligible Indian companies to directly access international capital markets while remaining incorporated in India.

In practice, however, the choice between a direct IFSC listing and alternative structures, such as offshore listings or depositary receipt programmes, will depend on several factors, including investor familiarity with the IFSC platform, liquidity considerations and the degree of regulatory coordination required across Indian and IFSC regimes. Transactions involving IFSC listings require careful navigation of multiple legal frameworks, including potential sequencing, approval and disclosure considerations across these regimes.

Market Adoption: The Way Forward

The introduction of a comprehensive legal framework has established the foundation for an international equity listing regime within GIFT IFSC. Its success, however, will depend on the extent to which issuers and investors actively utilise the platform.

While debt listings have demonstrated a degree of maturity, the equity listing framework remains at a relatively early stage of development, with market depth and secondary liquidity yet to reach levels typically observed in more established international financial centres. As of mid 2025, only a limited number of issuers have publicly filed draft offer documents under the Listing Regulations. Although modest in number, these filings represent important initial precedents and demonstrate the operational viability of the framework.

Several factors have contributed to the pace of adoption, including the limited number of completed equity listings, evolving investor familiarity with the platform and the need for broader institutional participation to support price discovery and secondary trading. From an issuer perspective, the relative absence of an established ecosystem of research coverage, market making activity and comparable listed peers may also impact valuation certainty and execution timelines in the near term.

International capital markets typically develop through network effects: issuers are attracted to markets offering liquidity and investor depth, while investors gravitate towards markets with diverse issuers and active trading. Developing this virtuous cycle will require time, particularly in the absence of a critical mass of precedent transactions.

Operational and Structural Considerations

Operational aspects will also play an important role in shaping market participation. Continued alignment of settlement, clearing and custody processes with international standards will enhance accessibility for overseas investors and reduce execution complexity. Similarly, investor onboarding processes, infrastructure readiness and ease of participation will influence the attractiveness of the platform. As the market evolves, the publication of regulatory guidance, interpretative positions and transaction precedents by the IFSCA will contribute to greater predictability in execution.

In addition, features commonly seen in mature international markets—such as confidential filing mechanisms, flexibility in disclosure processes and streamlined regulatory review timelines—may further enhance the competitiveness of the IFSC regime, particularly for complex or commercially sensitive transactions.

Conclusion

The GIFT IFSC listing framework represents a significant step towards positioning India as a jurisdiction for international capital formation. The legal and regulatory infrastructure necessary to support such a framework is largely in place, and early transaction activity demonstrates its potential viability.

However, the continued development of the ecosystem will depend on sustained participation by issuers, investors and intermediaries, as well as the deepening of secondary market liquidity and supporting infrastructure. Policy stability and regulatory consistency will remain critical in fostering long term market confidence.

Notwithstanding the progress made, issuers and their advisers will need to carefully evaluate the suitability of the IFSC platform on a transaction specific basis, taking into account regulatory alignment, investor demand and execution considerations.

The Maturing of the Municipal Bond Market in India – A Boon for Urban Infrastructure

Suhail Nathani

Economic Laws Practice

Globally municipal bonds are a very popular instrument for government utilities to raise funding. These are fixed interest long term instruments ideally suited for projects with long gestation periods. Besides being a source of long term funding, these instruments also bring about fiscal discipline in the issuer. In order to attract subscribers to the bonds, the issuer must go through a vigorous due diligence and convince the subscribers that they have long term sustainable revenues to service the bonds.

There are two types of municipal bonds:

- General Obligation (GO) Bonds: which are backed by the "full faith and credit" of the issuing government. The municipality typically pays investors back either by general funds or by increasing taxes.
- Revenue Bonds: These are issued to fund specific infrastructure projects, like a toll road, bridge, or water treatment plant. The principal and interest are paid back only with the revenue generated by that specific project (e.g., tolls collected)

In the United States, for instance, the municipal bond market has evolved into a multi-trillion-dollar asset class that serves as a principal source of financing for public infrastructure, including roads, public transportation systems, water supply networks and schools. In India, although the framework for municipal bonds has been in place since 2016, there have only been 31 issues raising 4,540 crores. Compare this with the need for funding by these corporations in India, and you will realize that there has been almost no dent in the capital requirements for municipal organizations.

Municipal bonds have once again entered the spot light mainstream market discourse following a Consultation Paper issued in May 2026, which proposes a number of significant reforms aimed at deepening the municipal bond market and broadening access to capital. Among other measures, SEBI has proposed a framework for pooled financing structures that would enable smaller municipalities to collectively access the debt capital markets, enhanced disclosure requirements for refinancing transactions, safeguards governing the utilisation of issue proceeds towards working capital requirements, and alignment of several provisions of the municipal debt framework with the regulatory regime applicable to corporate bonds. The Consultation Paper also seeks to facilitate greater retail participation.

Additionally, for the first time, India's largest corporation, the Brihanmumbai Municipal Corporation's ("BMC") decision to tap the bond market for up to ten thousand crores in one or more tranches for financing critical urban infrastructure projects. This proposed issuance has renewed investor interest in an asset class that has historically remained on the fringes of the Indian securities market.

Even smaller corporations are entering the fray. In February 2026, the Nashik Municipal Corporation issued a bond for multiple projects. The revenues of the corporation are appx 2070 crores which includes:

- Own tax revenues (property tax, etc.)
- Non-tax revenues (fees, user charges, rents, etc.)
- Assigned revenues, particularly the state's GST compensation
- Revenue grants

The payment obligations have been secured by way of:

- First Pari-passu charge by way of hypothecation over present and future receivables pertaining to entire own revenues/cash flows of the Corporation;
- First Pari-passu charge over the Escrow Account and the account(s) where the entire own revenues/cash flows are collected and/ or pooled by Municipal Corporation (collection account(s)), in each case to the extent of the own revenues/cash flows gets collected and/ or pooled in each of such accounts;
- First and exclusive charge over the Interest Payment Account-II (including the DSRA Amount), Upfront FD 2,Sinking Fund Account- II being opened for the issue, the funds lying in each such account and any investment(s) made from these account(s);
- Exclusive charge over the Permitted investments made in terms of Structured Payment Mechanism

All these are interesting developments, but in order for the market to truly grow is that there must be availability of secure cash flow from the municipality to service these bonds on a long-term basis. What is needed is investable institutions. Regrettably, for multiple reasons like poor fiscal discipline, un-predictable revenues, reliance on uncertain state government grants and populist policies, municipal corporations have not given that type of confidence to investors over the years.

A key factor underpinning investor confidence in municipal bonds is the emphasis on credit quality and repayment security. Municipal bond issuances are typically supported by independent credit ratings, structured payment mechanisms, escrow arrangements, debt service reserve accounts and other safeguards designed to ensure timely servicing of debt obligations. These features not only provide comfort to investors but also encourage municipalities to adopt greater financial discipline and governance standards, thereby strengthening the credibility of the municipal bond market as a whole.

Another encouraging factor is that even with the small amount of municipal bonds issued, repayment track record is unblemished. Despite being a relatively nascent asset class in India, municipal bond issuances have thus far demonstrated a commendable level of credit discipline, with no reported instances of default in servicing coupon or redemption obligations. This performance has helped strengthen investor confidence and underscores the effectiveness of the regulatory safeguards, disclosure standards and credit assessment mechanisms that govern municipal debt securities.

As India's urban infrastructure requirements continue to outpace traditional sources of funding, municipal bonds are poised to play an increasingly important role in bridging the financing gap. With a maturing regulatory framework, growing investor participation, financing of impactful infrastructure projects and a strong repayment track record, municipal bonds have the potential to evolve from a niche financing instrument into a cornerstone of India's urban development strategy.

What is particularly noteworthy is that as the market matures, SEBI has also demonstrated its willingness to adapt the regulatory framework to evolving market realities. The Consultation Paper proposes a number of significant reforms aimed at deepening the municipal bond market and broadening access to capital. Among other measures, SEBI has proposed a framework for pooled financing structures that would enable smaller municipalities to collectively access the debt capital markets, enhanced disclosure requirements for refinancing transactions, safeguards governing the utilisation of issue proceeds towards working capital requirements, and alignment of several provisions of the municipal debt framework with the regulatory regime applicable to corporate bonds. The Consultation Paper also seeks to facilitate greater retail participation through lower denomination issuances, permit investor incentives for specified categories of investors, and enable municipalities to issue ESG-linked debt securities. Collectively, these proposals reflect a clear regulatory intent to make municipal bond issuances more accessible, transparent and efficient while maintaining robust investor protection standards.

In countries with deep municipal bond markets, cities typically have:

- o stable and diversified revenue bases,
- o professional treasury functions,
- o long histories of audited accounts,
- o predictable fiscal rules,
- o significant local autonomy

Several developments are making municipal bonds more viable:

- o Implementation of the Smart Cities Mission improved project planning and financial management in some cities.
- o Larger municipalities are increasingly adopting accrual accounting and publishing audited financial statements.
- o Credit ratings for urban local bodies have become more common.
- o Institutional investors are showing greater interest in sustainable infrastructure, creating opportunities for green municipal bonds.
- o SEBI's recent consultation paper addresses practical barriers by proposing refinancing, pooled financing, ESG bonds, lower denominations, and limited working-capital funding.

After a long time on the books, the municipal bond market in India is about to live up to its promise. From global examples, we can directly establish a link between better civic amenities and a robust bond market. Indian cities need the capital and this time we must get it right.

Passive Investing in India: A New Era Under SEBI's MF Lite Framework

Dr.Shikha Bagai
Market Lead/Managing Director
Vistra ITCL (India) Ltd.

Passive investing in India is moving from the margins to the mainstream. Passive mutual funds now account for roughly 18–19% of India's mutual fund industry assets, a meaningful rise from negligible levels a decade ago, yet still well below the penetration seen in developed markets. In the United States, indexed mutual funds and ETFs account for more than half of long-term fund assets, with indexed assets estimated at approximately US$20.8 trillion. By comparison, India's passive assets remain much smaller, at around US$175 billion, underscoring the scale of the growth opportunity.

This gap reflects the stage of market development and the continued appeal of active management in India. Indian investors have historically been willing to pay higher fees in pursuit of alpha, while asset managers have invested heavily in research, stock selection and active portfolio construction. As a result, the Indian mutual fund industry has remained predominantly active-management driven.

For many fund houses, passive products have therefore been viewed as a lower-margin business. At the same time, passive schemes have often been subject to governance, compliance and operational requirements broadly comparable to those applicable to actively managed funds, despite the absence of discretionary investment decision-making. This created a practical challenge: passive products required scale economics, but were expected to operate within a regulatory architecture designed largely for active funds.

The Strategic Shift

SEBI's introduction of the Mutual Fund Lite framework marks a significant regulatory shift. The framework, introduced for passively managed mutual fund schemes and subsequently reflected in the broader SEBI (Mutual Funds) Regulations, 2026, recognize that passive products require a proportionate regulatory model aligned with their rule-based nature.

The framework also acknowledges a broader industry reality. As passive investing gains traction globally, Indian asset managers increasingly need to offer a full spectrum of investment solutions rather than relying solely on active strategies. Investor demand is expanding beyond alpha generation to include:

- Low-cost market exposure
- Core portfolio building blocks
- Asset allocation solutions
- ETF-based investment strategies
- Retirement and long-term wealth accumulation products

MF Lite recognises that while Indian asset managers may continue to compete aggressively through active strategies, the growth of passive investing requires a different economic model—one where regulatory obligations are proportionate to the nature of the product and do not become a barrier to scale.

Importantly, the framework seeks to balance regulatory flexibility with investor protection. By requiring independent oversight through SEBI-registered debenture trustees for specified passive schemes, it introduces a governance mechanism that is more proportionate, while still preserving independent checks on investor interests.

Why Passive Investing Matters

Passive investing seeks to replicate the performance of an underlying index rather than outperform it. Its appeal lies in a simple investment proposition:

- Lower investment costs
- Reduced dependence on fund manager discretion
- Greater portfolio transparency
- Predictable investment outcomes relative to the chosen benchmark
- Efficient access to broad market exposure

As markets become increasingly efficient, many investors are questioning whether paying higher fees for active management consistently delivers superior returns. Passive products offer an attractive alternative by providing diversified market exposure at relatively low cost.

Institutional investors, retirement funds, family offices and retail investors are increasingly incorporating passive strategies as core building blocks within their portfolios. In India, this shift is still at an early stage, but the direction of travel is clear.

SEBI's Evolving Regulatory Approach

SEBI has consistently supported the development of passive funds while strengthening governance standards. Earlier initiatives focused on encouraging product innovation and expanding investor choice. MF Lite takes this approach further by recognising passive investing as a distinct business model within the mutual fund ecosystem.

A key feature of MF Lite is that it is optional and not a replacement for the existing mutual fund regulatory regime. Asset Management Companies that wish to continue operating under the traditional governance architecture—with trustee structures, board oversight mechanisms and existing compliance requirements—may continue to do so.

Instead, MF Lite provides an alternative regulatory pathway for eligible passive investment products. It allows eligible entities to operate under a lighter-touch governance and compliance framework designed specifically for low-risk, rule-based strategies such as index funds, exchange-traded funds and other specified passive schemes. The objective is to facilitate faster product launches, lower operating costs and greater innovation, while retaining appropriate investor protection mechanisms.

As passive assets continue to grow, trustee oversight may increasingly resemble governance models already familiar in alternative investment funds and debt market structures, where independent fiduciary oversight plays a central role in protecting investors.

The Road Ahead

India remains significantly underpenetrated in passive investing compared with developed markets. As investor awareness increases, digital distribution expands and product choice deepens, passive assets are expected to continue growing at a rapid pace.

SEBI's reforms signal a balanced regulatory philosophy: encouraging innovation and market development while ensuring that investor protection keeps pace with industry expansion.

The use of independent debenture trustees for specified passive schemes reflects the regulator's recognition that scale requires robust governance. Rather than viewing passive funds as inherently low-risk simply because they track an index, the framework acknowledges that operational discipline, transparency and oversight remain essential to maintaining investor confidence.

MF Lite is therefore not merely a regulatory simplification exercise. It is a strategic initiative intended to accelerate the development of India's passive investment ecosystem by aligning regulatory requirements with the lower-risk, rules-based nature of index-tracking products. If implemented effectively, it could help expand investor choice, improve cost efficiency and support the next phase of growth in India's mutual fund industry.

From Passive Custodian to Active Fiduciary: The Long Journey of India's Debenture Trustee

How a profession born out of regulatory necessity evolved through controversy, consolidation, and reform — and where it stands today

Pratap Singh Nathani
Chairman & Managing Director
Beacon Trusteeship Ltd.

Where it began — the 1993 framework

India's debenture trustee profession was not born out of market demand. It was born out of regulatory necessity.

When SEBI notified the Securities and Exchange Board of India (Debenture Trustees) Regulations in 1993, the primary concern was straightforward: companies raising money from the public through debentures needed an independent party to stand between the issuer and the investor, hold the security, and ensure the terms of the trust deed were honoured. The model was borrowed from the UK's long-established trustee tradition and adapted to India's emerging capital markets.

The 1993 Regulations defined who could act as a debenture trustee — scheduled commercial banks, public financial institutions, insurance companies, and body corporates with a minimum net worth of ₹10 crore. The framework was simple. The obligation was clear. And the assumption — which would prove to be the profession's central weakness for the next two decades — was that holding the role was largely equivalent to performing it.

What followed was a market that grew significantly faster than the governance culture within it.

The population of trustees — growth, exits, and new entrants

At peak, India had over 40 entities registered as debenture trustees with SEBI. The early years of the framework were dominated by public sector banks and public financial institutions — entities that had existing relationships with large issuers and for whom debenture trusteeship was a natural extension of their term lending and treasury operations. ICICI, IFCI, IDBI, Canara Bank, Bank of India, Bank of Maharashtra, Andhra Bank, Central Bank — these were the original trustees. The role was largely administrative, the fees were modest, and the conflicts were significant. A bank that was also a lender to the same issuer whose bonds it was trusteeing was never structurally positioned to be an aggressive enforcer of bondholder rights.

As India's capital markets deepened through the 2000s and private sector issuance grew, the conflict inherent in bank trusteeship became more visible. Several large public sector banks continued to hold their registrations but progressively reduced their active trusteeship mandates. Some surrendered their registrations entirely as regulatory requirements became more demanding and the economics of the business shifted. Private financial institutions and banks restructured their trust departments or transferred them to separate subsidiaries to address the conflict of interest question.

Into this space came a new category of market participant — the dedicated private trusteeship company. These were standalone entities with no lending business, no conflict of interest with issuers, and a business model built entirely around professional trusteeship. The private trustee had a structural advantage that no bank subsidiary could replicate: its only obligation was to the bondholder. It had no other relationship with the issuer to protect.

As of March 26, 2026, SEBI's registered debenture trustee list carries 26 entities. But registration and active practice are two very different things. Of those 26, only a handful are genuinely active in the market — taking new mandates, building teams, investing in technology, and discharging the monitoring and enforcement obligations that the role demands. The real working universe of India's debenture trusteeship market has consolidated to approximately ten active practitioners: IDBI Trusteeship Services, Catalyst Trusteeship, Axis Trustee Services, Beacon Trusteeship, Vistra ITCL India, SBICAP Trustee Company, Centbank Financial Services, Punjab National Bank, Mitcon Credentia Trusteeship Services, and Vardhaman Trusteeship. Between them, these ten entities carry the weight of a corporate bond market worth ₹53.6 trillion, seventeen InvITs, four REITs, and a private credit AIF universe that has crossed ₹15 lakh crore in commitments.

Within this group, one milestone stands apart. In June 2024, Beacon Trusteeship listed on the National Stock Exchange — becoming the first and, to date, only debenture trustee in India to seek a public market listing. The significance of that decision goes beyond corporate finance. A listed entity operates under continuous public disclosure obligations, quarterly financial reporting, and the scrutiny of public shareholders. For a profession whose entire value proposition rests on transparency, accountability, and independence, a public listing is not merely a capital markets event — it is a structural commitment to the same standards the trustee demands of the issuers it monitors. It was a statement about where the profession needed to go.

The story of how the market went from 40-plus registered entities to ten active practitioners is one of progressive consolidation driven by three forces. The first was regulatory escalation — each successive SEBI circular from 2020 onward raised the minimum standard of what performing the role actually required, and entities that had treated registration as a passive income source found the new standard operationally and financially unsustainable. The second was conflict resolution — banks that were simultaneously lending to the same issuers whose bonds they were trusteeing found it increasingly difficult to maintain the independence that SEBI's framework demanded. Many restructured, ring-fenced, or exited. The third was the natural economics of a profession that requires investment in people, technology, and legal infrastructure to be performed properly — investment that only entities with genuine commitment to the business were willing to make. What remains is smaller, more specialised, and more accountable than what preceded it. That consolidation, uncomfortable as it has been for some, is not a weakness of the Indian trusteeship market. It is the beginning of its maturity.

The regulatory evolution — from passive monitor to active fiduciary

The 1993 framework was necessary but thin. It established the role without meaningfully defining what performing it required.

That thinness was exposed in waves. Every credit event in India's bond market from the late 2000s onward revealed the same structural weakness: trustees that were present in the documentation but absent from the oversight. Security that was registered but not independently verified. Covenants that were breached for months before the trustee became aware. Asset cover that had deteriorated below the prescribed minimum without triggering any formal disclosure.

SEBI's regulatory response was cumulative and increasingly prescriptive.

The 2020 monitoring and disclosure framework — effective from Q3 FY21 — was the first significant post-crisis intervention. It required trustees to carry out periodic monitoring of security created, mandated asset cover certificates on a quarterly basis, and required disclosure of credit rating revisions and payment defaults within T+1 day. For the first time, the trustee's monitoring obligation had a specific, measurable, time-bound dimension.

The January 2025 due diligence circular went further. Trustees were now required to provide certificates at the stage of the draft offer document — confirming compliance with disclosures, covenants, and documentation before the issuance opened. This shifted the trustee's engagement from post-issuance monitoring to pre-issuance verification. The trustee was no longer a party that was called in after the deal was done. It became a gatekeeper at the point of issuance.

The August 2025 Master Circular — Master Circular No. SEBI/HO/DDHS-PoD-1/P/CIR/2025/117 dated August 13, 2025 — represents the most comprehensive statement of what debenture trusteeship in India is supposed to look like. It supersedes every circular issued since 1993, consolidating more than three decades of regulatory guidance into a single chapter-wise framework. Chapter II establishes the due diligence standard at issuance — verify security, examine title documents, certify asset cover adequacy. Chapter III mandates continuous monitoring throughout the life of the instrument — security cover, financial covenants, compliance reporting. The Recovery Expense Fund, pre-funded by issuers, gives trustees the economic resources to take legal action without waiting for bondholder approval or bearing costs they cannot recover.

The October 2025 amendment to the DT Regulations and the consultation paper proposing replacement of the consent letter with a formal Debenture Trustee Agreement further embed the trustee's accountability into the transaction documentation at its foundation. From a legal and operational standpoint, the trustee appointed today under the current framework is a fundamentally different party from the trustee appointed under the 1993 original — with greater powers, clearer obligations, more specific timelines, and meaningfully higher accountability.

The new asset classes — InvITs, REITs, and the infrastructure dimension

The debenture trustee's role did not stay confined to corporate bonds. It expanded — through SEBI's InvIT and REIT frameworks — into the infrastructure and real estate sectors, creating a significantly broader and more complex mandate.

Every Infrastructure Investment Trust established as a trust structure requires a SEBI-registered debenture trustee. That trustee holds the InvIT's assets on behalf of unitholders, oversees compliance with the InvIT Regulations, monitors the investment manager's adherence to the investment mandate, and ensures distribution obligations are met. India now has 17 listed InvITs with assets spanning national highways, power transmission lines, gas distribution networks, and logistics parks, with combined AUM approaching ₹9 lakh crore and projected to triple to ₹21 lakh crore by 2030. Four listed REITs manage ₹2.25 lakh crore in commercial real estate assets with a combined market capitalisation exceeding ₹1 lakh crore.

The trustee's role in these structures is materially different from its role in a corporate NCD. In a bond issuance, the trustee monitors one issuer's financial health and one set of covenants. In an InvIT, the trustee oversees a trust that holds a portfolio of infrastructure assets, operated by a project manager, managed by an investment manager, with distributable cash flows that must be computed, declared, and distributed to unitholders who increasingly include retail investors.

SEBI's September 2025 reclassification of REITs as equity instruments for mutual fund investment and its push toward lot sizes of ₹100-200 units signals a clear intention: these are not institutional-only vehicles. They are being designed for retail participation at scale. That retail ambition places the trustee in a different position than it occupies in institutional bond markets. The retail investor in an InvIT or REIT has no capacity for independent monitoring, no legal team to enforce their rights, and no practical mechanism to coordinate with other unitholders. The trustee is their representative in a way that goes beyond the contractual — it is their only organised voice.

For the ten active trustees in India's market, InvITs and REITs represent both the most significant growth opportunity and the most demanding expansion of the role. Managing a debenture trustee mandate on a five-year NCD requires documented processes, quarterly monitoring, and periodic disclosure. Managing a trustee mandate on a highway InvIT — with toll revenues, project company distributions, sponsor obligations, unitholder distributions, and an investment manager whose decisions must be monitored for compliance with the trust deed and SEBI regulations — requires a different order of operational capability.

The profession is being stretched in exactly the right direction. The question is whether the infrastructure being built inside each active trustee's organisation is keeping pace with the growth in the assets and structures they are being asked to oversee.

What the international experience teaches

The debenture trustee function exists in every mature debt capital market in the world, and the international experience carries lessons that India's evolving framework has begun to incorporate.

In the United States, the Trust Indenture Act of 1939 — enacted in the aftermath of widespread bondholder losses during the Great Depression — established the foundational principle that public bond issues require an independent, legally empowered trustee. The US model has developed a sophisticated body of case law around the trustee's pre-default and post-default obligations. The distinction matters: before a default, the trustee's standard of care is administrative — process payments, file reports, monitor for technical breaches. After a default, the standard shifts dramatically — the trustee must act as a prudent person acting in their own affairs, exercising independent judgment on acceleration, enforcement, and collateral liquidation. The Harvard Law School Bankruptcy Roundtable's observation that pre-default indenture governance in the US is "not yet well-informed by case law or scholarship" reflects a genuine ambiguity that India is now navigating through regulatory prescription rather than litigation. SEBI's approach of defining the continuous monitoring obligation explicitly in the Master Circular is, in some respects, more precise than the US framework, which leaves pre-default standards largely implicit.

In the United Kingdom, the independent professional trustee model has been most fully developed. Law Debenture, established in 1889, pioneered the concept of trusteeship as a standalone profession — deliberately separate from lending, deliberately without conflicts, and explicitly structured to serve the bondholder's interest without compromise. The UK's corporate bond market relies heavily on independent professional trustees precisely because the conflict that arises when a bank trustee is also a lender to the issuer has been recognised and largely designed out of the system. This is the model that India's ten active private and ring-fenced trustees are progressively moving toward.

Australia presents a direct regulatory precedent. The Australian Securities and Investments Commission tightened its trust company licensing framework significantly after a series of debenture failures where trustees had not independently verified asset valuations and had relied on issuer representations that turned out to be inaccurate. The Australian response — requiring trustees to maintain genuine independence from issuers, conduct independent asset valuations, and report directly to ASIC in specified circumstances — is a direct precedent for several of SEBI's post-2020 reforms. India has essentially compressed Australia's post-failure learning curve into five years of focused regulatory action.

Singapore's MAS has developed a trustee framework for SGX-listed bonds and REITs that emphasises continuous engagement — trustees are expected to attend key meetings, review financial performance, and proactively escalate concerns rather than simply process paperwork. The Singapore REIT trustee's role in particular — holding assets on behalf of unitholders, approving related party transactions, and maintaining ongoing oversight of the REIT manager — is the closest global parallel to what SEBI is now asking of InvIT and REIT trustees in India. As India's InvIT and REIT markets continue to grow and retail participation deepens, the Singapore model of continuous active trustee engagement is the standard the Indian market needs to reach.

The common thread across all four jurisdictions is a movement over time from passive to active. The trustee that meets today's regulatory standard in the US, UK, Australia, or Singapore is not the trustee that was envisaged when these frameworks were first established. In each case, credit events and investor losses produced regulatory responses that raised the standard. India is compressing that evolution — learning from four jurisdictions' decades of experience and incorporating it into a framework that is now, in several respects, among the most prescriptive in the world.

Summing up — where the profession stands

In June 2026, there are 26 entities on SEBI's register and ten active practitioners carrying the real weight of India's debenture trusteeship market. The regulatory framework they operate under is the most comprehensive in this profession's thirty-three-year history. The asset classes they serve — bonds, loans, InvITs, REITs, AIFs, securitisation structures — span the full breadth of India's capital markets. The investor base depending on their performance includes not just sophisticated institutional investors but a growing population of retail participants for whom the trustee is the only organised protection they have.

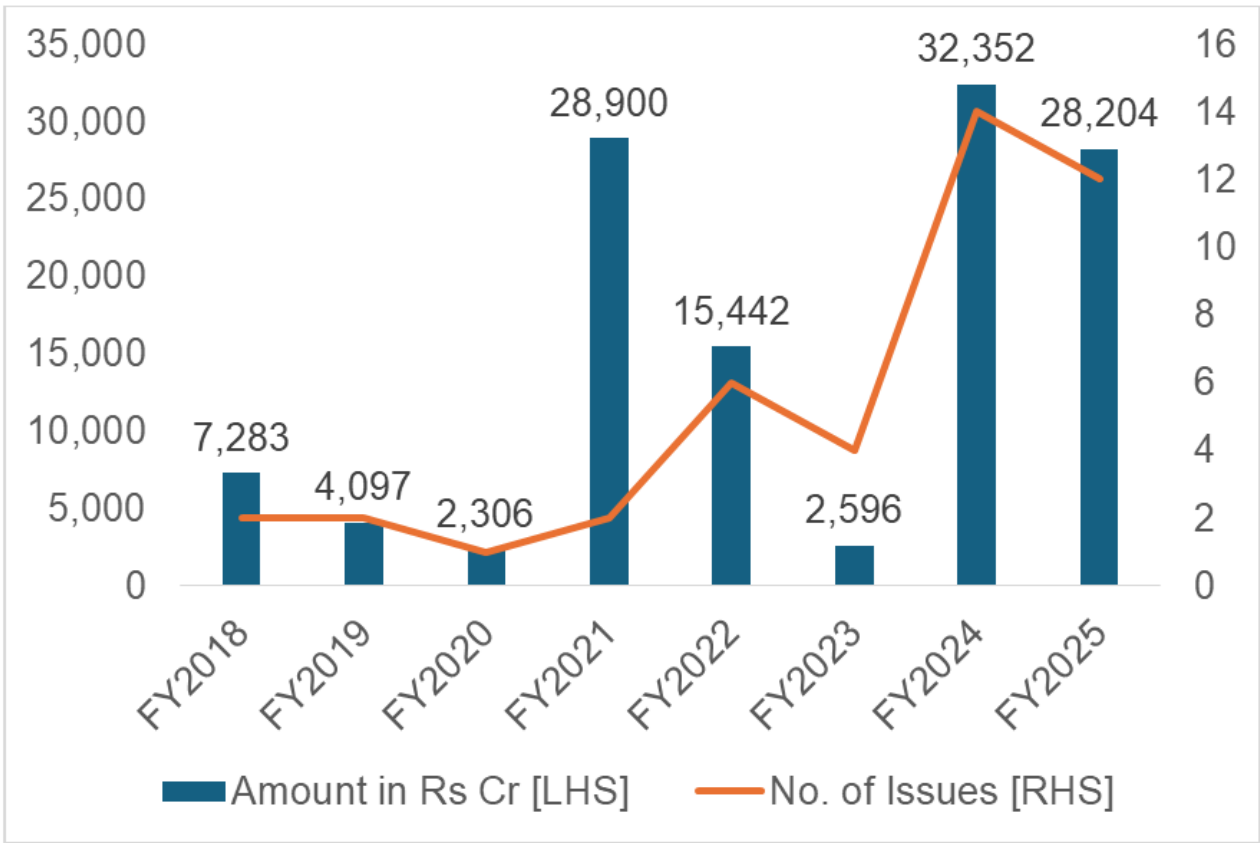
The profession has earned a degree of recognition it was not accorded in its first two decades. SEBI's sustained regulatory investment — from the 2020 monitoring framework through the January 2025 due diligence certification to the August 2025 Master Circular — reflects an institutional acknowledgement that the trustee's role is central to the integrity of India's bond market. That acknowledgement is welcome and deserved.

But recognition is not the same as completion. The ten active trustees in India's market today face a set of demands that grow more complex with every new instrument category, every new retail investor who buys an InvIT unit, every new AIF that appoints a trustee because regulation requires it. Meeting those demands requires investment — in people who understand the role's full legal and operational scope, in technology that enables continuous monitoring at scale, and in the institutional culture that makes a trustee willing to have uncomfortable conversations with issuers and escalate to SEBI when required.

Beacon's NSE listing in June 2024 was one statement of that commitment — subjecting the profession's practitioners to the same public accountability standards they impose on others. The August 2025 Master Circular was SEBI's statement. The global experience of the US, UK, Australia, and Singapore provides the roadmap.

The destination is a trusteeship profession that is active, independent, well-resourced, and genuinely serving the investors who depend on it. India has the framework. The ten active practitioners have the mandate. The work of fully earning the role is the next chapter.

Infrastructure Investment Trusts (InvITs) in India



S.Ramamoorthy Iyer
Senior Vice President - Debt Capital Markets
SBI Capital Markets Ltd.

1. The Product:

An Infrastructure Investment Trust is a SEBI-regulated pooled vehicle, structured as a trust under the Indian Trusts Act, 1882 and governed by the SEBI (Infrastructure Investment Trusts) Regulations, 2014. It holds completed, revenue-generating infrastructure — toll roads, power-transmission lines, gas pipelines, telecom fibre and warehousing — through a holding company / SPV layer, and passes the cash these assets generate to unitholders.[1] The framework separates the sponsor (which contributes assets), the investment manager (which runs the trust) and the trustee (which safeguards unitholder interest). InvITs are required to distribute at least 90% of net distributable cash flows, (at least once every six months in case of public and at least once a year in case of privately listed InvITs), and operate under leverage caps of 49% (which can go upto 70% if certain financial criteria are met) and mandatory independent valuation — a structure that converts illiquid, long-dated infrastructure into a transparent, yield-bearing security.

InvITs may be publicly listed or privately placed. As of date, the market comprises of 28 SEBI-registered InvITs holding roughly ₹7 lakh crore of assets under management across about 300 assets spread over two dozen states.

A series of reforms has widened the investor funnel. The 2024 tax changes cut the long-term holding period for units to 12 months from 36 months and the LTCG rate to 12.5%, while the minimum lot size for privately placed InvITs was reduced to ₹25 lakh.[2] In September 2025 SEBI reclassified REITs as equity for mutual-fund purposes while retaining InvITs in the hybrid bucket — a recognition that InvITs, being predominantly privately placed with stable contracted cash flows and lower liquidity, behave more like a debt-hybrid than equity.[3]

2. Why InvITs Suit Pension Funds and the EPFO

The economics of an InvIT fit the liability profile of long-dated capital, i.e., pension funds and the EPFO who carry very long-dated, inflation-sensitive obligations and prefer predictable income over capital-gain or volatility in the portfolio. InvITs offer long-life assets under multi-decade concessions or regulated tariffs, contracted or availability-based revenues, mandated high cash distribution, and regulatory guardrails on leverage and governance.

Regulation Support: In its 2025 amendments SEBI broadened the definition of "strategic investor" —to allow any entity classified as a Qualified Institutional Buyer (QIB) to apply as a strategic investor., letting them anchor 5–25% of an issue ahead of a public offer[4] (previously pension funds and provident funds were not included in the list of eligible strategic investors).

3. Recent Regulatory Changes:

i) Recent Changes in PFRDA:

PFRDA has recently merged Scheme A with Schemes C and E. As part of this restructuring, InvIT units regulated by SEBI have been integrated into Scheme C, which primarily focuses on bonds and debt instruments. Similarly, REIT units regulated by SEBI have been aligned with Scheme E, which is predominantly geared towards equity and equity-related investments.

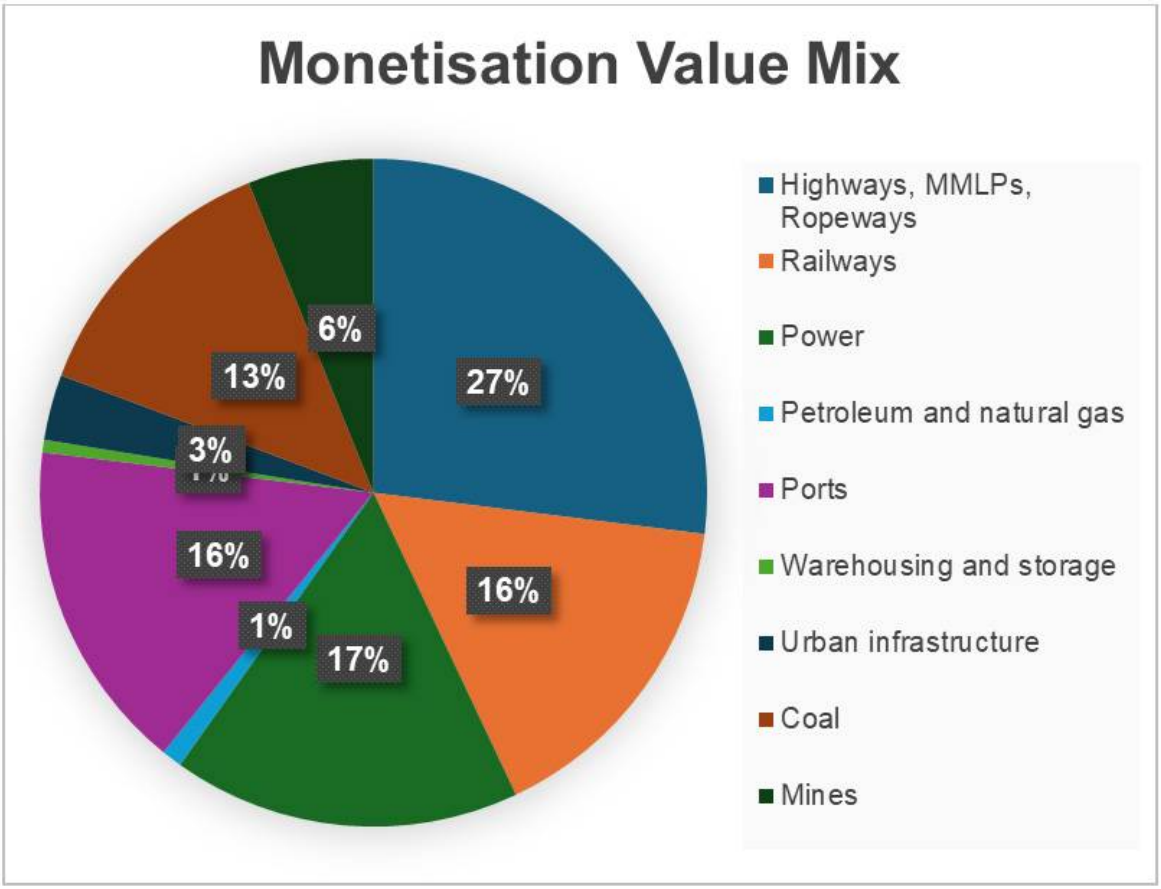
This realignment aims to provide greater flexibility and expand investment limits in these hybrid asset classes, thereby encouraging broader participation and diversification.

Revised Limits: Provided that the aggregate investment under sub category (l), (m), (n) i.e. Units of InvITs, debt-oriented AIFs and Basel III Tier I Bonds shall not exceed 5% of the AUM of Scheme / Asset Class C.

ii) Recent Changes in SEBI:

Under the revised norms, InvITs can now use additional borrowings above the 49% leverage threshold for capital expenditure aimed at improving asset performance or expanding capacity. SEBI has also allowed these borrowings to be used for major maintenance expenses related to road projects. The regulator clarified that major maintenance refers to non-routine expenditure carried out under obligations specified in concession agreements.

The regulator has additionally permitted refinancing of existing debt by InvITs, its special purpose vehicles (SPVs) or holding companies, subject to certain conditions. SEBI said the original borrowing being refinanced must have been used only for purposes already allowed under InvIT regulations. The refinancing will be limited strictly to the principal amount of the loan.



iii) Recent Regulatory Changes by RBI:

- Banks can lend only to listed REITs and InvITs.
- For REITs: At least 80% of assets must have generated positive operating cash flows for ≥1 year.
- For InvITs: At least 80% of asset value must be in completed, revenue-generating infrastructure projects with ≥1 year of positive cash flows.
- Total bank exposure (including exposure to SPVs and holding companies) is capped at 49% of the trust's asset value.
- Trusts must maintain leverage within SEBI-prescribed limits or stricter limits set by banks' boards.
- Rules come into effect from October 1, 2026, with early adoption allowed.

4. The Way Forward: Monetisation Pipelines and NMP 2.0

InvITs are the principal market instrument through which the government recycles operational public assets. Under the first National Monetisation Pipeline (NMP 1.0, FY22–FY25), NITI Aayog targeted ₹6 lakh crore of brownfield monetisation and achieved close to 90% — about ₹5.3–5.4 lakh crore — with roads, coal and power leading.[5] Building on that, the Union Budget 2025–26 mandated an Asset Monetisation Plan 2025–30, operationalised as NMP 2.0 and launched in February 2026. It sets a headline monetisation target of about ₹10 lakh crore and later upgraded it to an aggregate Total Monetisation Value (TMV) of ₹16.72 lakh crore over FY26–FY30, of which roughly ₹5.8 lakh crore is expected private-sector capital expenditure.[6]

Sectorally, highways (including multimodal logistics parks and ropeways) lead at ₹4.42 lakh crore, followed by power (₹2.76 lakh crore), ports (₹2.63 lakh crore), railways (₹2.62 lakh crore), coal (₹2.16 lakh crore) and mines (₹1 lakh crore), with the balance across petroleum, aviation, urban infrastructure, warehousing, telecom and tourism. NITI Aayog estimates Central Government proceeds of about ₹4.6 lakh crore over the period (. NITI Aayog assumes around 70% of this (roughly ₹3.2 lakh crore) will be reinvested straight back into publicly funded infrastructure projects) and a GDP contribution of roughly ₹40 lakh crore over five-to-ten years.[7]

NMP 2.0 — annual phasing of Total Monetisation Value (FY26–FY30)

Year	Total Monetisation Value (₹ crore)	Note
FY26	2,49,493	Launch year of NMP 2.0
FY27	3,26,435	First full target year
FY28	3,46,312
FY29	3,68,852
FY30	3,81,208	Terminal year
Total	16,72,300	of which ₹5.8 lakh cr private capex

A monetisation programme of this scale cannot be funded by foreign and strategic investors alone; it needs deep, stable domestic pools. InvITs are the bridge that turns the government's pipeline into a security that long-term capital can hold and take advantage of. As EPFO, NPS and insurance allocations to InvITs are progressively enabled and scaled, the demand side for NMP 2.0 strengthens precisely as the supply of monetisable assets accelerates, making the InvIT the connective tissue between India's infrastructure build-out and its long-term savings.

In our view, InvITs also provides the benefit of pass through of inflation in their revenue. Some sectors like ports, data centres and warehouse InvITs will further unlock value in the infrastructure space.

Managing Partner
Accord Group (India) Pvt.Ltd.

I recently contributed to a global report for International Women's Day 2025, examining the status of Women on Boards. The report highlighted the key role that independent directors play in corporate governance. They provide oversight, strategic perspectives and insights to the executive on behalf of the shareholders by evaluating performance, managing risk, and upholding accountability.

Building a fulfilling board career can be rewarding, but starting out can be tricky. The statistics indicate that significant progress is still required to achieve gender parity, but I found the practical advice shared in the report to be particularly valuable for everyone wanting to take this path. The report also includes strategies for Chairs to prepare their boards for embracing inclusivity, as well as tips for women aspiring to join boards.

This is my advice, based on my personal experience:

1. Scope the scape

Learn about board structures, legislation, risks and commitments. These vary considerably between countries and jurisdictions but get to know what is relevant for you. If you are employed, check for any restrictions by your employer and any potential conflicts.

Consider your targets. There is a wide universe of entities – listed and unlisted companies, multinational, government or promoter management, start-ups to mid-sized to PE portfolios, large listed, conglomerate subsidiaries, hold cos, not-for-profits, and then some. Depending on the structure, strategic situation and complexity, the ask, commitment and risks can vary.

Think through your portfolio strategy. For example, a great way to start may be to serve on an NGO or not-for-profit board in an advisory role or even as an operating partner in a PE environment. Understand commitments, from the cadence of the meetings, expectations at meetings, committees and the preparation needed, and occasionally follow-up items. Get yourself board-ready and brush up on your financial literacy, if required, via certification and courses. Prepare a one-page board CV and update your LinkedIn profile to reflect those micro-credentials and enhance your "marketability".

2. Define your hashtags

This is about what you bring to the table. View your experiences and skillsets through a wider lens. Apart from professional achievements and core functional experience, your hashtags could include various industries you have been exposed to, geographies you have worked in, and exposure across different ownership structures and cultures. Deep dive further - have you driven a turnaround? Been involved in a merger or an integration? What about digital adoption? Sustainability? Do you have access to networks within a particular function or industry? Bring these into play in your board CV.

Equally important, how are you perceived? What are you an expert at? Ask mentors and professionals who know you for honest advice. Do a media check on yourself to check what pops up online, and look at your privacy settings, particularly your socials. Is there anything there you wouldn't want a board to see? Set up a professional email ID and in due course, an appropriate billing entity.

3. Get an invitation to the party

Most board appointments are still through networks, mainly through existing board members. So, expand your network and put yourself out there. Tell people you know, particularly those in boards, that you are keen to serve, share your targets, ask about openings and proactively ask for introductions and referrals.

Get on the radar of people you don't know. Check in with executive search firms who run board searches and keep them updated as you pick up assignments. Ask for advice from senior or experienced board members.

Being visible is key – keep your LinkedIn profile updated and active. Writing, liking and commenting are free – and get you noticed, and help recruiters form an opinion when they are researching you. Consider attending industry events and joining industry associations, accept speaking engagements, and perfect your elevator pitch (know your hashtags!).

4. Due diligence

As a first-timer, appreciate that you may need to start with baby steps, so carefully consider all opportunities that give you relevant board experience as you build your portfolio. First, check for conflicts of interest on your own part.

Apart from the basic questions around expectations, commitments and potential pay, research for "fit" – governance standards obviously, but also board culture, existing and past board members who you can reach out to. Have a look at the existing board, their experience and skills mix and tenures on the board. What other boards are they on? If it is a family-controlled company, check for the friends and family composition of the overall board.

Prep for the interviews – research the company, industry, relevant regulation, trends, press and social media coverage, LinkedIn, analyst reports et al. What are the key imperatives or challenges facing the company? Where can you contribute?

This is a two-way street – you are assessing them and your ability to fit in and vice versa.

5. When on board

Ask for an orientation – consider informal coffee chats with existing board members, or members of the executive team if possible. Can a factory visit be arranged? Is there history / dynamics that you should be aware of?

Stay updated – on regulations, industry trends, competitor imperatives, and potential dilemmas. Read the board papers, prepare your questions in advance. Ask clarificatory questions in advance, if appropriate.

Finally

There is speculation that DEI imperatives make it easy for "unqualified" women to make it to boards. I disagree.

As the global chair of a C-suite executive search partnership, I have the opportunity to exchange notes with colleagues from all over the world, and our collective experience is this – all credible companies will carefully curate a mix of board members, and invite candidates primarily based on reputation, experience, and insights. No matter what your route to the board - I assure you that a seat at the table very much needs to be earned.

Use your voice wisely and well.

MCX – Integration with the Bullion & Jewellery Industry

C.S.Verma
Managing Director & Chief Executive Officer
FirstAdvantage Consulting Group Ltd.

Introduction

Gold and silver have long served as universal anchors of financial stability and critical shields against global inflation. In today's complex macroeconomic landscape, this traditional mechanism of wealth preservation has been successfully digitized in a regulated landscape by the Multi Commodity Exchange of India (MCX). As India's physical gold demand scales massive volumes, MCX's liquid futures and options contracts act as the crucial financial link bridging physical trade with international benchmarks. Moving beyond simple price tracking, MCX derivatives are uniquely engineered to absorb multi-layered volatility—simultaneously blending global spot movements, USD-INR currency fluctuations, and domestic tariff changes. For corporate treasuries, bullion merchants, and retail jewellers alike, this robust derivatives market provides an institutional-grade architecture for transparent national price discovery.

While India's physical gold consumption climbed to an impactful 721 tonnes in 2025, MCX's liquid futures and options contracts bridge the gap between this massive physical trade and international financial benchmarks. By providing a highly regulated electronic platform for standardized hedging, MCX enables jewellers, bullion merchants, and institutional investors to mitigate severe price volatility driven by macroeconomic and currency fluctuations.

The Indian precious metals market is undergoing a structural realignment precipitated by urgent sovereign fiscal tightening, stringent administrative import controls, and an escalating global "war-like" geopolitical landscape. Further, there has been an increase in customs duty on bullion from 6% to a restrictive 15%.

Global Dominance

India's bullion market holds a clear structural advantage over major global economies like China, the USA, Russia, and Japan. In FY2025, India officially surpassed China to become the world's leading gold jewellery consumer, capturing nearly 30% of global demand compared to China's 25%.

When surging prices caused global consumer demand to contract by 5% in H1 FY2026, a sharp divergence emerged. China's gold jewellery consumption collapsed by 26% year-on-year. Meanwhile, mature markets like the USA accounted for just 7% of global share, with Russia and Japan remaining marginal physical consumers. In contrast, India demonstrated unique resilience as domestic demand for bars and coins grew.

By anchoring the world's most robust physical demand center, MCX derivatives directly reflect massive, real-world retail and commercial liquidity. This gives the Indian commodity market a far more stable, practical risk-management edge over purely speculative global venues.

MCX has achieved a massive competitive advantage by capturing dominant retail and institutional liquidity. Backed by an extraordinary 496% year-on-year growth in average daily turnover (ADT) across its bullion derivatives complex, MCX has successfully revamped its gold and silver options contracts by introducing monthly expiries and smaller-sized contracts.

The Impact of Price Volatility on Bullion and Jewellery Sectors

The Indian bullion and jewellery sectors operate on tight spreads, making unhedged price volatility a critical risk to business viability.

a) Bullion Distribution Margins

Bullion intermediaries operate on razor-thin margins of approximately ₹2,000 per kilogram. Exposed to an annualized gold price volatility of roughly 16% (FY2026), an unhedged trading model becomes fundamentally unsustainable, as even minor market swings can entirely wipe out operating margins.

b) Jewellery Manufacturing and Retail Spreads

While jewellers command higher fabrication margins of 8% to 10%, they remain highly vulnerable. Heightened price volatility severely disrupts profit forecasting, cash flows, and overall operational efficiency across the value chain.

c) Unsold Inventory Risk and Hedging Solutions

Unsold retail inventory carries substantial price risk. Because jewellery prices in India are duty-paid, they are exposed to multiple macroeconomic variables. Businesses can effectively mitigate this exposure through exchange-traded futures and options contracts. These derivative instruments at MCX provide an ideal hedge, as their pricing naturally integrates international gold spot prices, USD-INR currency fluctuations, and domestic import duty regimes.

d) Price Exposure in the Domestic Gold Supply Chain

India's annual import volume of 700 tons and a 16% price volatility, the physical market remains heavily exposed. At a benchmark rate of Rs. 1,50,000/10g, participants face a direct price risk of Rs. 1.7 lakh crores on their holdings.

High Hedging (H.E.) Efficiency of domestic market in Gold

H.E. estimates the extent to which a certain position in the physical market can be hedged in the futures market.

Impact cost (IC) is the percentage mark-up while buying / markdown observed while selling, a desired quantity of a contract with reference to its ideal price. For example, I.C. of 0.01% for a portfolio of ₹2 cr indicates very a low cost of trading even for a high trade value.

1. Hedging on Indian regulated derivative markets is more efficient than the OTC, for the domestic hedgers for mitigating gold price volatility due to strong price correlation.
2. Jewelers acknowledge the efficiency of hedging in their annual report.
3. Indian derivatives contracts bring strong spot-futures integration.

Role of MCX

MCX Gold and Silver Prices are considered the benchmark for value-chain and end-consumers alike. It is understood that most pricing is done MCX (+/-). MCX Bullion contracts are designed considering the need of all market participants namely Bullion traders, Corporates, Retail jewellers, importers, investors and end consumers.

Further, MCX Gold and Silver prices are a complete hedge as they are in built hedge for all four elements: USD/INR exchange rate, Custom Duty tariff, international gold and silver prices along with the domestic premium/discounts. In volatile situations there is a need to hedge via MCX futures and options contracts to safeguard the profit margins. Further, any change in duty is reflected immediately in MCX gold and silver prices leading to efficient hedging of price risk by hedgers.

MCX has various products in Gold and Silver to cater to the needs and requirements of all segments of society. MCX offers Gold 1kg, Gold Mini 100grams, Gold Ten 10grams, Gold Guinea 8gram and Gold Petal 1gram futures contract and in Silver, it has Silver 30kg, Silver Mini 5kg, Silver Micro 1kg and Silver 100 gram futures contract backed by physical delivery.

The strong convergence of the MCX futures and physical commodity markets in India, reflects the attractiveness of the exchange-traded commodity futures market in India as an efficient platform for price risk management. MCX Bullion contracts have order book depth and established liquidity.

MCX has seen deliveries of 174 MT of Gold & and over 6151 MT of Silver since inception. (till June 2026)

Recent new offerings for retail

Smaller denomination contracts are designed to cater to the organized retail investor demand. Investment in smaller denomination contracts are backed with delivery, providing a systematic investment plan (SIP) type of flexibility. Coins and bars can be held and accumulated in the COMRIS electronic format and physical delivery is also available. Every bar and coin comes with an individual assaying certificate; quality assurance thus is always given. Convenience of transaction and liquidity of exchange platform are key advantages leading to better Cash flow management, margin protection and Inventory hedging amid volatile prices.

MCX designed one gram Gold Petal future contract (first ever deliverable one gram gold contract in the world) to cater to organized retail investor demand, by providing a systematic investment plan (SIP) type of flexibility with an electronic accumulation. This contract has seen successful delivery of 765 kg (764467 coins) since its launch in October 2019 till May 2026 contract.

Similarly, Silver Micro (1kg) and Silver Mini (5 Kg) contracts with one kilogram silver bar as delivery lot has seen successful delivery of 634 MT catering to retail demand and helping establish Gold & Silver as an Asset class.

Recently MCX added Silver 100 gram futures contract to the basket of existing Silver portfolio on June 1, 2026. These products have strengthened the bullion portfolio further and successful deliveries are a sign of market acceptance.

Options – Helping Jewellers Protect Margins

MCX designed Gold 1kg, Gold Mini 100 gram, Silver 30 kg and Silver Mini 5kg Options contract. Gold Mini and Silver Mini Options contract caters to small and medium jewelers who can easily mitigate their price risk by hedging in smaller denomination. Further, these small denomination options contract has less premium making it affordable and feasible to the small retailers and investors.

The advantages of options are multifold, and as listed below:

- Options offer the buyer an insurance against adverse movement, but allow for participation on favorable side
- Maximum Loss to the extent of Premium paid for Buyer
- Exchange Traded options are free from counter-party risk
- Futures & Options combination (both risk management tools) gives leverage of futures with safety of Options. Hence, profit is possible from change in future prices, but losses are limited via Options
- Participants can devise numerous effective hedging strategies
- Better Cash-flow management because of one-time payment of Premium

- Low Transaction Cost, low capital intensive
- Flexible pricing via Put options: Jewelers may offer the lower of current price / or of a future date, for example - Akshay Tritiya as Festive Scheme.

Further, MCX modified Gold 1kg, Silver 30kg and Silver Mini 5kg Options contracts include monthly expiries to suit the hedging requirements of value-chain participants. The performance of these options contracts have been phenomenal.

Atmanirbhar Bharat Mission – Empanelment of Domestic Gold Refiners

To make the Exchange's bullion derivative contracts more relevant to the physical market players and in line with the broader national objective of 'Atmanirbhar Bharat', MCX empaneled domestic refiners as per "MCX Good Delivery Norms for BIS-Standard Gold/Silver" effective from March 6, 2021 and saw a successful delivery of 20,508 kg valued at 19,473 crore till June 5, 2026 contract.

This initiative of empaneling domestic refiners by MCX may serve the nation by reducing disparities, encouraging quality gold recycling and reducing import dependence.

Bullion Performance of MCX over five years is tabled below:

Gold and Silver Futures Average Daily Turnover (ADT) Rs. In crores
Commodity	FY 21-22	FY 22-23	FY 23-24	FY24-25	FY25-26
Gold (all)	4,710	4,578	4,751	8,415	28,338
Silver (all)	5,504	6,351	7,445	9,037	21,648
Total Futures	10,214	10,929	12,196	17,452	49,986
Gold and Silver Options Average Daily Turnover (ADT) Rs. In crores
Commodity	FY 21-22	FY 22-23	FY 23-24	FY24-25	FY25-26
Gold (all)	854	1,704	6,107	28,100	1,92,810
Silver (all)	148	267	2,994	7,748	74,883
Total Options	1,002	1,971	9,101	35,848	2,67,693
Total Bullion F&O Average Daily Turnover (ADT) Rs. In crores
Commodity	FY 21-22	FY 22-23	FY 23-24	FY24-25	FY25-26
Gold (F&O)	5,564	6,282	10,858	36,515	2,21,148
Silver (F&O)	5,652	6,618	10,439	16,785	96,531
Bullion (F&O)	11,216	12,900	21,297	53,300	3,17,679

It is seen from above table that the Bullion F&O has exponentially grown from 11,216 crs to 3,17,679 crs over five years.

Story thus far

Indian derivative bullion market at MCX has helped to create spot future integration. MCX Bullion prices serve the industry as a domestic benchmark. This has helped the organized Jewellery sector with an efficient risk management mechanism.

In another dimension these deliverable contracts in smaller denomination are helping retail within organized quality assured, regulated asset class. The growth and consolidation of the Jewellery industry as evidenced in the success of organized Jewellery brands is a testimony to the successful integration of this evolving spot market with a vibrant derivative landscape.

Drawable references from International Exchange ecosystem

a) Role of gold Spot Exchanges - Shanghai Futures Exchange (SHFE) and Borsa Istanbul (BIST) Exchange
In China and Turkey, the gold import process is centralized and managed directly through Shanghai Futures Exchange (SHFE), and Borsa Istanbul (BIST) Exchanges. Certified members of Borsa Istanbul import physical gold directly into the exchange's precious metals market, immediately linking imports to spot trading and vaulting. Similarly, Shanghai uses its exchange infrastructure to channel imported gold straight into accredited warehouses, creating a unified domestic price.

On the other hand, physical gold imports into India are handled exclusively by nominated commercial banks and government-approved public agencies. This means that while Shanghai and Istanbul operate as complete, all-in-one gateways that merge physical imports with market trading, India's Commodity Exchanges operate strictly as a financial derivatives platform that is separate from the upstream banking channels controlling the nation's physical gold supply.

b) London Vaults and Spot Market

The London Spot Exchange, known as the Loco London over-the-counter (OTC) precious metals market, operates through bilateral trades rather than a centralized exchange. It is the world's largest center for trading gold and silver, requiring secure vault storage and major banks to function.

Transactions settle under the "Loco London" standard, requiring physical bullion to reside in specialized vaults within London. The Bank of England anchors this network, holding allocated gold reserves for central banks and institutional market-makers.

Major international banks form the backbone of the market, providing infrastructure, liquidity, and credit. Their primary functions include actively buy, sell, and lend precious metals, providing continuous pricing and liquidity for clients. Further, clearing banks hold vast amounts of physical bullion in their own dedicated vaults to back up the unallocated balances of their customers.

In India the Commodity Exchange networks should be as interspersed with the spot markets as the Loco London market so that spot to futures integration can take place and true benchmarks can immerge.

c) Electronic Gold Receipts (EGR) – Recycling household gold

Directing all gold imports through Commodity Exchanges would be a key policy step for successful transition of physical gold into an organized, unified spot market via EGR.

Further, Indian households and temples hold an estimated 30,000–35,000 tonnes of idle gold. Mobilizing even a small fraction of these cuts the need for fresh foreign exchange outflows. Recycling idle domestic gold through BIS-certified refiners and introducing it into the formal economy via Electronic Gold Receipts (EGRs) directly aligns with India's vision of reducing import dependency. By transforming hoarded assets into liquid, dematerialized, tradeable gold, India can conserve crucial foreign exchange and bolster economic stability.

The Way Forward: Securing the Value Chain:

As India solidifies its position as the undisputed epicenter of global physical gold demand, the structural realignment of the bullion and jewellery sectors is no longer a distant projection—it is a present reality. Navigating an era marked by heightened geopolitical tensions, restrictive tariff adjustments, and localized currency volatility requires a fundamental departure from unhedged exposure. For bullion intermediaries operating on razor-thin margins and retail jewellers managing duty-paid stock, the traditional reliance on unregulated over-the-counter (OTC) structures presents an unsustainable risk to business continuity.

The path forward hinges on systemic modernization and the widespread adoption of institutional-grade risk management. Achieving long-term operational resilience will require the industry to focus on three critical pillars:

a) Accelerating Digital and Physical Integration
b) Deepening Corporate and Institutional Participation
c) Enhancing Financial Literacy and Retail Inclusivity

By continuously innovating product suite—ranging from institutional larger contracts to retail-centric fractional offerings like Gold (10g, 8g and 1g) and Silver (1kg and 100g) contracts—MCX provides the essential financial architecture needed for this transition. As profit margins face pressure from both domestic regulatory changes and global macroeconomic shifts, the future belongs to those who actively manage their exposure. Embracing the robust, transparent, and multi-layered hedging ecosystem offered by MCX will ultimately empower India's bullion and jewellery industry to convert systemic volatility into a sustainable competitive advantage.

Going Public: Why IPO readiness is an enterprise-wide transformation

Karan Marwah
Partner & Leader, Capital Markets & CFO Advisory Grant Thornton Bharat LLP

An IPO is often seen as a capital markets event. A company files its DRHP, completes regulatory reviews, conducts investor roadshows, rings the bell on listing day, and begins life as a publicly traded entity. From the outside, the journey can appear linear, technical, and transaction driven.

In reality, successful IPOs are rarely defined by the transaction itself. They are shaped by the choices a company makes long before it enters the public markets.

Over the years, I have observed that companies preparing to go public often focus on the visible aspects: regulatory compliance, financial reporting, valuations, investor engagement, and transaction execution. All of these are important. None of them should be underestimated.

The companies that navigate public markets most successfully understand a deeper truth. An IPO is not merely a financing event. It is an institution-building milestone and, a leadership transformation. True IPO readiness requires a company to strengthen governance, internal controls, reporting discipline, strategic clarity, and organisational maturity well before th e transaction begins. The real question is not whether a company is ready to go public, but whether it is ready to operate as one. Those are not always the same thing.

Growth creates success. Maturity sustains it.

Many businesses reach the IPO stage because they have achieved scale. They have built strong products, captured market share, expanded geographically, attracted capital, and delivered growth. Growth gets companies to the starting line. Public markets, however, place a premium on something different: maturity.

Investors are not simply buying into what a company has achieved. They are placing confidence in how the company will operate, govern itself, allocate capital, manage risks, and create value in the future. This is where the conversation around IPO readiness needs to be broadened.

The transition from a privately held company to a publicly listed one is not just a shift in ownership structure; it is a change in operating philosophy. Decisions that were once informal become institutionalised. Founder judgement increasingly needs to be supported by governance frameworks. Relationships give way to processes. Individual knowledge must become organisational capability. Going public requires a company to deepen its maturity across various dimensions, as the expectations placed upon it and the scrutiny every action receives fundamentally change.

Governance becomes a strategic asset

Governance is often discussed in the context of compliance: boards need to be constituted, committees established, policies documented, internal controls strengthened, and reporting processes made reliable, repeatable, and transparent. These are all necessary requirements. But reducing governance to a checklist misses a larger opportunity. The strongest public companies do not treat governance as a regulatory obligation; they treat it as a strategic asset. Good governance improves decision- making quality, creates accountability, enables constructive challenge, and provides confidence to investors, lenders, employees, and other stakeholders. Most importantly, it sets up the foundation for scalability and managing risks in an ever more complex operating environment.

This becomes particularly relevant for founder-led businesses, family-owned enterprises, and rapidly scaling companies where decision-making has historically been concentrated among a small group of individuals. As businesses grow, the challenge is no longer speed alone. It is ensuring that growth remains sustainable, repeatable, and resilient. Strong governance provides the foundation for that transition. The question is not whether governance slows organisations down, but whether organisations can continue scaling effectively without it.

Culture faces its first real test

Governance tends to receive significant attention during IPO preparation. Culture receives less, even though it is frequently where the most profound transformation occurs. Private companies often operate with a high degree of entrepreneurial agility. Teams move quickly, decisions happen informally, and founders remain deeply involved in day-to-day operations. These characteristics are often responsible for the company's success.

Listing introduces new layers of scrutiny, accountability, transparency, and stakeholder expectations. The challenge is to preserve entrepreneurial energy while introducing greater discipline. Too much structure can dilute agility, too little can create inconsistency and execution risk. The organisations that navigate this transition most effectively are those that recognise culture cannot remain static. It must evolve alongside the business, often well before the company enters the public markets.

This does not mean abandoning what made the organisation successful. It means ensuring that values, behaviours, decision - making norms, and leadership expectations remain relevant in a more complex environment. In my experience, some of the most successful public companies achieve something that appears contradictory: they retain the ambition and agility of a growth company while building the discipline of an institution. That combination is difficult to replicate. It is also powerful.

Strategy comes under a different spotlight

Going public changes the strategic conversation. Private companies often have the flexibility to absorb short-term volatility in pursuit of long-term goals. Public companies operate in a more visible environment; performance is scrutinised more frequently, expectations are more demanding, and communication becomes more structured. This does not mean companies should become short-term in their thinking. If anything, it requires greater strategic clarity.

Public companies need a clear narrative around where they are going, why they are going there, and how they intend to create value. That narrative must be understood not only by investors, but also by employees, customers, partners, regulators, and boards. The discipline of being public often forces organisations to answer questions they may previously have deferred.

- Which markets matter most?
- What is the organisation's capital allocation philosophy?
- How will growth be funded?
- What risks are acceptable?
- What capabilities need to be built?
- What should the company stop doing?

These are questions that a company needs to address before they become investor questions. The strongest IPO candidates typically begin answering them well before listing day.

The challenge is remarkably consistent across companies

This journey cuts across organisations—family businesses approaching professionalisation, new-age technology companies preparing for public market scrutiny, private equity-backed firms planning an exit, and mid-market organisations entering their next phase of growth.

For promoters, investors, boards, and leadership teams, the agenda is consistent: build an organisation that is ready not only to list, but to lead with credibility after listing. Listing cannot be the end goal but the outcome of strategic and execution harmony and the beginning of a new chapter in the company's growth journey.

The details may differ, but the underlying challenges remain surprisingly similar: how do you build an organisation that can thrive when transparency increases, accountability deepens, stakeholder expectations expand, and complexity becomes permanent? This is ultimately an institution-building challenge. The IPO simply brings it into sharper focus.

The best IPO preparation starts earlier than most companies think

One of the most common misconceptions about IPO readiness is that it begins when a company decides to pursue a listing. In reality, preparation often starts years earlier. It begins when leadership teams strengthen governance, internal controls, reporting discipline, and finance-function maturity before regulations or investors require them. In this journey, the CFO and finance function play a central role in building credibility: translating performance into reliable information, strengthening controls, enabling better capital allocation, and giving boards and investors' confidence in the organisation's ability to de liver consistently.

It shows up when finance functions invest in better controls before investors demand them; when organisations build management depth before growth makes it necessary; when strategic priorities become clearer before public scrutiny arrives; and when culture evolves before scale exposes its limitations.

Businesses that undertake this work early tend to experience a smoother transition, not because they avoid challenges, but because they have already started building the organisational muscles required to navigate them.

Beyond the IPO

While it is tempting to view listing day as the finish line, it is closer to the starting point. Public markets do not reward companies merely for completing an IPO. They reward companies for consistently delivering performance, maintaining trust, demonstrating resilience, and creating long-term value. That requires much more than transaction readiness. It requires IPO readiness in its fullest sense covering governance, controls, strategic, cultural, and leadership readiness. The most important IPO question is therefore not, "Are we ready to go public?" but, "Are we ready to become the kind of institution that public markets expect us to be?" Companies that ask this question early often discover that the journey is not simply about going public; it is about growing up.

Real-time domestic and cross-border payment systems are increasingly becoming real and rapidly evolving as critical financial infrastructure. The race towards speed and inter-operability shall be equally matched with robust governance and safeguards to win customer trust and build confidence.

As cross-border instant payments become increasingly widespread, they are reshaping the global payments ecosystem and driving a new era of digital financial services. The rapid advancement of digital banking has elevated real-time payment infrastructure to a critical component of modern financial systems. Apart from banking, the cross-border real-time payments (RTPs) would be a game changer for capital markets and FX markets as it enables real-time cross border inflows and improves liquidity, collateral management and faster settlement cycles, thereby improving transparency and traceability.

However, the accelerating adoption of real-time payments also brings heightened regulatory and compliance challenges, requiring financial institutions to navigate an increasingly dynamic and complex regulatory landscape. Rising fraud and scam incidents, coupled with increasing transaction volumes, have become major challenges for RTP systems, requiring robust fraud prevention, financial crime compliance management, scalable infrastructure, strong cybersecurity, and continuous 24x7 monitoring capability to ensure secure and resilient operations.

As transaction volumes continue to surge, the industry is increasingly focused on interoperability, enabling cross-border real-time payment corridors that reduce settlement times from days to seconds while lowering costs. Global real-time payment transactions reached USD 266.2 billion in 2023, growing 42.2% YoY, and are projected to rise to USD 575.10 billion by 2028 at a 16.7% CAGR[1].

Across the globe, multiple cross-border interoperable RTP systems are making significant progress. As an example, multiple ASEAN countries have linked their domestic instant payment systems to build cross-border RTPs. Similarly, in GCC region, Buna is cross border payment platform connecting various Arab Nations. SEPA Instant Credit Transfer (SCT Inst) is a pan-European payment scheme designed to deliver near-instant euro transfers across participating countries within the Single Euro Payments Area (SEPA).

Similarly on domestic payment rails, Canada's Real-Time Rail (RTR)[2] built on the ISO 20022 messaging standard, scheduled for launch in Q4 2026, is a new nationwide instant payment system. In India, India's Unified Payments Interface (UPI)[3], operated by the National Payments Corporation of India (NPCI) operates the domestic instant real-time payment system and is also currently connected with payment systems in five other geographies, namely, Singapore, UAE, Nepal, Bhutan and France.

Global initiatives such as Project Agorá[4] and Project Nexus[5] by BIS (Bank of International Settlements) is set to improve operational efficiency, bring transparency and improve settlement speed to RTPs.

The expansion of cross-border instant payment systems has attracted significant attention from regulators, who aim to foster innovation and faster transactions without compromising financial security, consumer safeguards, fraud prevention, and compliance standards.

As RTPs become national critical infrastructure, Fraud, Scam and financial crime risks represent the most visible challenge within instant payment ecosystems as funds are transferred and settled within seconds, fraudsters can move stolen funds quickly before financial institutions have an opportunity to intervene.

Some of the most common challenges include Authorized Push Payment (APP) Frauds, social media enabled scams, account takeover and mule accounts. Incrementally organized crime syndicates have increasingly used sophisticated digital attacks to undermine instant payment systems through cyber-attacks.

Similarly, RPTs also can be exploited by money launderers to layer illicit funds rapidly, move proceeds through multiple accounts, obscure transaction trails and conduct structuring activities.

Sanctions compliance post significant challenges in RPTs and the U.S. Office of Foreign Assets Control (OFAC)[6] has specifically issued guidance encouraging financial institutions operating instant payment systems to adopt risk-based sanctions screening frameworks that match the pace of real-time transactions.

A case can also be made that while payment systems are under threat, it may necessitate relooking at the entire digital ecosystem and shall not be limited to financial institutions in isolation as the above risks are often spread using social media that allows reach, anonymity and virality of deceptive content and exploitation of personal information. Hence, financial Institutions, telecom companies, internet service providers and social media should have shared responsibilities to manage and mitigate frauds and scams. Some initiative such as "scam signals"[7] in UK, "Shared responsibility Framework"[8] in Singapore, "Scam prevention framework – anti-scam intel loop"[9] in Australia are steps in the right direction.

With the objective of building and retaining customer trust in evolving payment landscape, the need of the hours is to build cross-industry collaboration, data sharing, cross-regulatory interface and public-private forums that may support managing fraud and financial crime risks.

Some notable measures that can be assessed by organizations to manage and mitigate frauds and scams in RTPs include:

Preventive Measures:

1. Payee Verification that allows payer to confirm the intended recipient before initiating a transfer.
2. Utilize real-time transaction monitoring systems to identify suspicious transactions and delay or block them when necessary.
3. Invest in AI-enabled fraud detection tools that identify scams in real time and help customers recognize warning signs before losses occur.
4. Establish real-time alert mechanisms for payment mandate changes to enable rapid detection, assessment, and resolution of suspicious activity.
5. Conduct regular sanctions screening of customers against lists of individuals and entities subject to targeted financial sanctions. These checks must be conducted at least once per day.

Detective Measures:

1. Establish customer behavior baselines using - Typical transaction values, Device usage patterns and Payment timings.
2. Identify excessive activity within a short period through velocity monitoring - Multiple transactions per minute/hour, Repeated authentication attempts and Rapid account-to-account transfers.
3. Assign a dynamic risk score based on - Customer behavior, Beneficiary risk and Geographic risk.
4. Geolocation and IP Monitoring - High-risk IP addresses and Geographic anomalies

Responsive Measures:

1. Implement Multi-Factor Authentication (MFA).
2. Block Suspicious Transactions.
3. Contact receiving banks/payment providers to request fund recall or account freeze.
4. Add transaction limits for high-risk transfers.
5. Reimbursements for fraud victims to improve consumer confidence and create incentives to strengthen fraud controls.
6. Regulatory reporting to assess institutional effectiveness and support in building private-public coalition to counter abuse of payment systems.

Governing the Transition: Embedding Sustainability and Climate Accountability into Corporate Decision-Making

Sheetal Sharad
Chief Ratings Officer
ICRA ESG Ratings Ltd.

Sunil KS
Head Analytical
ICRA ESG Ratings Ltd.

For Indian companies, ESG is no longer a reporting exercise. It is increasingly linked to how risks are assessed, how capital is allocated and how resilient business models are to change.

At the core of this shift is the dual imperative of decarbonization and energy security, shaped by India's national commitments and development priorities. Targets such as expanding non-fossil fuel capacity to 500 GW, reducing emissions intensity, and progressing towards net-zero by 2070 are influencing policy direction and capital allocation. For companies, this is translating into a gradual shift towards renewable energy, not only to reduce emissions but also to manage energy cost volatility, improve supply security and align with evolving regulatory expectations.

Beyond carbon, the scope of environmental considerations is widening. Resource efficiency, including the use of energy, water and raw materials, is becoming increasingly integral to cost structures and operational resilience. Over time, other environmental impacts such as waste management and biodiversity are also expected to gain prominence as regulatory expectations evolve, and resource constraints intensify.

Social considerations are similarly becoming more material to business continuity. Factors such as employee welfare, health and safety, and workforce stability are increasingly linked to productivity, risk management and long-term value creation.

In this context, ESG is emerging as an indicator of how well a company understands its impacts, manages resources and positions itself to respond to emerging risks and opportunities. The question is no longer whether companies disclose sustainability information, but whether they have the governance capacity to act on it.

From Commitments to Capability

There has been a clear increase in sustainability disclosures and formal commitments in recent years. Large, listed companies are reporting more structured ESG information, setting climate targets and defining board-level responsibilities more clearly.

However, the next phase of progress will depend on the depth of governance behind these commitments. Climate targets and sustainability policies require internal systems that can track performance, assign responsibility and support decision-making. While ESG is increasingly recognized as a board-level issue, the effectiveness of oversight varies, particularly in how risks are escalated and whether outcomes translate into accountability. This reflects a broader transition from stated intent to implementation, with uneven progress across companies.

What Stronger Governance Looks Like

ICRA ESG's 2025 analysis on emerging governance trends among large corporates indicates that ESG outcomes are linked to deliberate governance design rather than incidental factors.

Companies with relatively stronger performance tend to demonstrate the following:

- Clear board-level oversight of ESG risks and impacts
- Regular integration of sustainability risks into decision-making forums
- Early linkage of ESG metrics with management performance
- Alignment with best known global initiatives to reflect public commitment
- Integration of ESG considerations into enterprise risk management, strategy and performance review

These features reflect a shift from oversight to accountability, where sustainability is embedded within core business processes rather than treated as a standalone agenda.

Closing the Gap Between Targets and Systems

Sustainability discussions in India have largely been driven by disclosure requirements. While this is beginning to change, with ESG and climate considerations being incorporated into enterprise risk management and strategic planning, the transition remains at an early stage.

A clear gap persists between commitments and governance capacity. While many companies have articulated climate targets, fewer have established structured mechanisms to oversee delivery. More advanced approaches, such as scenario analysis or capital allocation aligned with transition strategies, remain limited.

ICRA ESG's December 2024 analysis highlights a related imbalance. India has 127 companies committed to SBTi net-zero targets, yet only around 7–10% of these are from high-emission sectors that account for a large share of national emissions. This indicates that while participation is increasing, it is not yet aligned with sectors where transition is most critical.

A different lens through ICRA ESG's report on governance trends reveals sectors such as oil and gas and energy show relatively higher adoption of dedicated ESG oversight structures, while metals and mining continue to rely more on broader governance mechanisms.

Other sectors have seen faster formalization. In BFSI and IT, ESG committee adoption has increased significantly in recent years. At a finer level, some sectors show stronger progress in target-setting than in governance structures.

These patterns indicate that sectors with higher environmental exposure are not always the fastest to institutionalize governance mechanisms, reinforcing the uneven pace of transition readiness.

Without clearly defined systems, accountability structures and performance tracking, execution can remain inconsistent.

What Disclosures Reveal

Regulatory developments have improved the consistency and comparability of sustainability disclosures, particularly among larger companies. However, disclosures often reflect underlying governance quality. There is also a growing extension of these expectations along value chains. As disclosure and sustainability requirements become more formalized for larger corporates, particularly listed entities, similar expectations are gradually cascading to smaller players within their supply chains. This is driven by procurement standards, customer requirements and evolving disclosure conditions. As a result, sustainability considerations will begin to heavily influence operational practices and data expectations across broader industry ecosystems.

Without robust systems for data, oversight and accountability, improvements in reporting may not translate into operational outcomes, limiting their usefulness in assessing execution capability.

Bridging Disclosure and Assessment

As disclosures expand, interpreting them consistently remains a challenge. In this context, third-party assessments like SEBI-regulated ESG ratings, are emerging as an additional layer of evaluation. Engagement based approaches typically combine disclosures with management interactions and stakeholder inputs to assess how sustainability commitments are being implemented in practice. Transition-focused assessments extend this further by evaluating the trajectory of change rather than static performance. This includes examining transition plans, progress against targets, capital allocation decisions and the effectiveness of governance systems. Such approaches provide an external lens on execution capability, particularly where disclosures alone may not be sufficient.

Evolving Regulatory Architecture

The regulatory landscape is gradually evolving to support a more structured transition. Mechanisms such as CCTS, carbon credit trading systems, increasing clarity on ESG and sustainability-linked debt instruments, and the expected development of climate taxonomies are beginning to define what constitutes credible transition activity.

These developments are likely to improve comparability, guide capital allocation and reduce ambiguity around sustainability claims. In parallel, the Reserve Bank of India has been setting expectations around climate risk-related disclosures for banks. Once finalized, this is likely to increase the focus on climate risk within lending portfolios, as financial institutions begin evaluating exposures through the lens of emissions intensity, transition risk and alignment with sustainability objectives. This could introduce an additional channel of discipline, linking corporate transition performance more directly with access to capital.

The Governance Test

Governance is emerging as a key determinant of how effectively companies translate sustainability commitments into outcomes. It provides insight into whether ESG considerations are embedded in decision-making or remain limited to reporting.

As sustainability becomes more closely linked to capital allocation, risk management and regulatory expectations, the focus is shifting from intent to alignment. Governance systems, supported by independent assessment frameworks and evolving regulatory architecture, will increasingly determine whether companies are able to demonstrate credible transition progress.

For companies, this implies a need to move beyond target-setting towards building execution capability. This can be done through clearer accountability, stronger integration into strategy and more disciplined tracking of outcomes. For investors and lenders, the emphasis is likely to sharpen on distinguishing between stated commitments and demonstrated transition readiness.

Board Committees: Emerging Roles and Responsibilities

The post-2013 governance settlement in India was, by any objective standard, a success.

The Companies Act, 2013 and SEBI's LODR Regulations gave listed companies a five-committee architecture that looked modern and worked predictably. The Audit Committee would safeguard financial oversight. The Nomination and Remuneration Committee (NRC) would shape board composition and pay. The CSR Committee would underwrite social responsibility. The Risk Committee would oversee enterprise risk. The Stakeholders Relationship Committee would give investors a formal voice.

Governance improved. Compliance became more disciplined. A generation of directors learned their roles within this structure.

For the risks Indian corporations face today, however, this architecture is increasingly under strain.

When the risk does not fit the committee

Take water.
For manufacturers, textile exporters, pharmaceutical majors and FMCG companies, water scarcity is no longer an abstract "ESG issue". It is a live operational threat across multiple states. It affects plant location, capex, supply chains, licence to operate and, ultimately, valuation.

Where does that risk live in the five-committee world?

- The Audit Committee will see it in impairments, provisions and going-concern assumptions.
- The Risk Committee will see it in business continuity plans and risk registers.
- The CSR Committee may fund watershed or conservation projects.
- The NRC can, at best, link executive incentives to water-related targets.

Everyone touches it. No one clearly owns it.

Cyber risk is similar.
A serious cyber incident is a board-level risk. It compromises financial systems (Audit), enterprise risk appetite (Risk), data protection and privacy, which have no obvious statutory home, and the digital backbone of the business, which is often treated as "IT" rather than core strategy. In many Indian boardrooms, cyber risk appears multiple times a year, in multiple places, with no integrated line of sight.

Talent follows the same pattern.
The NRC's statutory brief covers CEO pay, KMP remuneration and board succession. Yet many of the real vulnerabilities sit below that level: succession for the next 50–100 critical roles, diversity and inclusion at scale, and cultural resilience. These topics move between management, NRC, CSR and "strategy discussions," and often lack a single point of structured board oversight.

Even diligent boards, working within the five-committee template, can find that the realities of climate, cyber, human capital and geopolitics do not respect those boundaries. The risks are cross-cutting. The governance can become fragmented despite good intentions.

The quiet rise of the non-statutory committee
India's more self-aware boards have already responded.

Public disclosures show that NTPC now operates multiple specialised committees. Infosys has a dedicated ESG committee. Bharat Forge, Hindalco and conglomerates such as Aditya Birla have all moved beyond the statutory minimum, constituting committees in areas such as sustainability, technology, finance and human capital.

Across the BSE 500, this is now a discernible pattern: roughly 32% of companies run non-statutory committees, most focused on ESG, IT strategy, customer service and investment. These structures are not cosmetic. They respond to a practical governance need: when an issue is both material and specialised, it needs a defined forum.

An ESG committee gives the board a place to consider climate risk, water availability, supply-chain labour standards, and the requirements of BRSR and international sustainability reporting. A technology committee creates a forum for digital transformation and cybersecurity to be treated as strategic issues. A human capital committee enables the board to approach talent and culture as assets requiring governance, rather than as matters to be left entirely to management.

Institutional investors reinforce this evolution. Questions from large domestic fund houses are increasingly specific: "Where is ESG governed at board level?", "Who is accountable for cyber strategy?", "How is human capital overseen?"

Regulation is moving in parallel. SEBI's BRSR framework has made ESG a core part of listed-company reporting. If current regulatory discussions continue on their present course, formal ESG governance requirements are a logical next step. Cybersecurity standards, data-protection law and diversity initiatives are following similar paths. Boards that establish ESG, technology and diversity committees now can build capability before rules harden. Boards that wait may need to construct governance under regulatory and market pressure.

The board as a portfolio of capabilities

Beneath these structural changes lies a more fundamental shift. The board is being treated less as a set of senior names and more as a portfolio of capabilities.

Under the resource-dependence view of the firm, the board exists to provide the expertise, information and networks the company needs to navigate its environment. Hillman and Dalziel (2003) refer to this as "board capital".

Skills data from India's largest companies shows that board capital is being reconfigured.

Among BSE 100 boards, the most sought-after emerging capabilities are:

- Global business exposure – 27% of boards explicitly seek it; and
- Strategic risk management – 26% cite it as a need.

These reflect the demands on Indian companies expanding across borders amid geopolitical disruption and supply-chain risk.

Across the broader BSE 500, demand diversifies. The most cited emerging capabilities are:

- HR and people management – 20.4%,
- M&A expertise – 19.5%, and
- Policy shaping and public policy – 19.5%.

This matches an environment marked by intense competition for talent, an active deal pipeline and a more complex regulatory and political landscape.

These do not replace the traditional foundations of leadership, finance, industry knowledge and strategy; they are added to them. The purpose is straightforward: to equip the board to govern ESG, cyber, human capital, geopolitics and complex transactions with the same seriousness as budgets and financial reporting.

In better-governed boards, the NRC's skills matrix has become a central planning tool. It connects emerging responsibilities to individuals: who should chair the ESG committee, who understands cyber and data, who has meaningful M&A experience, and who can speak credibly on people and culture.

The remaking of the independent director

Nowhere is this shift more visible than in the role of independent directors.

The traditional model emphasised generalist business experience. Directors often served on multiple boards and multiple committees, providing broad oversight. Time was constrained, but the expectation remained that a capable generalist could supervise most topics with reasonable effectiveness.

This model is being revised.

Boards are increasingly recruiting independent directors for defined areas of expertise. A technology executive is asked to chair the technology committee and lead cyber oversight. A sustainability practitioner takes responsibility for the ESG committee. An HR-intensive business leader contributes primarily to human capital oversight.

The workload context matters. A director sitting on four boards and serving on audit, NRC, risk, CSR and stakeholder committees can easily reach 40 to 50 committee meetings a year. Expecting the same individual to keep pace with developments in climate science, cyber risk, regulation and succession planning is unrealistic.

Specialisation offers a more workable arrangement. A technology-literate director who concentrates effort on a technology committee and its interfaces with audit and risk can add more value than the same director dispersed across several committees. Focus allows for deeper preparation and more substantive challenge.

The supply of such profiles—independent directors with credible expertise in ESG, cyber, people or policy—is limited. As demand grows, so will compensation levels, competition for appointments and scrutiny of performance. Board service at this level increasingly resembles a professional practice rather than an informal post-retirement engagement.

When responsibility shows up on the payslip

Remuneration patterns also reflect these shifts.

Across the BSE 500, members of non-statutory committees earn, on average, ₹59,000 per meeting, compared with ₹56,000 for statutory committee members.

On the surface this may seem counter-intuitive. Voluntary ESG or technology committees appear to attract a higher fee than long-established statutory committees.

The underlying logic is that remuneration should track responsibility, complexity and time. Many statutory committee agendas, while important, are now well defined. Expectations are clearer, practices are established and cycles are familiar.

Non-statutory committees typically operate in less settled areas. There is less precedent, fewer templates and greater reliance on judgement. An ESG committee must consider climate scenarios, evolving disclosure requirements and stakeholder expectations. A technology committee must address AI, changing threat landscapes and business-model implications. A human capital committee has to think across demographics, geographies and regulatory regimes.

A fee premium for this work signals recognition that these committees carry significant responsibility and require more intensive engagement.

The question for every board

Against this backdrop, the question for Indian boards is straightforward.

Are existing committees aligned to the company's most important risks and opportunities?

A board may be fully compliant with the five-committee framework and still have gaps. If water, climate, cyber, data, human capital and geopolitics are central to the business, and yet are handled intermittently across several committees, oversight is unlikely to be consistent.

Boards that are re-designing their governance are starting from three basic questions:

- Which issues could materially change the shape or value of this company?
- Which of these do not have a clear, accountable home in the current committee structure?
- Do we have the skills and time at board level to oversee them rigorously?

For some, the answer will be one or two additional non-statutory committees, with mandates, composition and information flows designed as carefully as those of statutory committees. For others, it may involve revisiting and re-scoping existing committees to avoid duplication and fragmentation.

The underlying shift is conceptual.

The earlier focus — "What is the minimum structure regulation requires?" — is giving way to a more demanding one: "What governance architecture do we need to manage our actual risks and strategy?"

Statutory committees provide the minimum framework. Non-statutory committees, and the specialised independent directors who serve on them, extend that framework to match each company's specific context.

Some boards will move only when regulation forces their hand. Others will treat committee design as a strategic lever that affects risk, performance and access to capital.

The difference may not be visible in every quarterly result. It is likely to be evident in the next significant event—whether that is a cyber incident, a climate-related disruption, a leadership transition or a regulatory review—and in the answer to a simple question: "Where, at board level, was this governed?"

Looking ahead: A message for IPO candidates during uncertain times

A securities market is a bridge between savings and investments. Businesses need capital to grow. The securities market connects the two and helps diversify sources of finance by offering a bouquet of instruments like equity and debt. With ease of access and a simplified onboarding process, investing has become easier. Online verification systems like Aadhaar-based e-KYC have eliminated the need for physical paperwork.

But why list at all?

A major benefit of an IPO is the substantial permanent capital it provides to meet a company's immediate and long-term objectives. This new capital base can dramatically increase the company's ability to expand its current product line, engage in new businesses, expand to other geographic markets or achieve other goals for the company. A listing also brings prestige, exposure, financial reward and stakeholder engagement.

However, going public can be a complex process, with additional reporting and regulatory requirements, increased scrutiny, additional drains on company time and resources, as well as a range of new stakeholders to manage and navigate. Complying with the demands of being a public company requires commitment, time and resources across many aspects of a company.

Illustrative timeline of pre-IPO activities

Note: The length of the overall listing process varies. Often, the timeline depends on effective planning, experience and the capability of advisers, and the readiness of the company's existing internal controls.

Fragmentation of the global order

In a global market defined by geopolitical risks, climate change effects, and technological disruptions, preparation remains a key variable for IPO candidates. The emergence of a global crisis has the potential to materially alter the structure, behaviour and strategic positioning of Indian capital markets. India is simultaneously exposed to global shocks and benefiting from global realignment.

One of the most important shifts in Indian capital markets has been the growing role of domestic investors. Systematic investment plans, retail participation and domestic institutional flows have reduced - though not eliminated - dependence on foreign portfolio investors. Indian companies can't control geopolitics or regulatory uncertainties, but they can control how ready they are when the opportunity arises.

Recipe for a successful IPO

Once the decision to list has been made, preparing for the IPO process should begin immediately. Extensive planning, including an IPO strategy, is essential for a company to navigate the IPO listing process. How the crisis will play out on Indian IPO candidates will depend on many variables outside of any company's control, so early preparation and flexibility will be critical. IPO candidates may consider responding to the following considerations:

1) Does the company's vision and its governance framework inspire confidence?

Management must decide on how to present the company to investors. It is essential to communicate the history of the business, clearly define and explain the business model, current operations and performance, the emerging risks inherent in the business and the future vision and strategic plan. This review will form the basis of the Offer Document.

Pre-IPO activities now require significantly deeper diligence around cyber governance, data protection frameworks, third-party technology dependencies and incident response readiness. Similarly, ESG considerations are moving beyond narrative disclosures to measurable metrics, governance structures and demonstrable execution. Market reports highlighting sector vulnerabilities and supply chain risks can directly influence valuation perceptions and investor appetite.

Corporate governance is at the top of agendas for investors, regulators and boards. The company must meet certain corporate governance standards as per SEBI India (Listing Obligations and Disclosure Requirements) Regulations, 2015. Governance requirements resulting from other sectoral laws and regulations must also be met. Now more than ever, a strong corporate governance function, including qualified independent board members and transparency in related-party transactions, is critical.

2) Has tax planning been prioritised?

An IPO has tax implications with a need to undertake extensive tax due diligence to identify any exposure (both past and future), particularly for multi-jurisdictional businesses. "Reverse flip" is gaining popularity in the startup ecosystem, where an India-linked startup shifts its holding structure back to India from an overseas jurisdiction such as Singapore or the United States. Given the high litigation and structuring sensitivity, these transactions require integrated advice across areas such as Income Tax, FEMA, company law and valuation.

3) Have you assembled the right team?

During the IPO process, companies are likely to spend more time with the group of people involved in the offering than with employees. To achieve these goals, a company will need a team of knowledgeable and experienced Book Running Lead Managers (BRLMs), auditors, attorneys and other advisers. Drafting a detailed milestone timeline, assigning specific responsibilities and having effective project managers in place is the best way to control and execute a listing process.

In periods of geopolitical fragmentation, volatile liquidity conditions and heightened regulatory scrutiny, the role of an experienced BRLM becomes significantly more strategic than merely executing an IPO process. Experienced BRLMs increasingly focus not only on maximising valuation but also on preserving long-term market trust.

4) Do you need to convert comparative information from previous GAAP to Ind AS?

Depending on the complexity of the necessary changes, a conversion of comparative information from previous GAAP to Ind AS may turn out to be a very time-consuming exercise with tight deadlines. The complexities multiply when the financial statements of the previous year were not audited by a peer-reviewed chartered accountant. The SEBI (Issue of Capital and Disclosure Requirements) Regulations, 2018 require that the restated financial information in an Offer Document should be examined by a peer-reviewed chartered accountant.

The involvement of a new peer-reviewed auditor introduces significant technical and execution challenges. Management often assumes "Prior audited numbers already exist." However, the new peer-reviewed auditor may view the situation differently. This expectation gap creates friction around timelines, re-testing requirements and reopening closed accounting positions.

5) Are you planning to give pro-forma information?

Pro forma information is inherently sensitive because it seeks to illustrate the financial impact of an acquisition or divestment as though it had occurred at an earlier date. In uncertain times, the rigour expected around pro forma financial information increases materially because investors, regulators and lenders become far less tolerant of narrative-driven financial engineering.

The role of the SEBI also becomes particularly significant during volatile market conditions, as regulators are generally less tolerant of disclosures that could potentially mislead investors through selective presentation or unsupported assumptions. In practice, this has led to heightened focus on consistency between the financial information, MD&A disclosures, business risks, industry outlook and use of proceeds narrative within IPO documents. Boards and audit committees are also increasingly expected to demonstrate active oversight over pro forma information.

6) Have the common pitfalls identified by SEBI been plugged in the draft offer document?

The increasing depth and specificity of observations issued by the SEBI during IPO reviews offer important lessons for companies on the evolving expectations around governance, disclosures and financial reporting rigour.

SEBI has consistently emphasised the need for issuers to present risk factors in the order of their relative importance and materiality. This recurring observation across several DRHPs underscores the regulator's focus on ensuring that investors can easily identify the most critical risks, particularly the top 5, top 10, and top 25 risks impacting the company.

Companies should provide clear disclosures outlining the reasons and commercial justification for any material transactions with promoters, promoter group entities, and related parties. There is an increased ask on providing granular information, e.g. disclosure of the capacity and utilisation % of the present manufacturing plant, disclose whether the capital expenditure is for the expansion of capacity or for a new product, disclose the need and reasons for setting up an additional plant despite having non-utilised capacity.

Closing entries*:

For IPO-bound companies, the signal from the market is increasingly unmistakable: capital remains available, but conviction is highly selective. While challenging markets will come and go, it's the companies that are fully prepared that will best be able to create value and fully leverage the IPO windows of opportunity whenever they are open. Preparedness itself has become a competitive advantage, and strategic agility is increasingly distinguishing companies that can successfully transition to the public markets from those that remain vulnerable to shifting market sentiment.

Reimagining Corporate Governance: A Practitioner's Perspective

Asish K.Bhattacharyya
Management Consultant and Distinguished Visiting Professor in the Academy of Continuing Education (ACE)

Abstract
Corporate governance frameworks worldwide focus on the monitoring-board model, in which independent directors oversee management and safeguard shareholders from the misuse of managerial power. Traditionally, this model protects minority shareholders' interests. However, as business dynamics have evolved—through technological innovation, geopolitical uncertainty, new workforce expectations and increased public scrutiny—the business environment has become more complex and less predictable. Simultaneously, the knowledge gap between management and non-executive directors has widened. Many effective boards now act as advisers and sounding boards, not merely as monitors. This article contends that reliance on the traditional monitoring model warrants reconsideration. Governance should emphasise director competence, transparency, independent assurance and the quality of board challenge. Mandatory quotas for independent directors need not be treated as untouchable; they can be adapted to a company's specific circumstances, provided safeguards against conflicts of interest remain strong.

1. Introduction

The Cadbury Committee provided a widely accepted definition of corporate governance: "Corporate governance is the system by which companies are directed and controlled." The fundamental question is who is responsible for directing and controlling a company, and for whose benefit. The foundations of the system that evolved over the years lie in the separation of ownership and control articulated by Berle and Means. The board of directors (board) is at the centre of governance. It is responsible for directing and controlling the company in its best interests. Shareholders benefit when the funds entrusted to the company are used to create and protect enterprise value. The board contributes to this objective by minimising the leakage of company wealth, enabling value creation for internal stakeholders without impairing social value, and protecting the environment.

The modern governance framework grew around the monitoring board model. The board comprises directors elected by shareholders. It appoints the chief executive officer (CEO) and delegates day-to-day management authority. The board's main role is to monitor the CEO, who acts as an agent in the principal-agent relationship. Managers' interests may diverge from those of shareholders, and managers may use company resources for their own benefit at the company's expense. Empirical research shows that managers can expropriate wealth, entrench themselves and shirk responsibilities. Independent directors are therefore expected to monitor management, prevent the misuse of corporate resources and provide assurance to shareholders.

The model remains useful, but its limitations are increasingly evident: board proceedings lack transparency, assessing individual directors' contributions is difficult, and formal independence does not always translate into independent judgement. The key issue is whether the monitoring board, in its present form, remains effective.

2. The Changing Business Landscape

Companies in the contemporary business environment face continuous disruption. Geopolitical shifts reshape trade, supply chains, investment decisions and regulatory regimes. Technology is now central to strategy, operations, customer engagement and risk management. Cybersecurity, data privacy and technological obsolescence are core governance concerns.

Workforce and customer expectations have changed. Younger employees seek ethical conduct, transparency, inclusion and purpose. Gig work and flexible employment challenge traditional employment structures. Customers and employees can respond to corporate behaviour almost instantly through digital platforms.

Society increasingly expects sustainable and responsible conduct. Companies must demonstrate resilience and innovation while meeting expanding regulatory and reporting requirements. Boards must provide oversight as business models, technologies, risks and stakeholder expectations continue to evolve.

This raises a practical question: can a board that meets periodically and depends largely on information supplied by management provide effective oversight of a complex, fast-moving business?

3. The Widening Knowledge Gap

It is well established that the agent in a principal-agent relationship knows more about the business than the principal. The principal appoints the agent because the agent possesses the knowledge and capability required to manage the enterprise, while recognising the possibility of leakage of wealth. The principal therefore establishes mechanisms to minimise such leakage. In a company, shareholders, as principals, are represented by the board, which monitors management on their behalf.

A key assumption is that non-executive directors collectively have sufficient capability to monitor the CEO. In practice, management has far deeper and more specific knowledge of the business. The gap widens as technology, regulation and industry structures become increasingly specialised.

Non-executive directors have limited time to acquire company-specific knowledge. A skills matrix may list board expertise in finance, technology or markets, but it does not show that directors understand the company deeply enough to monitor management and ask informed, probing questions. Companies are understandably reluctant to appoint executives from competing firms. Retired executives and professionals bring valuable experience, but their knowledge may not always match current operating realities.

This does not make monitoring unnecessary. It shows that independence alone does not solve the knowledge problem. A director who is independent but poorly informed cannot monitor management effectively.

4. Stewardship and Agency: Revisiting Assumptions

Agency theory focuses on the possibility of opportunistic behaviour. Real-world behaviour is more nuanced. Many managers identify strongly with the organisation and behave as stewards. The contemporary environment also imposes checks that were far weaker when the monitoring model was developed:

- Digital communication spreads news of wrongdoing rapidly and can destroy reputation and value in the executive employment market.
- Employees, customers and, in family-controlled companies, younger family members increasingly question conduct that appears unfair or unethical.
- Institutional investors, proxy advisers, regulators and the media scrutinise governance practices and can impose significant reputational and financial costs.

These checks do not eliminate opportunism. They do, however, make it unrealistic to treat every manager only as a self-interested agent. Innovation thrives in open cultures. An environment dominated by suspicion and control can discourage candour, slow decisions, and stifle creativity. The challenge is to combine accountability with trust.

The selection of CEOs and other senior executives has also become more rigorous. Search firms conduct background checks and assess candidates' professional and market reputations. This reduces, though it does not eliminate, the risk of an unsuitable appointment. Senior executives have strong reasons to protect their professional standing. Governance should recognise both agency risks and stewardship behaviour rather than assume that one explanation fits every company and every manager.

5. The Loyal Critic: Rethinking Independence

An effective independent director is a loyal critic: supportive of the company but willing to ask tough questions. Trust is essential. Management shares information more candidly with directors who understand the business and engage constructively. However, familiarity must not become dependence. Regulatory criteria, term limits and transparent appointment processes offer useful guardrails. Ultimately, though, effective independence is also a state of mind.

The quality of assurance is equally important. Independent auditors, strong audit committees, internal audit and regulatory oversight strengthen financial reporting and internal control. Indian Accounting Standards (Ind AS) promote comparability and transparency, while NFRA has intensified regulatory attention to audit quality. These mechanisms cannot replace board judgement. They can, however, reduce the extent to which stakeholders must rely on formal director independence as their principal source of assurance.

6. The Independent Board: Symbolism and Reality

In practice, boards monitor and advise. The CEO uses the board as a sounding board on strategy and critical decisions. Directors provide checks and balances, offer external perspectives, support the CEO in difficult situations, and engage intensively with management during crises. This advisory and boundary-spanning role is often where boards add the greatest value.

An "independent board" also provides symbolic assurance to stakeholders. Symbolism has value, but it should not be mistaken for effectiveness. A board may meet every formal requirement and still fail to challenge management. Conversely, a director who does not meet every formal criterion of independence may possess exceptional competence and exercise genuinely independent judgement. Governance should look beyond labels to the quality of deliberation, information and accountability.

7. Conclusion

The monitoring board model, based on agency theory, needs to be re-examined. This does not mean that monitoring or independent judgement should cease. It means that formal independence alone is not a sufficient measure of board quality. Governance frameworks should give greater weight to competence, company-specific knowledge, access to information, transparency, assurance and the capacity to challenge constructively.

Shareholder activism is an important complementary monitoring mechanism. Institutional shareholders exercise influence not only by voting at general meetings but also through private engagement with the CEO, chairperson and board. Prime Database data reported for March 2026 indicate that domestic institutional investors held 19.24% and foreign institutional investors held 16.13% of listed Indian equities—a combined institutional holding of 35.37%. Institutional ownership does not ensure effective activism, but it can strengthen shareholders' capacity and incentive to engage with companies.

It would be unwise to throw the baby out with the bathwater. Mandatory quotas for independent directors have served an important purpose, but they should be reviewed and, where appropriate, relaxed. Greater flexibility would allow companies to appoint competent individuals who may not satisfy every formal criterion of independence. Such flexibility should consider ownership concentration, institutional engagement, board competence, external assurance and safeguards against conflicts of interest.

In family-run and promoter-controlled companies, flexibility must be accompanied by strong protection for minority shareholders and rigorous oversight of conflicts and related-party transactions. The objective is not a weaker board. It is a board that is better informed, more trusted and more effective in today's world.

How to Get 25% of India to Participate in the Capital Markets

A National Strategy for Financial Inclusion, Wealth Creation and Economic Development

Dr.Milind V.Dalvi
Chief Executive Officer
Association of Investment Bankers of India

Abstract
India is the world's fastest-growing major economy and is projected to become a USD 25–30 trillion economy by 2047. Despite significant advancements in financial inclusion, direct participation in capital markets remains relatively low compared to developed economies. While India has over 200 million demat accounts, active equity market participation remains below 15% of the population.

This paper proposes a comprehensive national strategy to increase capital market participation to 25% of India's population by 2047. Assuming a population of approximately 1.6 billion by 2047, the target implies creating nearly 400 million capital market participants. The paper identifies key barriers, examines global best practices, and proposes reforms across financial literacy, technology, product innovation, taxation, investor protection, retirement savings, and regional outreach.

Keywords: Capital Markets, Financial Inclusion, Retail Investors, Financial Literacy, India 2047, Wealth Creation, Mutual Funds, Equity Markets.

1. Introduction

Economic development and capital market participation are closely linked. Countries with higher household participation in capital markets generally exhibit:

- Greater household wealth creation
- Better retirement preparedness
- More efficient capital allocation
- Stronger entrepreneurial ecosystems
- Higher levels of financial literacy

India has made remarkable progress through:

- Digital payments
- Jan Dhan accounts
- Aadhaar ecosystem
- UPI infrastructure
- Dematerialized securities

Yet a large proportion of household savings continues to be held in:

- Bank deposits
- Gold
- Real estate
- Physical assets

The challenge before policymakers is: "How can India convert savers into investors and investors into long-term wealth creators?"

2. Current State of Participation

- Household Savings Allocation
  Indian households have traditionally preferred physical and low-risk assets such as bank deposits, real estate, gold, and insurance products. While these instruments provide safety and liquidity, they often generate returns that barely outpace inflation over the long term.

- Analysis
  i. Nearly 80% of household savings are concentrated in traditional assets such as bank deposits, real estate, gold, and insurance products.
  ii. Only about 10% of savings flow directly into capital market instruments, including equities, mutual funds, exchange-traded funds (ETFs), corporate bonds, REITs, and InvITs.
  iii. Even a modest shift of savings from traditional assets to capital markets can have a transformative impact on India's economic growth.

- The Opportunity
  Assuming Indian households save approximately ₹60 lakh crore annually, increasing the share allocated to capital markets from 10% to 20% would generate an additional ₹6 lakh crore per annum for productive investments. This incremental capital could finance:

- Infrastructure projects
- Manufacturing expansion
- Startup and innovation ecosystems
- Renewable energy projects
- SME growth and employment generation
- Vision for 2047

A desirable household savings mix for a developed India could be:

Asset Class	Current (%)	Vision 2047 (%)
Bank Deposits	40	25
Real Estate	25	20
Gold	15	10
Insurance & Small Savings	10	10
Capital Markets	10	35

Under this scenario, capital markets would become the primary engine for household wealth creation while continuing to coexist with traditional savings avenues. Such a shift would be a critical enabler in achieving the goal of having 25% of India's population actively participate in capital markets by 2047.

3. Why 25% Participation Matters

Increasing capital market participation to 25% of India's population by 2047 is not merely a financial-sector objective; it is a strategic national imperative that can significantly influence economic growth, wealth creation, financial inclusion, and India's transition into a developed economy.

i. Accelerating Household Wealth Creation
Historically, equities and equity-oriented mutual funds have outperformed traditional asset classes such as savings, deposits and gold over long periods. Wider participation in capital markets allows households to:
- Benefit from India's economic growth.
- Generate inflation-beating returns.
- Build long-term wealth through compounding.
- Achieve financial goals such as education, home ownership, and retirement.

Example: A monthly SIP of ₹5,000 earning an average annual return of 12% can accumulate to over ₹1.75 crore in 30 years.

ii. Mobilizing Household Savings for Productive Investments
India's household savings are estimated at nearly 30% of GDP, but a large portion remains parked in low-productivity assets.
If 25% of Indians participate in capital markets:
- More savings flow into businesses and infrastructure.
- Companies gain access to lower-cost capital.
- Dependence on bank financing reduces.
- Economic growth becomes more investment driven.

iii. Financing India's Growth Ambitions
India's aspiration to become a USD 25–30 trillion economy by 2047 will require trillions of dollars in investment. A broad investor base can provide a significant portion of this capital.

iv. Reducing Dependence on Physical Assets
Indian households traditionally favour:
- Real estate
- Gold
- Fixed deposits

While these assets have value, excessive concentration can:
- Reduce liquidity.
- Limit diversification.
- Lock capital in unproductive assets.

Greater participation in capital markets would create a more balanced asset allocation and improve overall capital efficiency.

v. Enhancing Financial Inclusion
Capital market participation should be viewed as the next phase of financial inclusion.
India has successfully achieved:

- Bank account inclusion through the Jan Dhan initiative.
- Digital payment inclusion through UPI.

The next milestone is Investment Inclusion: A developed economy requires citizens not only to save but also to invest.

vi. Strengthening Retirement Security
India's population is aging, and traditional family support structures are evolving.
Capital market participation can:
- Supplement pension income.
- Reduce retirement dependency.
- Promote long-term financial planning.
- Improve financial resilience among senior citizens.

vii. Supporting Entrepreneurship and Innovation
Every investor becomes a potential partner in economic growth.
Higher participation results in:
- Greater availability of risk capital.
- More funding for startups and SMEs.
- Increased innovation and productivity.
- Expansion of India's entrepreneurial ecosystem.

viii. Increasing Economic Stability
A strong domestic investor base reduces reliance on foreign portfolio investments.
Benefits include:
- Lower market volatility.
- Better absorption of global shocks.
- Stronger resilience during periods of foreign capital outflows.
- Greater financial sovereignty.

ix. Deepening Capital Markets
With 25% participation, India could become one of the largest retail-investor markets in the world.
Potential outcomes:
- Larger market capitalization.
- Greater liquidity.
- Improved price discovery.
- Development of bond, ETF, REIT, InvIT, and SME markets.

x. Creating a Nation of Owners Rather Than Savers
Capital markets allow citizens to participate directly in the growth of Indian enterprises. When individuals own shares, mutual funds, or ETFs, they become stakeholders in India's economic success.

4. Learning from Global Markets

Countries with high levels of capital market participation have typically achieved three objectives simultaneously:
1. Strong financial literacy
2. Retirement-linked investing
3. Easy access through digital platforms and collective investment vehicles

India can draw valuable lessons from these experiences while designing its own model suited to its demographic and economic realities.

Country	Approximate Participation in Capital Markets	Key Driver
United States	50–60% of households own stocks directly or indirectly	Retirement accounts (401(k)s), mutual funds, ETFs
Australia	51% of adults hold investments beyond their primary residence and pension assets	Superannuation system and investment culture
United Kingdom	37% of adults hold investment products	Tax-efficient investment accounts and pension participation
Canada	35–45% (estimated through pension and investment account ownership)	Strong pension and mutual fund ecosystem
India	Less than 15% of population participates directly in capital markets	Growing digital adoption but low financial literacy

Lessons from the United States
The United States has one of the highest levels of stock ownership globally. More than half of U.S. households own stocks either directly or through retirement accounts, mutual funds, and ETFs. The expansion of retirement savings plans such as 401(k)s has been a major driver of participation.
Key Takeaways for India
- Link certain percentage of retirement savings to capital markets.
- Encourage long-term SIP-based investing.
- Expand low-cost index funds and ETFs.
- Promote employer-sponsored investment programs.

Lessons from Australia
Australia's compulsory superannuation system has created a nation of investors. The ASX Australian Investor Study 2023 found that 51% of Australian adults hold investments outside their primary residence.
Key Takeaways for India
- Strengthen pension participation.
- Encourage automatic retirement contributions.
- Promote long-term equity ownership through retirement products.
- Increase participation among women and younger investors.

Lessons from the United Kingdom
According to the UK's Financial Lives Survey, 37% of adults held investment products in 2022, up from 29% in 2017. Younger investors have increasingly entered the market through digital investment platforms.
Key Takeaways for India
- Expand digital-first investing solutions.
- Promote micro-investing products.
- Simplify onboarding and disclosures.
- Encourage tax-efficient long-term investing.

What Makes Markets Successful?
A common pattern seen is

The India Opportunity
India has already built:
- Aadhaar
- UPI
- DigiLocker
- Jan Dhan Accounts
- Digital KYC infrastructure

The next phase is to create a similar ecosystem for investing. If India can move from less than 15% participation today to 25% by 2047, it would add approximately 250–300 million new investors, creating one of the largest retail investor ecosystems in the world and significantly expanding the pool of domestic capital available for economic development.

5. Key Barriers to Participation
Despite significant progress in financial inclusion, digital infrastructure, and investor awareness, capital market participation in India remains relatively low compared to developed economies. Understanding and addressing these barriers is essential to achieving the goal of 25% population participation by 2047.

i. Financial Literacy Deficit
The most significant barrier is the lack of understanding of basic financial concepts.
Many individuals:
- Do not understand the difference between saving and investing.
- Are unfamiliar with concepts such as risk, return, diversification, and compounding.
- View stock markets as speculative rather than wealth-creating platforms.
- Lack awareness of mutual funds, SIPs, ETFs, bonds, REITs, and pension products.

Impact
- Low confidence in investing.
- Preference for traditional savings products.
- Susceptibility to misinformation and fraud.

ii. Cultural Preference for Physical Assets
Indian households have historically preferred:
- Real Estate
- Gold
- Bank Deposits
- Chit Funds and Informal Savings

These assets are perceived as:
- Tangible
- Safe
- Familiar
- Easily understood

Challenge
Generations of wealth preservation through physical assets make behavioural change slow and difficult.

iii. Fear of Losses and Market Volatility
Many first-time investors enter markets during bull runs and exit during corrections.
Common perceptions include:
- "Stock markets are gambling."
- "Only experts make money."
- "Markets are too risky."

Result
Temporary market declines often discourage long-term participation.

iv. Limited Penetration Beyond Urban Centres
Investor participation remains concentrated in major cities.
Challenges include:
- Limited access to investor education.
- Lower awareness of financial products.
- Fewer financial intermediaries.
- Language barriers.

v. Low Disposable Income
A large section of the population focuses on:
- Daily consumption needs.
- Education expenses.
- Healthcare costs.
- Housing requirements.

For many households, investing appears to be a luxury rather than a necessity.
Reality
Even small SIPs can create wealth, but this awareness remains limited.

vi. Product Complexity
The investment ecosystem offers numerous products:
- Equities
- Mutual Funds
- ETFs
- Bonds
- PMS
- AIFs
- REITs
- InvITs

For first-time investors, the variety often creates confusion rather than empowerment.
Consequence, decision paralysis leads many individuals to avoid investing altogether.

vii. Trust Deficit
Past experiences involving:
- Ponzi schemes
- Unregulated investment products
- Mis-selling
- Market scams

have created scepticism among potential investors.
Key Concern
Investors often struggle to distinguish regulated products from fraudulent schemes.

viii. Inadequate Retirement Planning Culture
Unlike many developed economies, retirement investing is not deeply ingrained in financial planning.
Issues
- Dependence on family support.
- Limited pension coverage.
- Short-term investment mindset.

Impact
Lower participation in long-term wealth-building products.

ix. Gender Gap in Investing
Women represent one of the largest untapped investor segments.
Barriers include:
- Lower financial confidence.
- Limited access to investment education.
- Lower participation in financial decision-making.
- Risk aversion due to social and economic factors.

Opportunity
Increasing women's participation could significantly accelerate overall market participation.

x. Language and Communication Barriers
Most investment communication remains concentrated in English and a few regional languages.
India's diversity requires:
- Vernacular content.
- Regional-language platforms.
- Voice-enabled investing solutions.
- Localized investor education.

xi. Limited Exposure to Capital Markets in Education
Schools and colleges rarely teach:
- Personal finance
- Investing
- Wealth management
- Capital market fundamentals

As a result, many individuals begin their earning careers without basic investment knowledge.

xii. Short-Term Mindset
Many investors focus on:
- Quick profits
- Trading gains
- Market timing

instead of:
- Long-term investing
- Compounding
- Asset allocation

This often leads to poor experiences and early exits from markets.

6. National Target: 400 million Investors by 2047

The Strategic Imperative
India's aspiration to become a developed economy by 2047 will require a substantial increase in domestic capital formation. A broad-based investor ecosystem is essential to finance infrastructure, industrial growth, technological innovation, sustainability initiatives, and retirement security.
Assuming India's population reaches approximately 1.6 billion by 2047, achieving 25% capital market participation would translate into approximately 400 million active investors.
This would make India one of the largest investor markets globally and significantly deepen its capital markets.
Why 400 million Investors?
Current Position
India has witnessed remarkable growth in investor participation over the last decade. Thanks to the planning and efforts of Security and Exchange Board of India (SEBI), Stock Exchanges, Industry Bodies and Trade Associations and others.
- Demat accounts have crossed 200 million.

- SIP registrations continue to reach new highs.
- Retail participation in IPOs has increased substantially.
- Digital platforms have democratized investing.

However, active participation remains concentrated among a relatively small proportion of the population.

Vision 2047

Metric	2025 (App.)	2024 (Target)
Population	1.43 billion	1.60 billion
Capital Market Participants	120 million	400 million
Participation Rate	8 – 10%	25%
SIP Accounts	100+ million	400 million
Women Investors	25% of investor base	50% of new investor base

Growth Trajectory to 2047

The target requires adding approximately 280 million new investors over the next two decades.

Proposed Investor Growth Path

Sources of New Investor Growth

The next 280 million investors are likely to emerge from multiple segments.

Investor Expansion Framework

Segment	Potential Contribution
Tier II & III Cities	35%
Rural India	20%
Young Workforce	20%
Women Investors	15%
Retirement Investors	5%
Senior Citizens	5%

Economic Impact of 400 million Investors

Household Savings Mobilization

Assume:

- 400 million investors
- Average annual investment of ₹25,000

Annual capital mobilization: ₹10 trillion (₹10 lakh crore) per year

If average annual investment rises to ₹50,000: ₹20 trillion (₹20 lakh crore) per year

This capital can be deployed towards:

- Infrastructure financing
- Manufacturing growth

- Startup funding
- Green energy transition
- SME expansion

Contribution to GDP Growth
A larger investor base contributes to, Higher Capital Formation
More household savings are transformed into productive investments.

Reduced Dependence on Foreign Capital
A strong domestic investor base helps absorb market volatility and external shocks.

Enhanced Financial Stability
Markets supported by domestic investors tend to exhibit greater resilience during periods of global uncertainty.

Wealth Creation
Households participate directly in the growth of Indian enterprises, creating a virtuous cycle of investment and consumption.

Key Milestones

Phase I (2025–2030)
Target: 180 million Investors
Focus Areas:
- Financial literacy campaigns
- SIP penetration
- Digital onboarding

Phase II (2030–2035)
Target: 250 million Investors
Focus Areas:
- Retirement investing
- Women investors
- Regional expansion

Phase III (2035–2040)
Target: 320 million Investors
Focus Areas:
- Rural participation
- Pension-linked investing
- AI-enabled investment platforms

Phase IV (2040–2047)
Target: 400 million Investors
Focus Areas:
- Universal investment access
- Capital market inclusion in every household
- Mature long-term investment culture

Key Success Metrics
To monitor progress, policymakers may track:

Indicator	2025	2047 Target
Active Investors	120 million	400 million
SIP Accounts	100 million	400 million
Women Investors	25%	50%
Rural Investors	15%	35%
Financial Literacy Rate	27%	75%
Household Savings in Capital Markets	10%	35%

Strategic Recommendation
India may consider launching a national mission similar to:
- Pradhan Mantri Jan Dhan Yojana
- Digital India
- UPI Revolution

under the banner "Capital Market Inclusion Mission 2047"
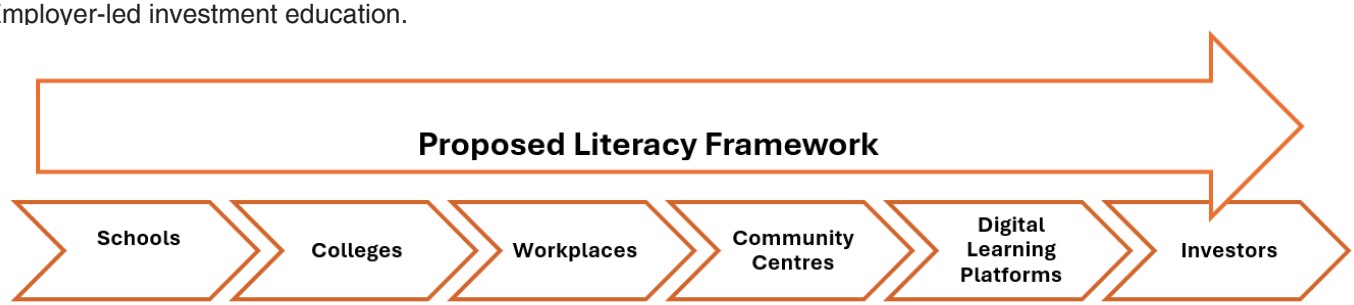
The mission should bring together:
- Securities and Exchange Board of India
- National Stock Exchange of India
- BSE Limited
- Mutual Funds
- Industry Associations
- Depositories
- Banks
- Educational Institutions
- FinTech Platforms



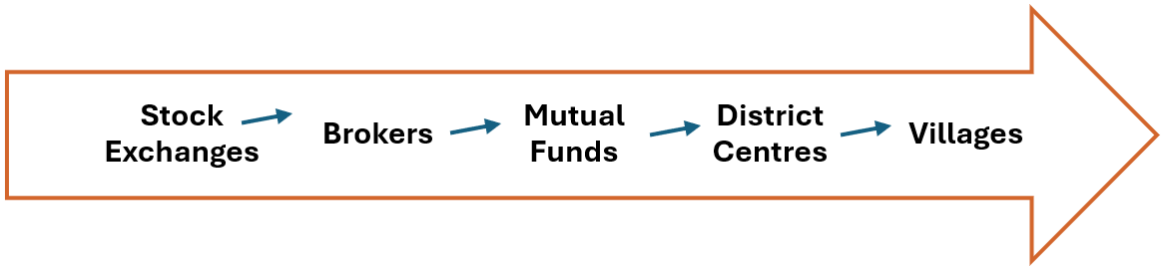
to create a coordinated national framework for investor expansion.

8. Strategic Pillar I: National Financial Literacy Mission
Objective
Make capital market education a national movement.

School Level
Introduce:
- Savings and investments
- Power of compounding
- Mutual funds
- Basic stock market concepts

College Level
Mandatory financial literacy modules.

Workplace Programs
Employer-led investment education.



9. Strategic Pillar II: SIP Revolution 2.0
The Systematic Investment Plan (SIP) has been India's greatest financial inclusion innovation.
Future Enhancements
- ₹100 SIPs
- Daily SIPs
- UPI-based micro-investments
- Goal-based investing

Target
100 million SIP accounts today to 400 million by 2047.

10. Strategic Pillar III: Regional Expansion
Investor penetration remains concentrated.
Opportunity
Large untapped markets:
- Tier-II cities
- Tier-III cities
- Rural India

Regional Outreach Model

11. Strategic Pillar IV: Technology Democratization
India possesses unique digital advantages.
Future Technologies
- AI investment assistants
- Voice-enabled investing
- Vernacular interfaces
- Mobile-first investing

Vision
Investing should become as simple as making a UPI payment.

12. Strategic Pillar V: Retirement-Linked Investing
A major reason for high participation in developed markets is pension investing.
Proposed Reforms
- Universal retirement accounts
- Auto-enrolment pension schemes
- Equity-oriented retirement funds

13. Strategic Pillar VI: Women Investors
Women represent one of the largest untapped investor segments.
Key Initiatives
- Women-focused financial literacy campaigns
- Tax incentives for long-term investments
- Women investor clubs
- Entrepreneurship-linked investing

Target
Women to account for 50% of new investors added by 2047.

14. Strategic Pillar VII: Simplification of Products
Investment products should be simplified into three categories:
Beginner
- Index funds
- Target-date funds
- Retirement funds

Intermediate
- Diversified equity funds
- ETFs
- Hybrid funds

Advanced
- Direct equities
- REITs
- InvITs
- Corporate bonds

15. Strategic Pillar VIII: Investor Protection
Participation increases when trust increases.
Required Reforms
- Real-time fraud detection
- AI surveillance systems
- Simplified disclosures
- Faster grievance resolution

Key institutions including Securities and Exchange Board of India, Stock Exchanges, and other Market Institutional Investors will play a critical role.

16. Strategic Pillar IX: Tax and Policy Incentives
Potential Measures
1. Enhanced tax benefits for SIPs.
2. Long-term wealth accounts.
3. Retirement-linked investment deductions.
4. Incentives for first-time investors.

These measures can accelerate adoption among middle-income households.

17. Strategic Pillar X: Capital Market Inclusion Mission
India successfully executed:
- Jan Dhan Mission
- Digital India
- UPI Revolution

A similar national mission could be launched "Capital Market Inclusion Mission 2047"
Goals
- One investor in every household
- 400 million investors
- Universal financial literacy
- Strong retirement savings culture

18. Expected Economic Impact
Household Wealth Creation
Assume:
- 400 million participants
- Average annual investment ₹25,000

Annual inflows: ₹10 trillion (₹10 lakh crore)
This would significantly strengthen:
- Equity markets
- Bond markets
- Infrastructure financing
- Startup ecosystems

19. Roadmap to 2047
Phase I (2025–2030)
- National literacy campaign
- Expansion of SIP ecosystem
- Regional investor outreach

Phase II (2030–2040)
- Retirement investing revolution
- AI-powered advisory systems
- Universal financial education

Phase III (2040–2047)
- 25% population participation
- Deep retail ownership culture
- Globally competitive investor ecosystem

20. Conclusion
Achieving 25% capital market participation is not merely a financial-sector objective; it is a national economic development imperative. India's future growth will require mobilization of household savings into productive investments that finance infrastructure, innovation, manufacturing, entrepreneurship, and sustainable development.
The path to 400 million investors rests on ten foundational pillars:
1. Financial literacy
2. SIP expansion
3. Regional outreach
4. Technology democratization
5. Retirement investing
6. Women investors
7. Product simplification
8. Investor protection
9. Tax incentives
10. National capital market inclusion mission

If implemented effectively, India can create the world's largest and most inclusive investor ecosystem by 2047, transforming millions of households from savers into long-term.

The Changing Taxation of Buy-backs in India

Evolution of Share Buy-backs

1. Share buy-backs, also known as share repurchases, are corporate actions in which a company reacquires its own outstanding shares from existing shareholders, reducing the number of shares available in the market. As a capital management tool, buy-backs enable companies to optimise their capital structure, enhance shareholder value, and deploy surplus cash in a tax-efficient manner.
2. Historically, dividends were the primary mechanism for distributing corporate profits, while share buy-backs were relatively uncommon and, in many jurisdictions, restricted due to concerns over potential market manipulation. A significant shift occurred in 1982 when the U.S. Securities and Exchange Commission introduced Rule 10b-18[1], providing a safe harbour for share repurchases and regulatory certainty for companies undertaking buy-backs.
3. Following this development, buy-backs emerged as a major means of returning capital to shareholders. Between 2003 and 2012, S&P 500 companies allocated approximately 54% of their net earnings to share repurchases, compared to 37% distributed as dividends[2]. The growing acceptance of buy-backs was also reflected globally, with jurisdictions such as the United Kingdom, Japan and India introducing statutory frameworks by the late 1990s permitting share repurchases, subject to safeguards for shareholder protection and market integrity.
4. In India, buy-backs were originally prohibited under the Companies Act, 1956[3] ("CA, 1956"). Recognising their importance as a legitimate corporate finance and capital restructuring tool, the legislature introduced enabling provisions in 1998[4], permitting companies to repurchase their shares and empowering the Securities and Exchange Board of India ("SEBI") to establish a regulatory framework for such transactions. Since then, buy-backs have become a widely used mechanism for capital allocation, enabling companies to optimise capital structures, return surplus cash to shareholders, and signal confidence in their future prospects.

Corporate and Regulatory Framework Governing Share Buy-backs in India

5. Currently, share buy-backs in India are governed by the Companies Act, 2013 ("CA, 2013") and the Securities and Exchange Board of India (Buy-Back of Securities) Regulations, 2018 ("Buy-back Regulations"), which prescribe conditions for undertaking buy-backs, including limits on the quantum of repurchases, approval requirements, permissible funding sources, disclosure obligations, and post buy-back leverage thresholds. SEBI has also strengthened the regulatory framework in recent years by enhancing transparency requirements and increasing the minimum utilisation threshold for open-market buy-backs from 50% to 75%[5].
6. Section 68 of the CA, 2013 sets key conditions for buy-back, including a 25% cap on paid-up capital and free reserves, restriction to fully paid-up securities, and a post buy-back debt-equity ratio generally not exceeding 2:1. The buy-back must be completed within one year of the approving resolution. The law also mandates the transfer of the nominal value of repurchased shares to the Capital Redemption Reserve[6] and the extinguishment of bought-back shares, thereby balancing corporate flexibility in capital management with the protection of shareholder and creditor interests.

Taxation of Buy-backs in India

I. Pre-2013 Era- Capital Gains Tax in Shareholders' Hands

7. Historically, Section 77 of the CA, 1956, prohibited companies from purchasing their own shares to preserve capital. This position changed in 1998 with the introduction of section 77A, which permitted buy-backs. To address tax implications, section 46A was inserted[7] in the Income-tax Act, 1961 (applicable till March 31, 2026) ("1961 Act").

Under this regime, buy-back proceeds were treated as capital gains in the hands of shareholders. At the same time, section 2(22)(iv) of the 1961 Act excluded such payments from the definition of "dividend." As a result, the tax liability rested entirely with the shareholders based on their holding period and cost of acquisition.

II. Buy-back Tax (Section 115QA) Payable by Unlisted Companies (2013 amendment)

8. As companies began favouring buy-backs over dividends to avoid Dividend Distribution Tax ("DDT"), the Government intervened to address this perceived tax avoidance. Unlisted companies, in particular, were using buy-backs instead of payment of dividends in order to avoid payment of DDT, particularly where the capital gains arising to the shareholders are either not chargeable to tax or are taxable at a lower rate.
9. The Finance Act, 2013, introduced section 115QA in the 1961 Act, mandating an additional income tax of 20% (plus surcharge and cess) on the distributed income of unlisted companies on buy-back of shares. Distributed income was defined as the consideration paid by the company on buy-back, minus the amount originally received upon the issuance of shares. Once this tax was paid, the proceeds were exempt in the hands of the shareholders under section 10(34A) of the 1961 Act.

III. Extension of Buy-back Tax to Listed Companies (2019 amendment)

10. By 2019, the Government observed that listed companies were also adopting buy-back strategies to provide tax-efficient exits to shareholders. Consequently, the Finance (No. 2) Act, 2019, extended the 115QA tax regime to listed companies, creating uniform taxation for all corporate buy-backs[8].

IV. Buy-back Proceeds as Deemed Dividends (2024 amendment)

11. The Finance (No. 2) Act, 2024, introduced a significant shift, characterising buy-back proceeds as deemed dividends[9] taxable in the hands of shareholders at the applicable rates. It effectively discontinued the buy-back distribution tax under Section 115QA and introduced a new framework in which the consideration received by shareholders on buybacks was treated as deemed dividend income. The Memorandum to the Finance (No. 2) Bill, 2024 states that, since dividends have been taxable in shareholders' hands following the abolition of DDT in 2020, buy-backs, being a similar mode of distributing accumulated reserves, should also be taxed in the hands of shareholders.
12. As a result, such receipts became taxable in the hands of shareholders under the head "Income from Other Sources[10]". Resident shareholders were required to pay tax on this income at their applicable slab rates, while non-resident shareholders became subject to withholding tax, subject to relief under relevant tax treaties[11].
13. Further, to address the potential inequity of taxing the gross receipt without reducing the investment cost, the amendment also provided that the shareholder would be entitled to claim the cost of acquisition of the shares as a capital loss. This loss could then be set off against any other capital gains or carried forward in accordance with the provisions of the Income-tax law.

V. Returning to Capital Gains (2026 amendment)

14. The Finance Act, 2026 amended[12] Section 69 of the Income-tax Act, 2025 ("2025 Act") by restoring the taxation of buy-back proceeds as capital gains instead of dividends. As a result, shareholders are taxed only on the net gain (i.e., buy-back consideration less the cost of acquisition), addressing concerns under the 2024 deemed-dividend regime where tax was imposed on the gross buy-back proceeds. Significantly, the amendment introduces a differentiated tax framework for promoters and promoter companies, under which gains arising from buy-backs are subject to an effective tax rate of 30% in the hands of promoters and 22% in the case of promoter companies.

15. The table below summarises the evolution of the taxability of share buy-backs in India:

S.No.	Time Frame	Relevant Provision	Type of Securities	Tax Treatment at Company Level	Tax Treatment for Shareholders & Applicable Rates[13]
1.	Up to May 31, 2013	Section 46A of the 1961 Act	Listed & unlisted shares, and specified securities	No tax liability at the company level	Taxed as Capital Gains. ➢ Long-term Capital Gains ("LTCG") ▪ Unlisted Shares taxed @20%; ▪ Listed Shares exempt under Section 10(38) (subject to Securities Transaction Tax) ➢ Short-term Capital Gains ("STCG") ▪ Unlisted Shares taxed at slab rates; ▪ Listed Shares taxed @15% under Section 111A

2.	June 01, 2013 – July 04, 2019	Section 115QA of the 1961 Act (introduced)	Unlisted shares	Buy-back Tax ("BBT") payable @20% (plus surcharge and cess)	Exempt under Section 10(34A) of the 1961 Act
3.	July 05, 2019 – September 30, 2024	Section 115QA (extended to listed companies)	Listed and unlisted shares	BBT payable @20% (plus surcharge and cess)	Exempt under Section 10(34A) of the 1961 Act
4.	October 01, 2024 – March 31, 2026	Section 2(22)(f) + withdrawal of Section 115QA of the 1961 Act	Listed and unlisted shares	No company-level taxation	Taxable as deemed dividend at applicable slab rates under "Income from Other Sources"
5.	April 1, 2026, onwards	Section 69 of the 2025 Act	Listed and unlisted shares	No company-level taxation	Taxable as capital gains: ➢ Non-Promoters: STCG @20% and LTCG @12.5% ➢ Promoter- Domestic Companies: 22% ➢ Promoter- Others: 30%

16. Further, shift in the domestic characterization of buy-back proceeds has implications under tax treaties, particularly in determining whether such receipts are governed by the Dividend Article or the Capital Gains Article.

An Analysis under the Tax Treaty Framework

17. The Finance Act, 2026 reshapes the treaty analysis of buy-back transactions by restoring the capital gains character of buy-back proceeds and reversing the deemed-dividend regime introduced in 2024. As a buy-back involves the extinguishment of shareholder rights and constitutes an "alienation" of property, the amendment aligns domestic law more closely with the legal and economic substance of the transaction and strengthens the application of the Capital Gains Article under tax treaties. However, the precise treaty outcome continues to depend on the wording of the relevant treaty. While the 2024 deemed-dividend regime prompted non-resident shareholders to invoke the Dividend Article to access reduced withholding tax rates, the 2026 amendment shifts the analysis back to capital gains, necessitating a treaty-specific examination of the applicable provisions:

(i) India-UK Tax Treaty: Previously, since domestic law treated buy-backs as dividends, they could fall under Article 11(3)[14] of the India-UK tax treaty, which includes items subject to the same tax treatment as income from shares; accordingly, the tax rate applicable to Dividends under the tax treaty would apply to buy-back consideration received by a non-resident shareholder.

After the 2026 amendment, since the domestic law itself treats buy-backs as capital gains, the Capital Gains Article (Article 14[15]) would likely prevail, allowing India to tax these gains strictly in accordance with its domestic law.

(ii) India-Mauritius Tax Treaty: Even under the 2024 regime, there was a strong argument that buy-back proceeds fell outside Article 10 (Dividends) of the India-Mauritius tax treaty. Article 10(4) defines the term "dividends" to mean income from shares or other corporate rights which is subjected to the same taxation treatment as income from shares under the laws of the State of which the company making the distribution is a resident. Since buy-back consideration is received on the extinguishment of shareholder rights and not by virtue of any continuing corporate right, it could be argued that such proceeds are more appropriately characterised under Article 13 (Capital Gains).

Following the Finance Act, 2026, the treaty position is considerably clearer. As domestic law now treats buy-back proceeds as capital gains, they should be governed by Article 13 of the India-Mauritius tax treaty. Accordingly, while the 2024 regime gave rise to uncertainty in characterisation, the 2026 amendment reinforces the capital gains treatment of buy-back transactions.

(iii) India-US Tax Treaty: Even under the erstwhile regime, there was a strong argument that buy-back proceeds did not qualify as "dividends" under Article 10(3) of the India-US tax treaty, which defines dividends as income from shares or other corporate rights subject to the same taxation treatment as income from shares. Since buy-back consideration arises from the extinguishment of shareholder rights, it could arguably fall outside the Dividend Article. However, the applicability of Article 13 (Capital Gains) was also uncertain, as the treaty does not define the term "alienation".

After the 2026 amendment, because domestic law itself treats buy-back proceeds as capital gains, there is a stronger basis for characterising such proceeds under Article 13 of the India-US tax treaty.

Conclusion: A Return to First Principles, But Not Yet to Certainty

18. The Finance Act, 2026 marks a welcome return to first principles in the taxation of share buy-backs. By abandoning the deemed dividend regime introduced in 2024 and restoring capital gains treatment, the legislature has realigned tax outcomes with the legal and economic nature of a buy-back as an extinguishment of shareholder rights. The amendment permits taxation on a net basis by deducting the acquisition cost; it reduces treaty characterisation disputes, and generally restores a more coherent and internationally aligned framework.

19. However, the reform must be viewed against the backdrop of India's evolving buy-back tax regime. The shift from capital gains taxation to a company-level buy-back tax, to deemed dividend treatment, and now back to capital gains within a relatively short period reflects a degree of policy volatility undermining certainty for investors. Frequent legislative changes require repeated reassessment of distribution strategies, tax costs, and treaty positions, increasing compliance burdens and reducing predictability.
20. The impact has been particularly significant for foreign investors. While the 2026 amendment substantially mitigates treaty characterisation challenges due to the 2024 regime, some uncertainty remains because the treatment of buy-back proceeds as capital gains continues to depend largely on individual treaty interpretation, rather than on an express statutory provision. In this regard, a model solution may be found in the FPI regime, wherein section 2(14) of the Income-tax Act conclusively characterises securities held by FPIs as capital assets. A similar deeming provision for buy-back consideration could strengthen certainty and reduce litigation by avoiding treaty-specific characterisation.
21. Ultimately, the 2026 reforms represent a significant improvement in both principle and policy design. Yet, for investors, certainty is often as important as the substantive tax outcome itself. The long-term success of the regime will therefore depend not only on the restoration of capital gains treatment but also on the government's ability to provide a stable, predictable framework free from further oscillations.

Indian equities – Emerging from the West Asia crisis

The West Asia crisis has laid bare India's external-sector vulnerability, with nearly 87% of the nation's annual crude oil requirement being met through imports. While India also manufactures and re-exports petroleum products, the net oil import bill stood at ~USD 122bn in FY25 (3.1% of GDP). The external sector seems to be bearing the brunt, with a wider trade deficit, amplified risks to Gulf remittances and potential FPI outflows weighing on the country's current account and clouding the broader BoP outlook. Also, it begins to restrain demand as prices rise. Corporate profitability also takes a hit, as fuel and raw material costs for most companies surge. The spike in crude oil would also be inflationary, as the assigned weight of petrol, diesel and LPG is higher in the new CPI series, at 6.8% (3.6% in earlier series); although, the impact hinges on the extent of pass-through of global oil prices to domestic fuel prices.

The West Asia crisis is, at its core, an energy shock. Evaluating the sources and uses of energy is, therefore, central to gauging its impact on sectors and stocks. India's total final consumption (TFC) – aggregate energy consumed by end users – reached 25,480 petajoules in FY25, with oil products and natural gas making up 40% and 9%, respectively, of the energy supply; coal and electricity contributed the remaining ~51%. TFC excludes the consumption of energy producers and transmission losses. Industrial, transport and residential sectors are the dominant end-consumers of oil products, while transport and non-energy use like fertilisers drive natural gas consumption. So far, the conflict has disrupted supply rather than demand; therefore, against escalating oil prices, companies highly dependent on oil and gas inputs bore the heaviest toll. From a supply perspective, demand for coal and electricity will likely rise, alongside higher realisations for upstream oil companies.

Opportunity in crisis: Indian equities have a strong negative correlation with oil prices, as it spikes above the USD 90–100/bbl level. The previous instance of the negative correlation between crude prices and NIFTY50 was witnessed in 2022, when oil prices shot past and stayed beyond USD 100/bbl for 3–4 months, spurred by the Russia-Ukraine conflict, which threatened to take away Russia's oil from the global supply. The resulting volatility (NIFTY50 fell ~10%) created the foundation for the big equity rally seen over CY23. Similarly, during the West Asia crisis, the NIFTY50 dropped ~12% and is again creating grounds for ascension.

Despite overarching macro headwinds, recent data points have been pleasantly surprising. These include: 1) RBI announcing a slew of measures to attract foreign flows into debt instruments. 2) Q4FY26 GDP growth of 7.8%, led by gross fixed capital formation. 3) Q4FY26 current account surplus driven by services exports and remittances. 4) Crude oil prices receding to below USD 90/bbl due to positive developments in US and Iran negotiations.

Profit cycle continues to expand as profit after tax (PAT)/GDP rises to 5.7% in FY26

Reported PAT in FY26 for the listed space approached the INR 20trn mark, or 5.7% of GDP, with loss pools shrinking to a record 0.2% of GDP. Aggregate market cap (MCAP) to GDP ratio has largely tracked the PAT/GDP line, going by data for more than two decades; thus, indicating that the profit trajectory is the strongest signal for stock prices amidst the noise created by conflicting news flows—especially in the current environment of heightened geopolitical risks. For Q4FY26, the NSE500 universe's profit growth was ~12%, driven by broader markets, while for the NIFTY50, profit growth stood at ~5%. From an outlook perspective, the NIFTY50 index's FY27 profit growth could be ~14%, potentially riding on industrials, commodities, financials and discretionary consumption.

Overall, Q4FY26 results have been better than expected, with robust volume and credit growth for manufacturers and lenders. Demand outlook has also been largely positive despite the conflict in the west.

Profit/GDP likely to breach the previous peak of 6.4%

Along with improving earnings growth, the lower nominal GDP number for FY26 in the revised base year (2022-23) series helped boost the PAT/GDP number. PAT/GDP of 5.7% in FY26 was at a 15-year high and approaching the previous peak of 6.4% of GDP seen in FY08.

A combination of high financial leverage and operating leverage going into an economic recession is the 'perfect storm' for peak corporate profit levels as seen during FY08, which is not evident currently.

From a credit cycle perspective, corporate re-leveraging appears to be in the nascent stages of a recovery and is unlikely to peak anytime soon. In parallel, India Inc's NPAs and net/debt equity sit at historical lows. Also, there is scope for further operating leverage, as capacity utilisation—though improved—could gain further.

Formalisation of economy allows sustained higher peak for PAT/GDP: Drawing on examples in advanced economies like the US, the corporate profit/GDP ratio—while exhibiting cyclical moves—continues to hit new highs over time, as the corporate sector captures an incremental share of the overall economy.

Banks are already at higher PAT/GDP levels compared to the previous peak – aside of the early stages of a credit cycle recovery and NPA being at historical lows. The share of NBFCs and other financial services is on a structural uptrend.

Corporate capex approaches INR 13 trn, transforming from maintenance to growth

Listed corporate capex (excluding financials) for FY26 stood at ~INR 12.6trn, which includes cash spent on plant, property and equipment (PPE), plus net acquisitions (acquisitions minus divestitures). Excluding acquisitions and divestitures, which tend to be lumpy, core capex on PPE stood at INR 12trn (YoY 14% growth vs. nominal GDP growth of 9%). Another encouraging trend is that the aggregate 'capex/depreciation' ratio has reached ~1.9x, indicating that capex has now moved beyond the maintenance capex range of ~1x. Separately, the 'CFO (cashflow from operations)/capex' ratio is still elevated at 1.5x. Although this is down from its peak of 2x, it indicates that India Inc is still generating ample cashflow to fund its capex requirements. However, the corollary to this is that credit demand for funding capex growth will likely continue to be lacklustre until the 'CFO/capex' ratio drops closer to the 1x mark.

AI infrastructure capex euphoria largely missing in the listed space—a potential hedge, if AI euphoria dissipates

Largest capex driving sectors (> INR 1trn) in the listed corporate space continues to be dominated by utilities (INR 2.3trn), energy ex-Reliance (INR 1.5trn), industrials (INR 1.3trn), Reliance (INR 1.2trn), metals (INR 1.1trn) and auto (INR 1.1trn).

New-age sectors' capex outlook remains bright

Data centre capex outlook continues to look bright, driven by a mix of domestic listed companies and global hyperscalers, such as Bharti, L&T, Reliance, AdaniConnex, Microsoft and AWS. Other areas of high growth in investments include quick commerce, EVs, green energy and GCCs.

Broad-based corporate capex

The number of companies with a capex of more than INR 10bn reached an all-time high of 168 stocks vs. the previous peak of 91 companies in 2012.

However, in USD terms, while the number of companies with a capex of more than USD 100mn has also reached an all-time high of 190 companies, the figure remains close to its earlier peak of 174 seen in 2012. Furthermore, from an aggregate capex perspective, while the figure in INR terms has more than doubled from its previous peak in 2012 (~INR 6trn), the aggregate capex in USD terms—currently at USD 143bn—is not significantly higher than the previous peak of USD 131bn in 2012.

Sectors leading the rise in the number of companies with a minimum capex of USD 100mn include not only asset-heavy sectors such as industrials, metals, energy and utilities, but also relatively asset-light sectors such as automobiles and components, consumption, healthcare and IT.

FPI casting a wider net, but likely being drowned out by selling in concentrated holdings

Aggregate FPI holding of Indian stocks has ebbed to ~15% currently, compared to ~20% a decade ago. Bulk of the retreat was triggered post 2022 (Russia-Ukraine conflict), and coincided with the bottom formation of US Big Tech stocks. Upon closer examination of the FPI flows, we observe a peculiarity – during this drawdown phase in India holdings, there has been an expansion in the number of stocks, from ~900 to ~1,300 currently; where, FPIs have invested more than 1%. On the other hand, the top stocks held by FPIs in 2022, which contributed ~41% to their India portfolio, have seen that contribution dip sharply to 21% currently. Anecdotally, FPIs have sharply increased their holdings in high-growth avenues, cutting across legacy and emerging sectors.

The aforementioned trends indicate that FPI investments in India are becoming broad-based driven by growth opportunities. But, the copious selling in the erstwhile concentrated positions is skewing the overall picture. Nevertheless, recent trends indicate that the overall selling is also abating, as the West Asia crisis recedes.

Price in India

Promoting India Commodity Prices for Steering the Nation's Next Growth Phase

Debojyoti Dey

Every phase of industrial growth in history has been supported by access to essential commodities. The metals that build infrastructure, the energy that powers factories, the agricultural inputs that feed populations — commodities are the circulatory system of any growing economy. What distinguishes the world's most economically consequential nations is not merely their consumption of commodities, but their influence over how those commodities are priced.

India today stands at a defining crossroads in this regard.

India is already among the world's largest consumers of several critical commodities. The country consumes approximately 165 million tonnes of steel annually, making it the world's second-largest consumer. India accounts for nearly 25 percent of global gold demand — over 700 tonnes per year — driven by jewellery, investment, and cultural consumption patterns that are deeply embedded in the economy and society. India is the third-largest consumer of crude oil globally, consuming about 5 million barrels per day. In base metals, India's consumption footprint is expanding rapidly in line with infrastructure development, renewable energy deployment, and manufacturing growth.

Despite this scale of physical participation, India remains largely a price-taker in global commodity markets. Prices for the commodities that Indian businesses consume, produce, and trade are set in London, Chicago, New York, and even Shanghai. Indian manufacturers, importers, and producers use prices generated by markets that often reflect conditions in other economies rather than India's own supply-demand realities.

The concept of 'Price in India' addresses this structural gap. It is not about rejecting international benchmarks — global commodity prices serve an important coordination function across supply chains. The opportunity is to develop and use credible, transparent domestic price discovery mechanisms that reflect India's growing economic weight: its physical consumption, production realities, quality standards, logistics structures, and financial market depth.

> India consumes 25% of the world's gold and is the world's second-largest steel consumer — yet prices for these commodities are set in London and Chicago. That is the gap 'Price in India' seeks to close.

As India accelerates its trajectory toward a developed economy, the absence of domestic commodity pricing influence becomes an increasingly significant gap — in risk management, in competitive pricing for manufacturers, and in the country's ability to shape the global commodity trade conversations that matter to its industrial future.

The Cost of Not Following Domestic Price Benchmarks

The absence of robust domestic commodity benchmarks, or not following such benchmarks where available, is not an abstract problem. It translates into measurable economic costs for Indian businesses every day.

Consider aluminium. India hosts some of the world's largest integrated aluminium smelting operations. Indian companies produce millions of tonnes of primary aluminium annually from Indian mines, through Indian refineries, to Indian smelters. Yet aluminium transactions in India are routinely priced against a European exchange benchmark — a price derived from its inventory positions in Rotterdam, Chicago, Korea or other warehouses. When that exchange's aluminium price spikes due to warehouse dynamics in Detroit or geopolitical developments in Russia that affect Russian exports to Europe, Indian manufacturers buying and selling aluminium face that volatility regardless of whether Indian domestic supply-demand fundamentals warrant it.

This basis risk — the difference between the global benchmark and actual domestic realities — represents a persistent cost for Indian industry. The presence of transparent exchange-traded price discovery mechanism for domestic aluminium, which discovers prices that fully reflect domestic fundamentals, makes the case for eschewing such costs.

Gold presents a different dimension of the same problem. India is the world's second-largest importer of gold. The import bill ran to approximately USD 72 billion during financial year 2025-26. Yet, a lot of transactions within India use prices at New York or London as references, translated at the prevailing dollar-rupee rate. That exclusive Indian factors such as seasonality associated with weddings, festivals etc. determine Indian prices, but are not reckoned in domestic transactions, indicate avoidable inefficiencies in market practices.

For agricultural commodities, the problem is particularly acute. Indian farmers and traders producing/ trading soybean or cotton are often refer to pricing signals from marketplaces in Chicago that may reflect American crop conditions, US biodiesel policy changes, or Argentine export taxes — factors that have limited bearing on the Madhya Pradesh soybean crop, or the ginning margins at a Gujarat ginning mill. Being unable or unwilling to access domestic price signals distorts investment decisions, supply chain planning, and risk management at every level of the agricultural value chain.

The cumulative cost of this dependence is difficult to quantify precisely, but it manifests in three ways: first, as unnecessary volatility exposure for Indian businesses; second, as sub-optimal risk management since hedging against a poorly correlated international benchmark provides incomplete protection, compelling hedging in costly international markets; and third, as lost opportunity to build the financial market depth that makes India's hedging markets globally influential.

Benchmarks, Infrastructure, and the Trust Foundation

A commodity price benchmark is only as credible as the physical delivery and quality infrastructure that underlies it. This is a fundamental principle of commodity market development that distinguishes durable benchmarks from fragile ones. The trading hubs and marketplaces whose prices have evolved as benchmarks historically emerged from their global network of approved warehouses, rigorous quality specifications, and a delivery mechanism that gave physical buyers genuine confidence of their quality standards. India's commodity market development therefore cannot lose sight of developing the physical infrastructure that supports benchmark credibility.

Warehouse infrastructure is the most critical element. India already has an accredited warehouse ecosystem operating under electronic negotiable warehouse receipt (e-NWR) frameworks through Warehousing Development and Regulatory Authority (WDRA). The WDRA framework provides a national system for standardised storage, quality testing, and electronic warehouse receipts that serve as collateral and settlement instruments.

Assaying and quality standardisation present another important dimension. Commodity markets require standardised quality definitions that allow participants to trade contracts with confidence about what they will receive. For metals, this means alignment with well-recognized quality standards. For agricultural commodities, it requires clear and enforceable grading systems that producers, traders, and processors can rely upon.

Recognizing the importance of superior indigenous quality standards for creation of domestic benchmarks, MCX has been creating and popularizing India Good Delivery (IGD) standards for multiple commodities. After the success with such standards for Gold and Lead, MCX recently published IGD standards for Silver, Aluminum, Copper and Zinc. Suppliers of these metals which meet these standards shall be empaneled by the Exchange, after due process of audit and scrutiny, and their goods are accepted as MCX Good Delivery for settlement of the respective Futures contracts.

Logistics connectivity — connecting commodity-producing regions with warehousing, processing, and port infrastructure through reliable transport systems — is the final link in the chain. Price discovery in commodity markets is most effective when the cost and efficiency of physical delivery are predictable. India's infrastructure investments under programs like the Gati Shakti National Master Plan and PM-Kisan logistics initiatives are gradually improving this connectivity, creating a more favourable environment for commodity market depth.

India's International Market Opportunity: From Consumer to Price Influencer

As India's economic weight in global commodity markets grows, there is a strategic opportunity to transition from being primarily a large consumer that absorbs international price signals to becoming an active participant in setting them.

This transition has both a domestic and an international dimension.

Domestically, the development of deep, liquid, and credible commodity derivatives contracts on Indian exchanges creates reference prices that Indian businesses can use for transactions, planning, and risk management. As MCX contracts have gained depth and popularity, domestic commodity transactions that are currently priced informally or against international benchmarks can increasingly use Exchange prices as reference rates. This process — the gradual adoption of domestic benchmarks by physical market participants — is how commodity price benchmarks establish themselves.

Apart from broad-basing participation by inclusion of all types of financial institutions, developing depth in commodity derivatives markets would also require education and awareness of market participants. Commodity markets create maximum economic value when their participants understand their fundamental purpose: transparent price discovery and efficient risk management. Expanding commodity market education — through industry engagements, university programs, exchange-led awareness initiatives, and financial intermediary training — is an investment in the quality of future market participation. Informed participants make better hedging decisions, contribute more meaningfully to price discovery, and are less susceptible to the misinformation that can damage market confidence.

Internationally, India's engagement requires trading platforms to connect domestic commodity ecosystems with global capital flows. Opening of India's commodity derivatives market to foreign participation – including, but not restricted to, Foreign Portfolio Investors (FPIs) – can establish this connection. After all, the increasingly free international trade in physical commodities need to be mirrored in freer inward movement of international capital in domestic commodity derivative markets, especially when capital outflows towards international commodity hedging and investment markets have progressively been liberalised.

Global comparisons offer instructive reference points: Singapore's LNG pricing initiatives have progressed by aligning with Asian demand realities. Shanghai's rise as a significant pricing centre for copper, iron ore, and other commodities over the past decade demonstrates that new benchmarks can establish themselves when they are backed by deep derivatives market with robust and transparent infrastructure and active institutional participation. India's commodity market development does not need to replicate any single model — but the underlying principle is consistent: focused development of commodities ecosystem through deepening derivatives market, broad-based institutional participation, and transparent and robust infrastructure are the foundations of price influence.

Conclusion: India's Commodity Market Moment

India's economic journey is entering its most consequential phase. The combination of expanding manufacturing capabilities, accelerating infrastructure development, growing energy demand, and rapid urbanisation will make India an even larger participant in global commodity markets over the coming decades. India's commodity consumption in steel, gold, crude oil, copper, and agricultural commodities will continue to grow in absolute terms and as a share of global markets.

This growth creates both a necessity and an opportunity.

The necessity is stronger domestic price discovery and efficient risk management tools that work for Indian businesses, price signals that reflect Indian realities, and financial infrastructure that reduces the economic cost of commodity price volatility for manufacturers, farmers, exporters, and importers across the economy.

The opportunity is India's evolution from price-taker to price-influencer in the global commodity system — a transition that would reflect and reinforce India's broader economic emergence.

The idea of 'Price in India' represents this aspiration in concrete terms. It is not a slogan — it is a market development agenda grounded in India's physical commodity strengths, its growing industrial requirements, and the sequential investments in financial infrastructure, institutional participation, and technology that can translate those strengths into pricing influence.

For India's commodity market ecosystem, this moment calls for continued investment in market depth, expanded participation, and the trust-building infrastructure that makes benchmarks credible. The goal is creating markets that genuinely serve India's economy — markets where prices are transparent, risk management is accessible, and India's voice in global commodity pricing reflects the scale of its physical engagement.

> The future of commodity markets will be determined not only by where commodities are produced or consumed, but by where trusted, transparent, and credible prices are discovered. India has the physical foundation to earn that role.

The commodity markets that serve India's next growth phase will be built over the coming years — through enabling policy and regulatory development, infrastructure investment, and market ecosystem building. The direction is clear. The work is underway. The opportunity is India's to claim.

Corporate Governance in the AI Era: Redefining Board Stewardship, Market Integrity and Regulatory Excellence

Preeti Malhotra
Vice Chairman
Modi Holdings Group

Artificial Intelligence (AI) is no longer merely a technological innovation but has become a transformative force that is fundamentally reshaping businesses, capital markets, and corporate governance across the world. From predictive analytics and algorithmic decision-making to automated compliance and intelligent risk management, AI is redefining how companies create value and how regulators oversee markets.

For boards of directors, this represents one of the most significant governance transitions since the introduction of modern corporate governance frameworks. The Board's role is no longer confined to overseeing financial performance and regulatory compliance; it now extends to governing intelligent enterprises operating in an increasingly autonomous and data-driven ecosystem.

For India's capital markets, this transformation presents both extraordinary opportunities and unprecedented governance challenges. As India aspires to become a developed economy under the vision of Viksit Bharat 2047, corporate governance must evolve beyond traditional oversight models into an integrated framework capable of governing digital enterprises, intelligent systems, and AI-enabled business models.

AI: A Boardroom Imperative

In today's corporate environment, AI should no longer be viewed as a technology initiative delegated exclusively to management or information technology teams. It is a strategic boardroom issue requiring continuous oversight.

Every major business function from finance, manufacturing, customer engagement and supply chains to legal, compliance, human resources and investor relations is increasingly influenced by AI-enabled systems. Consequently, boards must understand not only where AI can create competitive advantage but also where it can expose the organisation to strategic, operational, legal and reputational risks.

AI must therefore become a permanent agenda item for every Board meeting.

Directors must ask fundamental questions:

- Does our AI strategy align with our long-term business objectives?
- Are our AI systems transparent, explainable and accountable?
- Have we adequately addressed cyber security and data privacy risks?
- Is management deploying AI responsibly and ethically?
- Are adequate governance mechanisms in place to monitor AI performance throughout its lifecycle?

The future Board will increasingly be judged not by whether it adopted AI, but by how effectively it governed AI.

From Corporate Governance to Intelligent Governance

Traditional governance frameworks were designed for businesses where human judgment dominated organisational decision-making.

The AI era changes that paradigm.

Algorithms increasingly influence lending decisions, investment strategies, recruitment, procurement, pricing, customer engagement and operational controls. While these systems offer significant efficiency gains, they also introduce new forms of governance risk.

Boards must therefore transition from conventional governance to Intelligent Governance, where technology oversight, ethics, risk management and corporate strategy converge.

This requires Boards to establish clear governance principles covering:

- Ethical AI deployment
- Human oversight of automated decisions
- Algorithmic accountability
- Data stewardship
- Model validation and monitoring
- Responsible use of generative AI
- Cyber resilience
- AI-related disclosures to stakeholders

Governance can no longer remain reactive. It must become predictive.

AI and the Future of Capital Markets

Capital markets thrive on one essential ingredient and i.e.trust.

Investor confidence depends upon transparency, fairness, timely disclosures and robust governance. AI has the potential to strengthen each of these pillars.

AI-powered analytics can improve financial reporting, strengthen internal controls, enhance fraud detection and enable continuous monitoring of financial transactions. Machine learning can identify irregular patterns long before they become material governance failures.

At the same time, AI introduces entirely new risks.

Deepfake communications, algorithmic market manipulation, AI-generated misinformation, cyber-attacks and synthetic financial documents could threaten market integrity if appropriate safeguards are not established.

This makes governance even more important.

Institutional investors are increasingly evaluating companies not only on financial performance but also on digital maturity, cyber resilience, AI governance and responsible innovation.

Tomorrow's market leaders will therefore be distinguished by governance excellence as much as technological capability.

Reimagining Regulatory Architecture

India has made remarkable progress in digitising corporate compliance over the past decade.

The next phase of reforms should move beyond digitisation towards intelligent regulation.

Rather than merely filing statutory forms electronically, companies should progressively transition to autonomous compliance, where compliance information originates directly from authenticated enterprise systems and flows securely to regulators through trusted digital infrastructure.

Such an approach would significantly reduce repetitive reporting, improve data accuracy and enable near real-time regulatory oversight.

Simultaneously, regulatory supervision itself should evolve from periodic inspections towards continuous, risk-based monitoring supported by AI.

Instead of reviewing historical information after an event has occurred, regulators could identify anomalies, governance failures and emerging risks at an early stage using predictive analytics.

This would improve regulatory effectiveness while reducing unnecessary compliance burdens on well-governed companies.

The objective should be to make compliance invisible but governance visible.

AI Governance: Integrating Risk, Compliance and Cyber Security

One of the greatest governance challenges in the AI era is organisational fragmentation.

AI governance often sits within technology teams.

Cyber security remains under information security functions.

Compliance is handled separately.

Enterprise risk management operates independently.

Legal functions focus on regulation.

Such siloed approaches are no longer sustainable.

AI governance, cyber security, compliance, enterprise risk management and data governance must converge into a unified governance framework supported by Board oversight.

Only integrated governance can effectively address interconnected risks such as algorithmic bias, privacy breaches, cyber threats, intellectual property disputes and regulatory compliance.

Boards must ensure that governance frameworks evolve at the same pace as technology.

Building AI-Ready Boards

Perhaps the greatest governance challenge is not technology but it is capability.

Many directors built successful careers during an era when digital technologies played a relatively limited role in corporate strategy.

Today's Board environment is fundamentally different.

Directors are increasingly expected to understand AI models, cybersecurity, digital ecosystems, cloud infrastructure, data governance and emerging technologies.

This does not imply that every director must become a technology expert.

However, every director should possess sufficient digital literacy to ask the right questions, challenge management constructively and make informed strategic decisions.

Companies should therefore institutionalise continuous Board education through structured learning programmes, AI workshops, digital governance certifications and regular technology briefings.

Board diversity must also evolve.

In addition to financial, legal and industry expertise, Boards should increasingly include members with experience in digital transformation, cyber security, data governance and AI ethics.

Future-ready Boards will require cognitive diversity alongside professional diversity.

Responsible AI and Long-Term Value Creation

Corporate governance has always been about balancing opportunity with accountability.

That principle becomes even more important in the AI era.

Responsible AI is not simply about avoiding regulatory penalties.

It is about building sustainable trust among investors, customers, employees and society.

Companies that demonstrate transparency, fairness, accountability and responsible innovation will enjoy stronger reputations, better investor confidence and greater resilience.

Conversely, organisations that deploy AI without appropriate governance risk reputational damage, regulatory intervention and erosion of stakeholder trust.

In capital markets, trust remains the most valuable currency.

The Road to Viksit Bharat 2047

India has a unique opportunity to become a global leader in AI-enabled corporate governance.

As Artificial Intelligence, machine learning, autonomous systems and digital public infrastructure mature over the coming decade, governance frameworks must evolve in parallel.

The future regulatory ecosystem should enable businesses to spend less time on procedural compliance and more time creating value through innovation, entrepreneurship and sustainable growth. Regulators, in turn, should benefit from real-time visibility, predictive risk intelligence and stronger governance outcomes.

Such a transformation would not merely improve compliance efficiency but it would redefine the relationship between regulators, companies and investors.

Corporate governance in the AI era is therefore no longer about compliance alone. It is about creating resilient institutions, trusted markets and responsible innovation.

The Boardrooms that will lead the next generation of economic growth will not necessarily be those with the most advanced technology, but those with the wisdom to govern technology responsibly. In the years ahead, competitive advantage will increasingly belong to organisations where Artificial Intelligence is guided by human judgment, ethical leadership and visionary stewardship.

Ultimately, the success of India's capital markets in the AI era will depend not on how rapidly we adopt Artificial Intelligence, but on how effectively our Boards, regulators and institutions govern it.

Wealth Management in India at an Inflection Point

Rising Complexity, the Case for Advice, and Where the Industry Goes From Here.

Advisor vs. Salesperson — lessons from the US and developed markets

Dr.Manoj Vaish

Executive Summary

India's wealth management industry is in the early stages of a structural transformation. The pool of financial wealth held by affluent Indian households is projected to roughly double, even as registered wealth managers serve only a fraction of it today.[1] That gap is the opportunity: a fast-growing pool of wealth, most of it still underserved or self-managed, and rising demand for genuine advice.

This article makes four arguments specific to the Indian market. First, wealth management in India has moved well beyond product distribution into holistic, multi-dimensional advisory. Second, complexity is rising sharply — driven by alternatives, an intergenerational wealth transfer, tax and regulatory change, and the spread of wealth beyond the metros. Third, this complexity is precisely why genuine advisors are needed, even as digital platforms scale. And fourth, India's own regulatory architecture — SEBI's clean separation of the fee-only Registered Investment Adviser (RIA) from the commission-earning distributor — makes the advisor-versus-salesperson distinction unusually concrete here. Developed markets, especially the US, offer a useful preview of where this leads — with the important caveat that India's penetration is far lower and its growth runway much longer.

Wealth Management in India Today

India's wealth industry has evolved through recognizable phases: from a low-trust, product-selling business, through a mutual-fund-led growth era, into a PMS and AIF layer for HNIs seeking customization, and most recently into holistic, fee-based advisory delivered by RIAs, multi-family offices and single-family offices.[3] Each phase has added sophistication — and raised the bar for what good advice looks like.

The demand side is expanding rapidly on several fronts:

- A swelling affluent base. Deloitte defines the addressable market as the top 4–5% of households — roughly 12 to 16 million — with the broader HNI population growing at a low-double-digit annual rate. The number of taxpayers reporting income above ₹1 crore has risen sharply over the past decade, broadening the addressable market well beyond a narrow elite.[1]
- Financialization of savings. Indian households continue to shift from physical assets (gold, real estate) into financial products, yet India's mutual-fund-AUM-to-GDP ratio is still only about 16%, against 23% for China, 72% for Brazil and 140% for the US, underlining how early the shift still is.[1]
- Growth beyond the metros. Demand is no longer confined to UHNIs and HNIs in the top cities. Affluent customers in 'Beyond Top-30' (B30) cities represent a large untapped pool, contributing a rising share of both mutual fund AUM and retail deposits.[1]
- A maturing competitive field. The market is fragmented: Deloitte estimates the top 12 wealth players hold only about US$170 billion of the roughly US$680 billion currently served, leaving the field wide open. Domestic banks and a growing roster of independent wealth firms compete alongside specialist family-office and advisory businesses. The number of family offices in India grew from about 45 in 2018 to roughly 300 by 2024–25.[5]

The Rise in Complexity

The defining change is that managing wealth in India has become genuinely harder, on several reinforcing dimensions at once.

Asset sophistication

The investible universe has broadened far beyond equities, mutual funds and gold. Portfolio Management Services (PMS), Alternative Investment Funds (AIFs), private equity and venture capital, REITs and InvITs, structured products, private credit and global portfolios are now mainstream considerations for HNI portfolios. Even the "simple" end of the market has multiplied: there are now well over 1,500 mutual fund schemes across dozens of categories, and in April 2025 SEBI introduced an entirely new asset class — Specialized Investment Funds (SIFs), a regulated, long-short-capable vehicle sitting between mutual funds and PMS at a ₹10 lakh entry point. SIFs scaled from a standing start to nearly ₹10,000 crore within months of the first launch.[13] The result is more choice, but also more ways to get the selection, structure and sequencing wrong. Complexity itself has become a differentiator, particularly in flatter markets where fund selection and structure matter more than in a rising tide.

The intergenerational wealth transfer

India is on the cusp of a historic handover. An estimated US$1.3 trillion of family wealth is expected to pass to the next generation over the coming decade,[5] and over a longer horizon some estimates put the transfer from India's largest business families at as much as US$4 trillion across roughly 25 years.[7] This is both a planning challenge — succession, trusts, family constitutions, governance — and a retention challenge. Despite a recent push toward formalization, a significant share of wealthy Indian families still lack a comprehensive succession plan; the EY–Julius Baer study found only 59% have wills or constitutions in place and 19% have adopted structures such as trusts or LLPs.[5] Globally, the warning sign is stark: Capgemini's World Wealth Report 2025 found that 81% of inheritors plan to switch firms within one to two years of inheriting,[8] underscoring how fragile incumbent relationships are when wealth changes hands.

Tax, regulation and structure

Asset allocation can no longer be designed in isolation. Tax regulations, evolving SEBI frameworks for PMS and AIFs, ESG considerations and cross-border issues all interact with investment decisions.[2] Cross-border complexity is no longer a fringe concern: in the EY–Julius Baer survey, 48% of family offices flagged changing tax laws and 37% cited cross-border issues, while Liberalized Remittance Scheme (LRS) outflows rose from US$18.8 billion in FY20 to US$31.7 billion in FY24 as families globalised.[5] Coordinating investments with estate planning, business succession and tax has become central to the value of advice, not peripheral to it.

Technology and changing expectations

Digital platforms have lowered the cost of access and raised client expectations for personalization, transparency and responsiveness. Many Indian family offices are already adopting AI tools and digital platforms for investing and risk management. Technology is removing manual burden — but, as in developed markets, it simultaneously raises the bar for what counts as good advice. Next-generation inheritors, comfortable with global and alternative investments and impact-oriented strategies (44% of Indian family offices now invest with an impact orientation),[6] expect a different experience from their parents.

Summary: the widening gap between what Indian clients need and what they can do alone

Driver	What it adds to the client's burden
Asset sophistication	PMS, AIFs, private markets, private credit, REITs/InvITs, global portfolios — selection, structure, illiquidity
Wealth transfer	Succession, trusts, family constitutions, governance, engaging heirs
Tax & regulation	Coordinating investments with tax, estate and cross-border planning under shifting SEBI rules
Technology & next-gen	Higher expectations for personalization, digital experience and impact orientation

Why Advisors Are Needed

It is tempting to assume that as digital platforms and direct plans scale, the human advisor matters less. The Indian evidence points the other way.

- Demand outstrips supply of quality advice. A meaningful share of the wealth held by affluent households is self- or informally managed, and even the served portion is thinly covered by registered providers. This is a large pool of investors who need, but do not yet receive, professional advice. The wealth transfer and the rise of B30 affluence widen the gap further.
- Complexity does not automate cleanly. Deciding what a particular family should do — weighing trade-offs across succession, tax, business interests and emotion — remains a human act. Family offices are described as best placed to assist precisely because of the complexity of business-and-wealth transitions.[11]
- Trust and behavior management are the real product. Much of an advisor's value is realized in moments of market stress and family transition — keeping clients invested, coordinating specialists (lawyers, chartered accountants, bankers), and preventing costly mistakes. These are relationship functions, not computational ones.
- The market is professionalizing. Practitioners describe the industry's evolution over the past decade from a low-trust, product-selling business into a more professional, research-driven one. Rising client sophistication rewards genuine expertise over a sales pitch.[3]

Technology is therefore best understood as raising advisor capacity rather than replacing advisors — handling the mechanical work so the human can concentrate on judgment, coordination and trust.

Advisor vs. Salesperson: India's Regulatory Clarity

In many markets the advisor-versus-salesperson distinction is a matter of culture and degree. In India it is written into regulation. SEBI's Investment Advisers Regulations (2013, amended 2020) draw a hard line between two roles:

- The Registered Investment Adviser (RIA). A fee-only fiduciary, registered with and regulated by SEBI, who charges the client directly (either a fixed fee or an AUM/AUA-based fee — no other model is permitted) and earns no commission on products recommended. The RIA is required to conduct risk profiling and act in the client's best interest, and typically offers holistic planning spanning goals, retirement, tax and estate planning.[9]
- The Mutual Fund Distributor (MFD). Regulated by SEBI and AMFI, the MFD facilitates buying and selling of products and earns commissions from product manufacturers, but is prohibited from holding out as an 'adviser'. Following the 2020 amendment, distributors may no longer use titles such as 'Independent Financial Adviser', 'Wealth Adviser' or similar.[10]

Critically, SEBI enforces client-level segregation: the same entity or group cannot both advise and distribute to the same client, and the advisory and distribution arms must operate at arm's length — a restriction that extends to immediate family members of an individual RIA. The separation exists precisely because earning commissions while giving advice creates a conflict of interest.[9] This makes India's framework, in some respects, more explicit than the US, where the line between fiduciary advice and commission-based brokerage has historically been blurrier. It is worth noting the regulatory tide can move both ways: the fee-only RIA count in India remains small (roughly 1,000+), and SEBI has periodically eased norms to encourage more distributors to register.

Dimension	Distributor / Salesperson (MFD)	Advisor (SEBI RIA / family office)
Organizing goal	Distribute product	Improve client outcomes
How they earn	Commission from product makers	Fee paid by the client
Duty	Suitability; no advice role	Fiduciary — client's best interest
Regulator	SEBI + AMFI	SEBI (Investment Advisers Regs)
Automation risk	High — product matching is automatable; direct plans erode commissions	Low — judgment and trust resist automation

Where Wealth Management in India Goes From Here

Developed markets — the US in particular — offer a credible preview of India's trajectory, with the caveat that India's penetration is far lower and its growth runway much longer.

Lessons from the US and developed markets

- The shift toward fee-based, fiduciary advice. In the US, assets and advisors continue to migrate toward the independent RIA channel, where the relationship is structurally aligned with the client rather than with product distribution. India's RIA framework points the same way, though the fee-only model is still nascent here; encouragingly, Indian practitioners report that investors do pay for unbiased advice once they experience it.[12]
- AI augments, it doesn't replace. The developed-market consensus is that AI will not replace advisors — it will separate those who adapt from those who do not, by automating research, monitoring, drafting and compliance while freeing the human for judgment and relationships.
- Retaining the next generation is the central battle. With 81% of inheritors globally planning to switch firms after inheriting and a fifth of advisors expected to retire by 2035, developed-market firms are building multigenerational teams and digital-first experiences. Indian firms face the same imperative as the US$1.3 trillion transfer unfolds.[8]

A plausible end state for India

The most likely destination is a barbell. At one end, low-cost digital platforms and direct plans efficiently serve straightforward needs — absorbing much of what distributors and salespeople once did, and steadily compressing commissions. At the other end, high-touch human advisors — RIAs, multi-family offices and private banks — serve clients whose complexity justifies the cost, augmented (not replaced) by AI. The squeezed middle is the distributor charging advice-level trust for product-level value; falling commissions and the rise of direct plans already make that position vulnerable.

There is, however, a real counter-current worth naming. The fee-only model faces genuine headwinds in India: clients accustomed to "free" commission-bundled advice can be reluctant to pay explicit fees, the RIA compliance burden is heavy, and the economics of advice-only practices remain unproven at scale. The barbell is the likely destination, but the timeline is uncertain and the middle may persist longer than a clean thesis suggests.

For firms, the strategic implications are to invest in advisor capability and technology together, build multigenerational teams to retain wealth as it transfers, formalize succession and governance offerings for family-office clients, and articulate value in outcomes — tax saved, risk reduced, decisions coordinated. For individual professionals, the implication is sharper: in a market where SEBI has drawn the line in regulation, the durable path is to be unambiguously an advisor. The salesperson's role does not disappear, but it increasingly belongs to software and to the lowest-cost channels.

Conclusion

India's wealth management industry is younger, faster-growing and less penetrated than its developed-market counterparts — which is exactly why the choices made now matter. Wealth is broadening, complexity is rising, and a trillion-dollar transfer is beginning. None of this diminishes the need for human advice; it intensifies it, even as the nature of valuable advice narrows toward judgment, coordination and trust. The firms and professionals who thrive will be those who embrace technology as leverage rather than threat, organize around client outcomes rather than product distribution, and recognize that in India's clearly demarcated regulatory landscape, being a true advisor is the one role that cannot be commoditized.

From Compliance to Effectiveness: The Next Stage of Board Evaluation

Evolution of Board Evaluation in India

Board evaluation was introduced in India through Section 134 of the Companies Act, 2013. It made disclosure of board evaluation mandatory for listed companies and specified public companies. In 2014, Clause 49 of the Listing Agreement was further strengthened, making performance evaluation of independent directors mandatory for listed companies.

To support implementation, a detailed Guidance Note on Board Evaluation was issued by SEBI n 2017. The objective was to educate listed entities and their Boards on the various aspects of the evaluation process and to improve both board performance and corporate governance standards. The Guidance Note covered the scope of evaluation, the process and criteria to be adopted, feedback mechanisms, action plans, disclosure requirements, frequency of evaluation, responsibilities for conducting the process, and periodic review of the framework itself.

India has broadly followed the UK approach to corporate governance. However, one significant difference remains. The Indian model relies primarily on internal evaluation and peer feedback. Consequently, the quality of the process depends heavily on the willingness of directors to provide candid and differentiated feedback to one another.

In practice, this is often difficult. Indian corporate culture tends to place a premium on hierarchy and collegiality. Directors may be reluctant to provide critical feedback, particularly to perceived seniors or long-standing board members. In promoter-led companies, there may be an additional reluctance to challenge individuals who played a role in appointing directors to the board. The result is often uniformly positive evaluations that provide limited insight into actual board effectiveness.

The UK has sought to address this challenge through periodic independent assessment. All FTSE 350 companies are required to undertake an externally facilitated board evaluation at least once every three years. The evaluator must be identified in the annual report, and companies are expected to disclose key findings, actions taken, and progress against earlier recommendations. This emphasis on external scrutiny, transparency, and demonstrable improvement creates a stronger mechanism for board accountability.

India currently requires annual board evaluation and disclosure that the process has been undertaken, but not disclosure of the findings. A number of progressive companies, including Infosys and TCS, voluntarily provide more meaningful disclosures on evaluation outcomes and follow-up actions. Such companies recognise that the purpose of evaluation is not merely compliance but the continuous enhancement of board effectiveness and contribution to long-term value creation.

Recent developments suggest that regulators are beginning to move in a similar direction. External board evaluation has now been made mandatory for PSU banks from 2025 following concerns around governance, oversight, and board effectiveness. The evaluation framework is expected to cover board composition, structure, committee effectiveness, risk oversight, ethics and compliance, and alignment with strategy.

These developments raise an important question. If board evaluation is intended to strengthen governance and provide early warning signals, why do governance failures continue to emerge without warning? Why do issues relating to management misconduct, inadequate oversight, cultural weaknesses, or leadership failures often remain undetected until they become significant problems?

The answer may lie in the way board evaluation is currently conceived and implemented.

The Real Purpose of Board Evaluation

The ultimate purpose of board evaluation is not only to confirm that governance processes have been followed. Its purpose is to assess whether the board is effectively discharging its responsibilities and contributing to the long-term success of the institution.

An effective board provides direction, oversight, challenge, and support. It ensures that management remains focused on sustainable value creation while safeguarding the interests of shareholders and other stakeholders. Equally important, it acts as an early warning system by identifying emerging risks that may not yet be visible in financial results.

Such risks may include leadership weaknesses, cultural issues, succession gaps, talent shortages, ineffective board-management engagement, or strategic blind spots. These are often the factors that determine long-term success or failure, yet they remain difficult to capture through conventional board evaluation frameworks.

The role of boards is becoming even more complex. Technological disruption, artificial intelligence, changing workforce expectations, geopolitical uncertainty, and increasing stakeholder scrutiny are creating new tensions and trade-offs. Boards must increasingly balance the interests of investors, customers, employees, regulators, and society at large.

In this environment, board effectiveness must be viewed through a much broader lens than regulatory compliance.

The key question is not whether governance processes exist, but whether the board is helping the organisation navigate uncertainty, build resilience, and create sustainable value.

Why Current Evaluation Processes Fall Short

Most board evaluation instruments used by companies today continue to reflect the framework set out in the SEBI Guidance Note. As a result, the questions focus primarily on process and compliance matters: whether information was shared on time, whether notices and minutes were circulated appropriately, whether meetings were conducted effectively, and whether committees fulfilled their mandated responsibilities.

While these are important elements of governance, they do not adequately address the broader question of board effectiveness.

The evaluation process rarely probes whether the board is contributing meaningfully to strategy, helping management navigate emerging risks, strengthening leadership pipelines, or preparing the organisation for future challenges. It provides limited insight into the quality of board discussions, the robustness of challenge provided to management, or the extent to which directors bring an external perspective and contextual understanding to key decisions or infact there are challenges in Board management dynamics which may be dysfunctional.

Areas that are often under-emphasised include:

- Contribution to strategic direction and long-term value creation
- Participation in discussions on market shifts, disruption, organisational capability, and crisis management
- Quality of oversight on succession planning and leadership development
- Risk anticipation and mitigation
- Future readiness of the organisation
- Ability to challenge management constructively while remaining supportive
- Contribution to building organisational resilience

Over the past two decades, many boards have sought to simplify evaluation processes by shortening questionnaires and moving them to entirely online formats. Most Directors do not provide any comments besides the scores. While administratively efficient, these approaches often provide limited insight.

Most evaluations generate scores clustered near the top end of the scale and end up generating a sense of complacency. Directors are understandably reluctant to assign average or below-average ratings to colleagues, particularly in India where there is a high value on collegiality and mutual respect. It is often seen disrespectful of seniors to do so. Evaluation of individual directors is therefore frequently perfunctory, with little differentiation in ratings and limited actionable feedback.

The consequence is that evaluations often confirm that processes exist rather than reveal whether the board is genuinely effective.

Rethinking Board Effectiveness

If the objective of board evaluation is to improve effectiveness, the starting point must be a clear understanding of what an effective board seeks to achieve.

Management is rightly focused on operational execution and delivery of quarterly and annual objectives. Boards have a different mandate. Their role is to provide long-term direction, oversee risk, ensure leadership continuity, and safeguard the organisation's future.

Board effectiveness therefore cannot be measured solely by company performance in a particular year. Strong financial performance may coexist with weaknesses in culture, succession planning, risk management, or strategic preparedness. Equally, boards may take actions that strengthen long-term outcomes even when they do not immediately translate into short-term results. In crisis management situations that the current geo political disturbances may bring about, this difference may be more stark.

The assessment of board effectiveness must therefore consider the board's contribution in areas such as:

- Strategic direction and long-term value creation
- Risk oversight and organisational resilience
- Leadership succession and talent quality
- Governance and culture
- Stakeholder trust
- Future readiness of the organisation

These outcomes are inherently difficult to measure through traditional metrics. They require qualitative assessment and informed judgment. This is one reason why externally facilitated evaluations can add significant value.

The Competencies Required for the Future

Many progressive companies are already revisiting the competencies required of boards in a rapidly changing environment.

Expertise in areas such as digital transformation, artificial intelligence, cybersecurity, sustainability, data governance, organisational transformation, and talent management is increasingly becoming essential. Boards must not only oversee these areas but also understand their implications for business strategy and risk.

This creates a new challenge. The capability of individual directors in these emerging areas needs to be assessed and continuously strengthened.

Talent management deserves particular attention. Demographic shifts, evolving employee expectations, changing leadership requirements, and the pace of organisational transformation are making talent one of the most critical determinants of future success.

Boards are increasingly expected to oversee leadership pipelines, succession planning, and organisational capability. Yet many directors developed their experience in a very different business environment and may have limited exposure to contemporary talent challenges.

These developments reinforce the importance of board renewal and refreshment. Board composition must evolve alongside business requirements. While many companies maintain competency matrices, fewer use them as a basis for individual development plans or targeted director education.

Director development remains an under-invested area. Although professional firms and governance institutions have expanded their educational offerings, individual directors must also take responsibility for remaining current. Evaluation processes should provide explicit feedback on this dimension.

What Boards Should Be Evaluating

In the context of these changes, board evaluation frameworks need to focus on four broad questions:

1. Composition

Does the board have the right mix of skills, experience, perspectives, and diversity to govern the organisation effectively?

2. Conduct

Do board meetings, committees, and interactions foster constructive debate, informed challenge, and effective decision-making? Is communication between directors and management open and productive?

3. Impact

Is the board improving strategic outcomes, strengthening risk management, and ensuring leadership continuity? Is it creating value beyond formal governance oversight? Are future opportunities adequately discussed with a long term lens?

4. Renewal

Is the board preparing itself for future challenges through continuous learning, succession planning, and refreshment of skills and perspectives?

Underlying these questions are several important cultural dimensions:

- Is there sufficient psychological safety for directors to challenge assumptions and express dissenting views?
- Does management engage openly with the board and respond constructively to challenge?
- Is there openness to new perspectives and alternative viewpoints?
- Do directors possess a deep understanding of the company's context, business model, and operating realities?

Without addressing these questions, evaluations risk becoming exercises in compliance rather than instruments for improvement.

The Role of External Evaluation

This is where external facilitation can add significant value.

An externally facilitated assessment is often better suited to exploring the more nuanced aspects of board effectiveness, particularly culture, board dynamics, board-management relationships, leadership effectiveness, and future readiness.

In our experience, organisations benefit from undertaking such an assessment at least once every three to four years in addition to their annual evaluation process. A growing number of progressive Indian companies have already adopted this approach.

Our typical approach to such assessments has been as below :

1. Individual discussions with directors covering strategy, culture, future readiness, communication, talent oversight, board dynamics, and board-management engagement.
2. Observation of board and committee meetings to understand participation, quality of debate, and decision-making dynamics.
3. Review of board and committee materials over the preceding two to three years to identify patterns in agenda priorities, discussions, and oversight.
4. Individual discussions with top management to understand their expectations of the board, the value they derive from board engagement, their perception of board dynamics, and any barriers to effectiveness.

These conversations often reveal insights that are difficult to surface through questionnaires. They provide a richer understanding of board dynamics, management perceptions, and areas where expectations may be misaligned.

Management perspectives are particularly valuable because senior executives often interact extensively with directors despite having limited representation in formal board evaluation processes since there may be just one or two Board seats for Management.

Confidentiality is critical. Directors and executives are generally more willing to discuss sensitive issues openly when they are confident that individual comments will not be attributed. Of course the credibility of the external facilitator is important.

My experience of facilitating these discussions is that the findings from such reviews frequently stimulate meaningful discussion and identify practical actions for improvement. They can also create a forum for addressing issues that may otherwise remain unspoken. The ability to raise sensitive subjects , often pertaining to board dynamics or board refreshing and openly discuss options often is helpful.

External assessment should therefore not be viewed simply as an evaluation exercise. Its real value lies in facilitating reflection, strengthening alignment between the board and management, and accelerating board development.

Even in highly effective boards, individual feedback can help directors reflect on how they can contribute more effectively. Compared with executive development, individual director coaching and development remain relatively under-utilised and deserve greater attention.

Conclusion: Beyond Compliance

Board evaluation was introduced as a governance requirement. It now needs to evolve into a strategic tool for improving board effectiveness.

The challenges facing organisations today are increasingly complex. Technological disruption, geopolitical uncertainty, changing stakeholder expectations, talent shortages, and heightened scrutiny are placing greater demands on boards than ever before.

Meeting these challenges requires more than compliance with governance requirements. It requires boards that are capable of constructive challenge, long-term thinking, effective oversight, and continuous renewal. Boards must transform themselves if they are to play a constructive role in helping the organisations they serve transform.

The next stage of board evaluation must therefore move beyond measuring whether governance processes exist. It must focus on whether boards are creating value, strengthening resilience, and helping organisations prepare for the future.

The most progressive boards have already begun this journey. They devote time to reflecting on their effectiveness, discussing feedback openly, investing in director development, and strengthening engagement with management. They recognise that board effectiveness is not a destination but a continuous process of learning and improvement.

As the expectations placed on boards continue to rise, more organisations will need to adopt this broader perspective. The future of board evaluation lies not in compliance, but in enabling boards to become more effective stewards of the institutions they serve.

Sustainable Finance, Clear Mandate

Why It is India's New Corporate Baseline

Harish H.V.

This article examines why sustainable finance is key for India to achieve economic growth in a sustainable manner.

Introduction

The narrative surrounding corporate India's relationship with the environment has undergone a fundamental paradigm shift. A decade ago, environmental sustainability was comfortably relegated to the pages of Corporate Social Responsibility (CSR) brochures—a discretionary, philanthropic afterthought. Today, that luxury has evaporated. Driven by escalating climate vulnerabilities, societal disparities and market sustainable finance is transitioning from a progressive choice to an existential imperative.

As one of the world's fastest growing major economies and a nation highly vulnerable to climate risks, India faces a dual challenge: sustaining rapid development while safeguarding environmental and social stability. In this context, sustainable finance needs to move from the periphery to the core of financial decision making. What was once viewed as a niche or voluntary practice now becomes an economic, regulatory, and strategic imperative for investors, lenders, and companies. For investors and lenders, the question is no longer "Should we integrate sustainability?" but rather "How quickly can we adapt?" This is no longer about ethical positioning; it is about economic survival.

As India targets net-zero emissions by 2070 and aims to meet 50% of its electricity requirements from renewable energy sources by 2030, the financial sector needs to recalibrate itself to serve as the primary engine of this transition.

India also faces social challenges of disparities in terms of income, wealth, education, gender, all of which are key for corporates to prosper in the long run. Failing to acknowledge and address them in the current businesses and devising solutions to address these itself can be a significant business opportunity.

For financial institutions, integrating Environmental, Social, and Governance (ESG) metrics into risk assessment is the new baseline for capital preservation and growth in an environment where ignoring these factors is likely to lead to significant value destruction. Institutional investors now need to no longer evaluate companies purely on quarterly profits but examine whether business models are resilient, ethical, climate-aware, and socially responsible.

For Indian corporates, transitioning to sustainable business practices is key to long-term survival and growth, and it is fast becoming the sole mechanism to safeguard access to affordable capital. This article seeks to analyse the issues concerning sustainable finance and explain why it is a critical focus area for India Inc.

1. The Macro Context: India's Unique Climate, Social and Economic Vulnerability

To understand why sustainable finance has become non-negotiable, one must look at the unique macroeconomic vulnerabilities India faces. India sits at a precarious intersection: it is one of the world's fastest-growing major economies, yet it is also one of the most vulnerable to climate change and faces steep and growing disparities in income and wealth.

Businesses and investors face three fundamental risk vectors if they fail to integrate climate issues into their core frameworks:

- Physical Risks: Extreme weather events (floods, heatwaves, droughts) that result in direct damage to corporate assets, immediate operational disruption, and severe supply chain impairments.
- Transition Risks: Structural shifts toward a low-carbon economy driven by rapid policy tightening, carbon pricing mechanisms, and the accelerating obsolescence of high-carbon assets (Stranded Asset Risk).
- Business Risks: Escalating capital constraints, including higher costs of borrowing, rising insurance premiums, potential uninsurability, and the systemic loss of domestic and export customers who favour sustainable alternatives.

According to global climate risk indices, extreme weather events regularly cost India billions of dollars annually in economic losses, deeply impacting sectors ranging from agriculture and infrastructure to manufacturing and real estate. For investors and banks, these climate risks translate directly into poorer returns or a surge in Non-Performing Assets (NPAs).

Simultaneously, the global and domestic push toward a low-carbon economy introduces severe transition risks. As regulations tighten, carbon pricing mechanisms emerge, and consumer preferences shift, high-carbon industries—such as coal-fired power, traditional automotive manufacturing, and heavy chemicals—face rapid asset obsolescence.

Lenders and investors heavily exposed to these sectors risk being left holding stranded assets that lose value rapidly, while companies that fail to decarbonize face structural bankruptcy.

Simultaneously India has a number of societal issues with huge income and wealth disparity challenge which is growing coupled with unemployment or inadequate employment plus gender related disparities. As mentioned, these also need to be addressed by business as part of their commitment to their stakeholders and can also create significant business opportunities.

2. The Regulatory Imperative: Driving the Mandate

The transition from a voluntary framework to a mandatory one has been accelerated by India's financial and corporate regulators. The regulatory ecosystem has effectively been used to enforce sustainability.

The RBI has progressively integrated climate risk into its systemic financial stability assessments. It has explicitly recognized climate change as a systemic financial risk, placing sustainable finance firmly within the prudential regulatory framework. The RBI has issued a series of guidelines that make sustainability integration unavoidable, focusing on:

- Disclosure requirements on climate-related financial risks.
- Expectations for governance and board oversight of climate strategy.
- Stress testing and scenario analysis for climate risks.
- Guidance on green deposits and use-of-proceeds frameworks.

For listed corporates (particularly the top 1,000 companies), the Securities and Exchange Board of India (SEBI) fundamentally altered the corporate reporting landscape with the introduction of the Business Responsibility and Sustainability Report (BRSR). Moving beyond standard, qualitative disclosures, SEBI introduced the BRSR Core framework—a subset of quantifiable, assurance-ready KPIs that top listed entities must mandatorily disclose. Crucially, this mandate extends to value-chain disclosures, forcing even unlisted small and medium enterprises (SMEs) acting as suppliers to larger corporates to track and report their ESG metrics.

Furthermore, the government's active development of a formal sovereign green taxonomy provides a structured, legally sound definition of what constitutes a "green" or "sustainable" activity. Once implemented, investors, lenders, and companies will have clear rules of engagement. This is expected to eliminate the pervasive threat of greenwashing (falsely marketing a product or company as environmentally friendly) and give investors/lenders an unshakeable benchmark for capital allocation.

3. The Investor Imperative: Risk Mitigation and Value Creation

For investors and lending institutions, adopting sustainable finance is key to both capital preservation and capturing the next wave of macroeconomic growth.

Advanced Risk Assessment

Traditional risk models that exclusively evaluate historical financial statements, debt-service coverage ratios, and collateral are dangerously incomplete. A company with stellar cash flows today could become unviable tomorrow if an unmitigated environmental liability surfaces, or if its primary export market slaps a steep carbon border adjustment tax on its goods. Investors need to integrate ESG scoring into their risk architecture. Higher ESG risk now directly translates to lower credit ratings, shorter debt tenors, or higher risk premiums.

Access to Global and Sustainable Capital

Indian banks and companies seeking capital from global investors will find that the international pool of institutional capital is increasingly ESG-mandated. Asset managers, sovereign wealth funds, and multilateral development banks are explicitly restricting funding to institutions that possess clear, verifiable sustainable frameworks. By issuing Sovereign Green Bonds and corporate green or blue bonds, entities can tap into highly liquid, lower-cost global capital pools. Conversely, companies remaining heavily exposed to unabated fossil fuel or high-pollution portfolios will find their own cost of funds escalating dramatically.

Disclosure: The company that the author has founded has a partnership with the Stock Exchange of Mauritius (SEM) in its Sustainable Finance Board, focused on creating a sustainable finance hub for Africa and Asia.

The Business Case: Sustainability Drives Profitability

Sustainable finance is often misunderstood as a compliance burden; in reality, it is a premier growth frontier. Evidence shows that anchoring a portfolio in sustainability yields tangible financial advantages:

- Lower Operating Costs: Systematic energy efficiency, waste reduction, and resource optimization directly insulate a company's bottom line from volatile commodity cycles.
- Higher Productivity: Companies with strong, transparent ESG metrics consistently attract and retain top-tier talent, lowering turnover and boosting operational productivity.
- Increased customer base: Addressing social issues increases the addressable population for many businesses and it also helps capture market segments that are focussed on buying products and services from Sustainable companies.
- Long-Term Value Creation: Sustainable businesses regularly outperform their peers in profitability, regulatory resilience, and long-term investor confidence.

4. The Company Imperative: Securing Capital and Preserving Enterprise Value

Financing India's transition requires astronomical sums—estimated in the trillions of dollars over the coming decades. The global sustainable bond market is in excess of $1 trillion. While India currently holds a minuscule share of this market, leveraging it actively allows India Inc to diversify its investor base, signal sustainability intentions, and drive down capital costs.

If investors and lenders are the gatekeepers of capital, corporates are its consumers. For Indian enterprises—spanning conglomerates to mid-market manufacturing companies—incorporating sustainability into core business strategies is becoming the defining variable for maintaining enterprise value.

The most immediate operational impact for borrowers is the pricing of debt. As banks face pressure to green their loan books, a visible pricing dichotomy has emerged. Borrowers with poor ESG profiles, a lack of carbon-mitigation plans, or inefficient resource usage are encountering a structural penalty: higher interest rates, stricter covenant requirements, and, in some carbon-heavy sectors, an outright contraction of credit availability.

Indian corporates do not operate in a vacuum; they are intricately woven into global supply chains. With international frameworks like the European Union's Carbon Border Adjustment Mechanism (CBAM) taking active effect, Indian exporters who fail to measure, verify, and lower their carbon footprints will find themselves structurally locked out of premium global markets. Furthermore, domestic large-cap entities, bound by SEBI's value-chain reporting directives, are actively auditing their domestic vendor bases. An Indian SME that refuses to adopt basic sustainable practices will likely find itself disqualified from serving as a vendor to Tier-1 corporates.

5. Structuring the Sustainable Finance Ecosystem: Instruments at a Glance

Leveraging Innovative Sustainable Instruments

Forward-looking companies are utilizing sustainable finance tools to actively lower their financing costs through highly specialized corporate instruments:

- Green Bonds / Green REITS/Sustainability Bonds: Green bonds are bonds where the use of proceeds is earmarked exclusively for verified eco-friendly projects, such as setting up a captive solar plant, transitioning a manufacturing unit to zero-liquid discharge, or supporting a defined social cause (e.g., women's empowerment, rural development). If the use of funds can be demonstrably linked to the enhancement of any of the United Nations list of Sustainable Development Goals (SDGs), it can tap into targeted, lower-yield investment pools. Real estate companies can raise capital through issue of Green REITS where the underlying assets are Green Buildings with appropriate certification and access funds from investors who are focussed on Sustainable Investments.
- Sustainability-Linked Loans (SLLs): Highly dynamic corporate loan facilities where the interest rate (coupon) is explicitly tied to the borrower meeting pre-agreed Sustainability Performance Targets (SPTs)—such as a 10% reduction in greenhouse gas emissions intensity or achieving specific water-recycling benchmarks within three years or serving rural women or uplifting people from poverty. If the borrower meets the targets, the interest rate steps down, directly saving millions in financing costs; if they fail, the interest rate steps up.

Fundamentally all Sustainable debt finance can be classified into four groups as detailed in the table below.

Instrument Class	Core Mechanics	Primary Use Case in India	Primary Benefit to Stakeholders
Green Bonds / Blue Bonds	Fixed-income instruments where proceeds are strictly ring-fenced for green asset creation or marine preservation projects.	Financing grid-scale solar parks, wind farms, or municipal wastewater treatment plants.	Lenders: Attracts ESG-focused global institutional investors. Borrowers: Provides long-tenor, stable financing for capital-intensive infrastructure.
Sustainability-Linked Loans (SLLs) & Bonds	Debt facilities where interest margins fluctuate based on the borrower's verified progress against custom ESG performance metrics.	Corporate decarbonization, scaling up supply-chain diversity, or improving hazardous waste management linked to SDGs, employment generation, Gender related activities.	Lenders: Ensures continuous, verifiable risk reduction in the loan book. Borrowers: Directly rewards operational efficiency with reduced borrowing costs.
Transition Finance	Funding explicitly designed for hard-to-abate sectors to systematically shift away from high-carbon baselines without triggering abrupt defaults.	Upgrading blast furnaces in steel manufacturing to cleaner fuel blends or improving thermal efficiency in cement plants.	Lenders: Prevents sudden portfolio defaults by supporting vital economic sectors through a structured pivot. Borrowers: Avoids premature asset stranding and business extinction.
Blended Finance Structures	Combining concessional capital from development banks/ philanthropies with commercial capital to de-risk pioneering technologies.	Initial rollout of green hydrogen infrastructure, grid-scale battery storage installations, or carbon capture technology.	Lenders: Mitigates early-stage technology risks through public-private risk sharing. Borrowers: Makes cutting-edge, high-capex decarbonization technology economically viable.

6. Overcoming the Friction Points: Challenges in the Indian Landscape

While the imperative is undeniable, the deployment of sustainable finance in India faces significant systemic hurdles that require concerted cross-sectoral action.

The Data Deficit and Greenwashing Risks

The bedrock of sustainable finance is verified data. In India, while top-tier listed enterprises possess the resources to produce comprehensive BRSR data, the broader mid-market and SME ecosystems suffer from a severe data deficit. Fragmented tracking, an absence of historical baselines, and a lack of standardized metrics make it incredibly difficult for investors to accurately assess a companies true ESG risk profile. This informational asymmetry fosters an environment vulnerable to greenwashing, where minor, superficial adjustments are marketed as profound sustainable transformations. To counter this, alignment between global disclosure standards and Indian developmental realities must improve, backed by digital validation solutions like blockchain traceability and AI-driven analytics.

The “Green Premium” and Capex Inertia

Transitioning to sustainable operations invariably demands substantial upfront capital expenditure (Capex)—whether it involves upgrading manufacturing equipment, integrating smart energy grids, or re-engineering supply chains. This upfront cost represents a steep “Green Premium.” Companies need to access innovative global lower cost capital and leverage the benefits of being sustainable to offset the costs and take longer term views while implementing such projects.

Capacity and Expertise Bottlenecks

Sustainable finance requires a unique synthesis of financial acumen and environmental science. Traditional evaluation techniques of evaluating financial statements are not enough. They need to think about quantifying carbon equivalents, evaluate Scope 3 supply-chain emissions, gender balance issues, poverty alleviation or assess the long-term hydrological risks of a factory location. Bridging this skill gap requires extensive institutional capacity building; its absence currently slows down the velocity of sustainable finance.

7. The Roadmap Forward

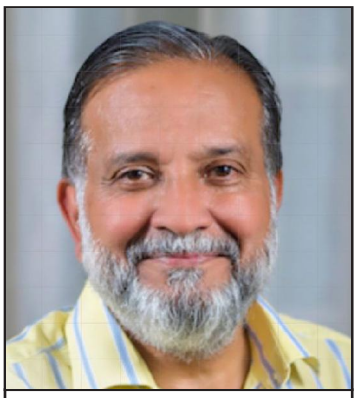
India’s sustainable finance journey differs fundamentally from that of developed economies. While developed markets can focus almost exclusively on rapid decarbonization, India must pursue sustainability alongside acute developmental priorities such as poverty reduction, affordable energy access, infrastructure growth, and financial inclusion.

To accelerate this transition and solidify sustainable finance as a natural pillar of the Indian financial architecture, a collaborative roadmap must be executed by all core stakeholders:

- For Regulators (Incentivization and Standardization): Regulators can move beyond mandates to include proactive incentives. The RBI could explore policy innovations such as integrating sustainable lending targets under the Priority Sector Lending (PSL) framework or optimizing statutory liquidity reserve allocations for green asset portfolios. Finalizing a clear, comprehensive, and globally interoperable Indian Green Taxonomy will also give the market absolute clarity and prevent capital fragmentation.
- For Investors and Lenders (Technical Integration and Scale): Investors and Lenders must invest heavily in building technical capacity. Establishing dedicated ESG verticals staffed with environmental scientists, engineers, and sustainable finance experts is critical. Furthermore, they must simplify the process for smaller company’s by providing standardized templates, subsidizing external ESG rating costs, and offering bundled transition advice alongside funding strategies to actively capture large-scale opportunities across clean mobility, waste management, and sustainable infrastructure.
- For Companies (Radical Transparency and Operational Alignment): Companies must stop viewing ESG compliance as a reactive checkbox exercise for the annual report and start viewing it as a core component of corporate strategy. Enterprises should proactively invest in robust digital accounting tools to measure resource consumption and emissions in real time. By establishing transparent, verifiable baselines, companies can step forward as high-quality, de-risked counters, commanding premium terms from the investing community.

Conclusion

Sustainable finance is no longer a future aspiration—it has become the foundation of modern finance. In India, this transition is driven by climate and social realities, regulatory evolution, investor expectations, global capital flows, and changing market dynamics.



For investors, integrating sustainability is essential for risk management, portfolio resilience, regulatory preparedness, and long-term competitiveness. For companies, sustainability increasingly determines access to capital, cost efficiency, market relevance, and investor confidence.

India’s growth ambitions and sustainability commitments are deeply interconnected. The country cannot achieve long-term economic prosperity without financing sustainable development, and sustainable development cannot succeed without strong financial sector participation. The future winners in India's financial ecosystem will not merely be those with the largest balance sheets, but those capable of aligning profitability with resilience, responsibility, and sustainability. It is an economic imperative, a strategic necessity, and ultimately, a defining pillar of the country's future growth story.

The Ups, Oops & Downs of a Startup to Scaleup Journey

Why Building a Great Company is More Like Playing Snakes & Ladders than only hoping for Ladders – Get set for a Markovian journey for building enduring enterprises

"All games have morals; and the moral of Snakes and Ladders is that no matter how far you fall, you can always go back up, and no matter how high you rise, you can always fall down."
— Salman Rushdie, Midnight's Children

Every founder begins with a lot of optimism. Every investor begins with a spreadsheet. Between the two lies the reality of scaling. Most business plans assume a linear journey, yet the path from StartUp to ScaleUp resembles a game of Snakes and Ladders far more than a straight climb. Every decision is a throw of the dice under uncertainty. Every ladder rewards preparation. Every snake exposes fragility. Growth is not linear—it is probabilistic. The probability to the final point is more about avoiding the snakes.

…Long before it became a commercial children's game of pure luck, Snakes and Ladders was a profound philosophical map of human destiny, cosmic justice, and spiritual evolution. Invented in ancient India, the game was a teaching aid designed to visually demonstrate the Law of Karma—the cosmic principle of cause and effect where your intentional actions dictate your future state of existence…

The 7 vs 39 Insight

The shortest theoretical journey across a classic Snakes and Ladders board can be completed in roughly 7 throws. Yet a Markov Chain analysis shows the expected journey on average is approximately 39 throws. To analyse a Snakes and Ladders game using a Markov Chain, the board is treated as a system of 101 discrete states (from square 0 to 100). The minimum moves are calculated by multiplying the transition matrix until the probability of reaching square 100 becomes greater than zero. The average (expected) moves are found by isolating the transient states matrix Q and solving the fundamental matrix equations

- Minimum Moves to Win: 7 moves
- Average Moves to Win: 39.23 moves

For StartUp to ScaleUp the difference between 7 and 39 is where companies are actually built. Those additional moves represent pivots, hiring, customer discovery, regulation, fundraising, product refinement, resilience and learning. Many companies lie even beyond the 39 moves equivalent.

The question is how many unprepared and under-prepped moves, deliberate and deterministic moves vs probabilistic moves does one plan for and then execute with precision across the spectrum of moves one needs to make in building and scaling an enterprise?

The plethora of effort domains vary widely from strategic direction to revenue management, operations, financing, talent, governance, risk and compliance to capital raises and deciding on mergers, acquisitions, new markets and new products.

The Strategic plan should be designed as a Markov Journey – Stop, Stare then Go – Rolling on.
"The beauty of a Markov chain is its relentless focus on the now. It reminds us that no matter the path we took to get here, our next step is dictated solely by where we stand."
— Unknown

When we run three-year strategic plans, we often need to stop and stare. The refrain usually would be, "What brought us till here is not what will get us to where we want to go next"

Great boards continually ask:

- Which square are we on?
- Which snakes are emerging?
- Which ladders can we deliberately build?
- What assumptions have changed?
- Which capabilities must exist three years from now?
- What probability improved this quarter?

Each square represents the current state of an enterprise. Future outcomes depend on the present state and the options ahead, rather than the path taken to reach it. Each strategic decision changes future probabilities. Great founders optimize not for the next quarter but for the next state of the business.

The notion of 'Rolling Plans' is interesting in that they incorporate how we 'Roll the Dice or Decisions' at each stage and observe the 'transition matrix' looking at the 'path dependencies' and 'expected values'

Boards often spend their time reviewing yesterday's numbers and variances. Great boards spend equal time discussing tomorrow's probabilities: Which square are we on? Which snakes are visible? Which ladders are within reach? Governance should improve the probability of success, not merely measure performance.

It is interesting how you look at the moves one makes – from a behavioral lens to a logical view.

…In the traditional Indian game, every ladder and every snake was categorised with a moral quality to teach how actions yield immediate cosmic consequences reflective of Eastern Thought**:

Feature	Concept	Moral Representation	Karmic Result
Ladders	Virtues (Punya)	Faith, Humility, Generosity, Devotion	Upward Rebirth*: Ascending instantly to higher planes of consciousness or heavenly realms (Swarg).*
Snakes	Vices (Paap)	Anger, Greed, Lust, Ego, Theft	Downward Regression*: Falling backward into lower states of animal existence, suffering, or hellish states (Narak).*

The Occidental interpretation shifts the lens:
The British took the game to England in the late 19th century. Finding the Eastern spiritual concepts of reincarnation and moksha too foreign, they changed the board mnemonics:

- They equalized the number of snakes and ladders to reflect a more optimistic, industrial worldview.
- Here come the Rows and Columns almost similar to today's Spreadsheet plans.
- Eastern virtues were swapped for logical ideals*: Industry and Thrift led up ladders, while Indulgence and Idleness sent you down snakes.*
- The United States took it one more step by renaming the game to Chutes (Slides) and Ladders like that in playpen. The snakes were replaced with fun slides and all religious or deeply moral underpinnings were completely erased, finalizing its transformation into a casual game of chance*…*
- Here comes Chance rather than anything deterministic.

The game board rules morphed based on the culture of the geography. Much like what we encounter when we build transnational organisations. You can choose any form of interpretation of your choices .. moral, industrial or mathematical .. you still do need to make choices and decisions appropriate to that state.

Rolling the Dice
"Chance favors the prepared mind."
- Louis Pasteur - microbiologist whose groundbreaking research into microorganisms laid the foundations of modern medicine, hygiene, and public health

Although entrepreneurs cannot control every throw, they can improve the quality of the dice through better talent, governance, customers, technology, capital allocation, partnerships and culture. Preparation loads the dice in favor of success.

Ladders are created through product-market fit, anchor customers, strategic partnerships, strong brands and disciplined execution. Snakes appear as founder conflict, poor governance, technology disruption, customer concentration, cash burn and complacency. The goal is not to avoid all snakes but to build resilience.

Purpose attracts talent. Talent improves execution. Execution delights customers. Customers create growth. Growth attracts better talent. Conversely, politics, silos, poor hiring and slow decisions create organizational friction that destroys momentum.

"You cannot negotiate with the dice. They care nothing for your plans, your virtues, or your fears; they only deliver the next state of your existence."
— Unknown, capturing the raw karmic math of the game board.

…The Philosophy of the Dice
- The roll of the dice represented Destiny or Cosmic Order (Prarabdha Karma). The game purposefully stripped away player control to reinforce a theological perspective: you cannot control the cards (or dice) you are dealt; you can only experience the exact consequences of where those actions land you*.*
- Historical boards deliberately featured far more snakes than ladders*. This design choice was a stark reminder of how incredibly easy it is to slip into vice, and how arduous and rare the journey to spiritual perfection truly is….*

Do our Spreadsheet Business Plans incorporate Snakes alongside the Ladders ?

The Scale Equation

"A gem cannot be polished without friction, nor a man perfected without trials."

— Seneca, ancient Stoic philosopher

Scale = (Vision × Resources × Talent × Execution × Process × Culture × Governance × Time) ÷ Friction.

The variables multiply rather than add. Weakness in one dimension limits the entire enterprise. Founders must operate simultaneously across one-, three-, five-, seven- and ten-year horizons. Decisions that optimize one horizon may undermine another. Enduring organizations balance present execution with future capability.

Winning companies continuously reinvent themselves before markets force them to. They reshape structures, capabilities, leadership and business models. Adaptability is becoming the defining competitive advantage.

The Three Journeys

"An idea is a single roll of the dice. An institution is the entire game board—a permanent matrix engineered so that no matter who rolls, the system reliably marches toward its purpose."

— Unknown

Early stage investors seek Founder-Product fit. Entrepreneurs build products and seek Product-Customer Fit. Scalepreneurs build organisations and seek Organisation-Market at Scale Fit. Riskpreneurs build probability adjusted businesses and institutions. They systematically identify, prioritise and manage uncertainty so that every decision improves the odds of future success.

Every company has three balance sheets:

1. Financial Capital
2. Organisational Capital
3. Probability Capital

Investors measure the first. Executives build the second. Riskpreneurs continuously improve the third. The key is to have these run as journeys in parallel. At each stage from StartUp to ScaleUp, its essential to context switch and toggle between the Entrereneur, Scalepreneur and Riskpreneur.

Moving the Game – Playgrounds and Playbooks

In the enterprise arena, leaders have moved the Board itself like AirBnB did with Stays or Uber with rides. Moving entire ecosystems like Apple or Amazon give us insights on how the entire Board can move. The Board then is a representation of the market itself. The squares are 'business states'. The dice indicate randomness. The rules reset are next level regulatory and governance parameters. The other players are competition. Landing one square short or ahead could alter timing completely. Missing a ladder would indicate blindness to shifts.

Conclusion

Children think Snakes and Ladders is a game of luck. Entrepreneurs discover it is a game of choices. Scalepreneurs discover it is a game of systems. Riskpreneurs discover it is a game of probabilities. Success is not reaching Square 100; it is building an organisation that continually improves its probability of winning, regardless of how the board changes.

Shapeshifters go another step as we saw the historical perspective on this game. The rules and mnemonics of the Board game can move over time, but the real move takes place when the Board itself moves.

Institutions design for probability and are quite happy to receive and reserve all the luck but not be dependent on it.

Beyond the DRHP: Building an IPO-Ready Company in India's Evolving Regulatory Landscape

Archana Balasubramanian
Partner
Agama Law Associates

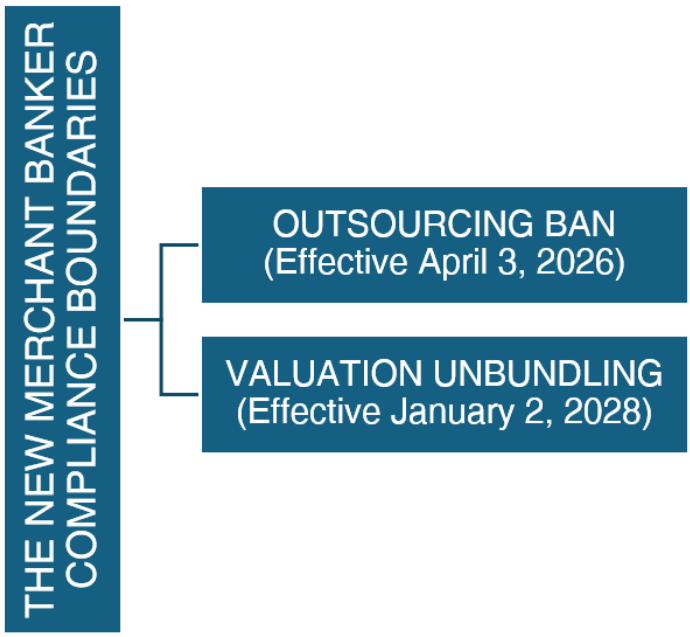
The transition from a closely held private entity to a publicly listed corporation represents a complex legal metamorphosis. While the financial narrative of valuation optimization, book-building, and capital structuring traditionally commands the forefront of the discourse, an Initial Public Offering ("IPO") is ultimately governed by its underlying legal architecture. Upon entering the public domain, an issuer's (and its directors' and promoters') historical liabilities, operational dependencies, and corporate governance frameworks are subjected to continuous, rigorous scrutiny by regulators and institutional investors.

As the Indian capital market ecosystem achieves unprecedented milestones across both the Main Board and Small and Medium Enterprise ("SME") platforms, the governing regulatory framework is evolving dynamically. Recent interventions by the Securities and Exchange Board of India ("SEBI") unequivocally establish that regulatory compliance can no longer be approached as a secondary administrative exercise; it is a fundamental strategic imperative. Within this paradigm, legal counsel must transcend traditional drafting roles to function as the strategic architects of the issuer's public corporate record.

The May 2026 Market Microstructure Reforms: Mitigating Listing-Day Volatility

Historically, the SME IPO segment was characterized by substantial retail oversubscription and erratic listing-day price volatility. To rectify these microstructural anomalies, SEBI introduced a pivotal Consultation Paper on May 21, 2026[1], purposed to overhaul the pre-open call auction mechanism for IPOs and re-listed scrips.

The historical absence of rigorous price-band flexing permitted speculative capital to distort fundamental price discovery, frequently catalyzing artificial "upper circuits." SEBI's May 2026 directive systematically extends automated price-band flexing to the SME platform, stipulating concurrently that a pre-open session is deemed valid only upon the participation of at least five unique, PAN-verified buyers and sellers.



This reform recalibrates the listing-day dynamic from speculative momentum to intrinsic valuation. For advisors, this accentuates the criticality of the Risk Factors and Basis for Issue Price disclosures. With microstructural guardrails curbing artificial inflation, initial valuations must be adequately substantiated by operational disclosures. Legal teams are tasked with ensuring any forward-looking projections are supported by verifiable contracts, insulating issuers from post-listing allegations of misrepresentation.

The 2026 Merchant Banker Overhaul: Elevating Due Diligence Standards

The synergistic dynamic between issuers, merchant bankers, and legal counsel underwent a structural transformation with the SEBI (Merchant Bankers) Amendment Regulations, effectively enforced by January 3, 2026[2], with operational transition mandates concluding in April 2026. This architecture institutionalized a stringent two-tier classification, augmented capital adequacy requirements, and instituted a mandatory Liquid Net Worth criterion.

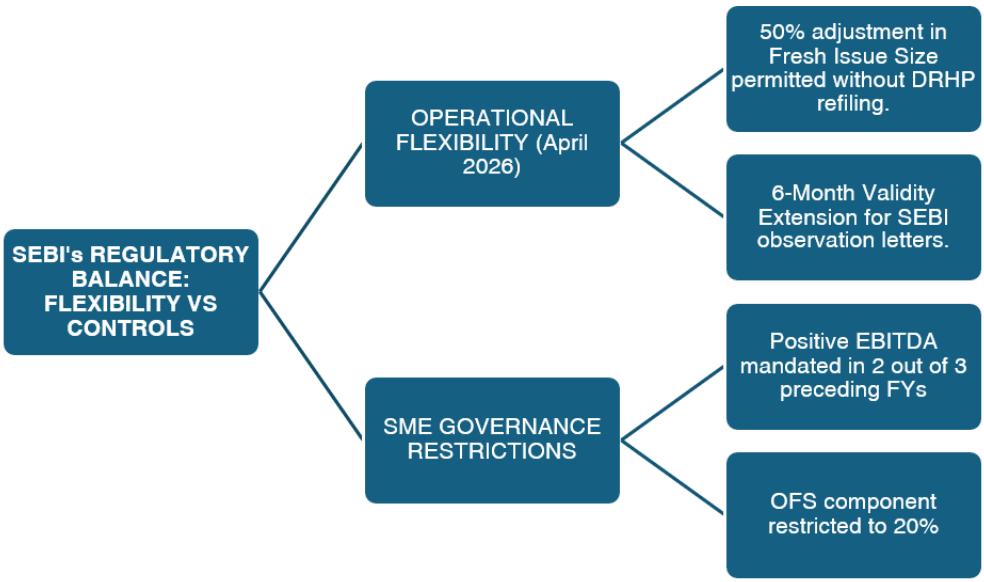
Critically, the framework enforces two pivotal operational mandates:



Regulatory Highlight: SEBI's categorical prohibition on outsourcing core merchant banking obligations mandates direct accountability for lead managers regarding due diligence integrity. Furthermore, divesting merchant bankers of valuation prerogatives effectively neutralizes a legacy conflict of interest.

Bereft of the ability to outsource due diligence functions, merchant bankers have become increasingly circumspect. Consequently, the Legal Due Diligence Report has emerged as their primary instrument of compliance fortification. Legal counsel must proactively bridge this operational divide. By pre-emptively identifying and remediating structural deficiencies, counsel endows the merchant banker with the requisite assurance to underwrite the issue within this stringent climate.

Structural Flexibility vs. Governance Restraints: Navigating the 2026 ICDR Regime

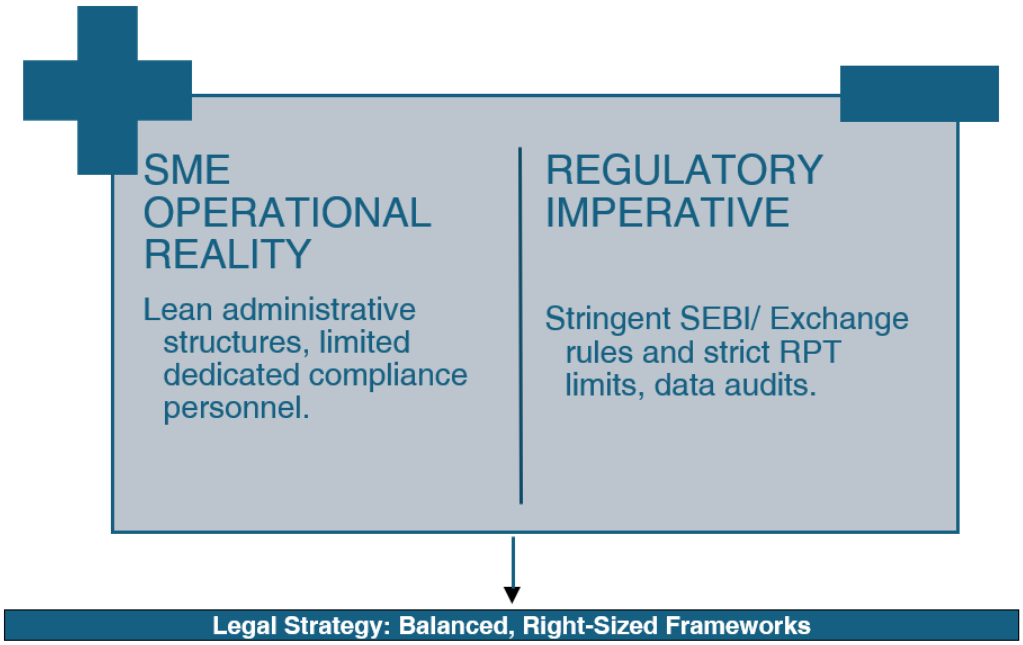
The contemporary capital market topography offers measured operational latitude, counterbalanced by rigorous eligibility criteria. On April 07, 2026[3], SEBI granted a one-time extension for SEBI observation letters expiring between April 01, 2026 and September 30, 2026, extending their validity until 30 September 2026. SEBI also communicated to the Association of Investment Bankers of India (AIBI) through a recent SEBI advisory that issuers may increase or decrease the fresh issue IPO size by up to 50% of the estimated issue size without necessitating the refiling of the DRHP on a case-to-case basis, subject to conditions prescribed.

This flexibility is meticulously counterweighed by stringent entry barriers. Within the SME echelon, entities must exhibit positive operating profit (EBITDA) in a minimum of two of the three preceding financial years, precluding structurally loss-making ventures from accessing public capital.

Furthermore, the Offer for Sale ("OFS") threshold for SMEs is capped at 20% of the aggregate issue size, with promoters restricted from liquidating in excess of 20% of their pre-offer equity. Conjoined with prohibitions on utilizing IPO proceeds for retiring promoter debt, the regulatory intent is unambiguous: public equity markets are sanctioned exclusively for genuine growth capital.

The 18-Month Horizon: Comprehensive Corporate Rationalization

A pervasive fallacy among persons interested in IPO is the presumption that the IPO lifecycle initiates upon the formal engagement of merchant bankers. In reality, an optimal public transition requires comprehensive corporate and legal rationalization 18 to 24 months preceding the prospective filing.



During the private expansion phase, operational velocity supersedes meticulous documentation. Initial legal audits routinely expose structural vulnerabilities:

- Uncodified Commercial Engagements - Material revenue vectors predicated upon lapsed contracts or informal verbal understandings.
- Real Estate Deficiencies - Core operational assets occupied under unregistered or expired leasehold agreements.
- Convoluted Intellectual Property Architecture - Mission-critical trademarks registered in the personal capacities of promoters.
- Irregular Historical Capitalization - Legacy equity allotments devoid of requisite board authorizations or exhibiting statutory filing defaults.

While such anomalies rarely impede a private enterprise's operational continuity, they manifest as critical vulnerabilities during public market due diligence. Strategic legal counsel utilizes this 18-month preparatory window to perfect titles, formalize commercial arrangements, and sanitize the capitalization table, ensuring the corporate record is pristine upon filing.

The SME Dilemma: Institutionalizing Governance Amidst Resource Constraints

A paramount challenge inherent to the listing process is the disparate operational reality of SMEs. Unlike large-cap corporate entities, mid-market SMEs operate under acute resource constraints. They conventionally lack in-house legal departments or expansive administrative infrastructure.

Legal counsel now approach this ecosystem with calibrated operational empathy. The indiscriminate imposition of complex, multi-tiered compliance frameworks tailored for conglomerates will invariably induce operational paralysis. Sophisticated legal advisory involves the bespoke design of right-sized internal controls, such as automated related-party transaction ledgers, that integrate frictionlessly into a lean corporate framework, developing requisite institutional integrity without compromising entrepreneurial agility.

Pre-IPO Reorganizations and the Doctrine of "Governance Interpretability"

In the pursuit of scale, private enterprises frequently engineer convoluted networks of subsidiaries to optimize fiscal efficiency. Preceding a public listing, this fragmented architecture must be systematically consolidated to mitigate Related Party Transaction ("RPT") exposures.

Under the prevailing regulatory regime, RPT thresholds for SMEs mirror Main Board standards, designating transactions as material should they surpass 10% of annual consolidated turnover or ₹50 crore. To navigate this landscape, counsel must apply the doctrine of Public Market Governance Interpretability.

The corporate architecture must be structured to withstand forensic analysis on a standalone basis, without reliance upon the subjective credibility of the promoters.

Reorganization Milestone	Key Legal Action Required	Strategic Value to IPO
Operational Consolidation	Merging revenue-generating affiliate entities into the primary listing vehicle.	Eliminates conflicts of interest and centralizes core revenue streams.
Contractual Formalization	Substituting informal intra-group arrangements with definitive legal documentation.	Codifies operational terms, pricing matrices, and termination provisions on an arm's length basis.
Arm's-Length Benchmarking	Calibrating residual inter-company transactions via independent transfer pricing analyses.	Mitigates RPT non-compliance risks and fortifies minority shareholder protections.
Institutionalizing Minutes	Elevating board minute standards to document substantive deliberations.	Establishes an evidentiary record of the corporate rationale underpinning transactions.

The reconstruction of these internal frameworks necessitates surgical legal precision to forge a corporate structure that is impenetrable and immune to adverse regulatory inference.

The Post-Listing Horizon*: *Navigating Market Surveillance and Regulatory Enforcement

The legal obligations intrinsic to public status extend significantly beyond the date of listing. SEBI's modern enforcement apparatus deploys automated price-band monitoring and algorithmic heuristics to identify anomalous market phenomena.

Upon the triggering of an inquiry, regulatory intervention is instantaneous. Corporate leadership frequently errs by presuming that the absence of malicious intent constitutes an adequate legal defence. Modern regulatory jurisprudence, however, prioritizes verifiable market impact and data integrity over subjective mens rea.

The preliminary data sets and narrative formulations submitted to regulatory exchanges within the initial 48-hour window are determinative. Navigating these crises demands an acute synthesis of technical market comprehension and strategic dispute foresight to contextualize complex data logs and construct an empirical defense.

In Sum

The Integrated Paradigm: Synergizing Transactional Strategy with Enforcement Acumen

The traditional architecture of corporate legal practice has historically maintained a dichotomy between transactional practitioners and dispute resolution counsel. Within an increasingly policed capital market environment, this bifurcated model represents a systemic vulnerability.

A transactional cohort operating devoid of empirical enforcement insights cannot adequately pre-empt how structural decisions will be interpreted during subsequent regulatory audits. Conversely, retaining litigation counsel solely at the point of crisis binds them to defend an immutable, historically flawed corporate record.

THE INTEGRATED ADVOCACY MODEL
TRANSACTIONAL STRATEGY	ENFORCEMENT INSIGHT
Focus: Structural optimization, prospectus drafting, and capital market procedural compliance.	Focus: Regulatory jurisprudence, evidentiary vulnerability, and litigation risk mitigation.

Optimal strategic value is generated exclusively at the intersection of these two disciplines. Every corporate restructuring and disclosure mechanism must be engineered with a forensic understanding of judicial evidentiary standards. For growth-stage enterprises navigating the contemporary Indian regulatory framework, fusing pragmatic commercial structuring with forward-looking enforcement intelligence transforms the corporate record into a robust defensive asset, ensuring the transition to the public markets is anchored upon an unassailable foundation.

A New Track for Corporate Insolvency

Dr.Raghav Pandey
Assistant Professor
National Law University
-Delhi

In these very pages in 2022, I argued that the Insolvency and Bankruptcy Code's (IBC) central weakness was its test of corporate insolvency. The IBC had promised time-bound resolution and largely delivered it once a case was inside the process, yet the process could not be entered without an order of admission from the Adjudicating Authority (AA), and that order was the point at which everything slowed down. I noted then that the AA had, in certain cases, taken close to two years merely to admit an application, and that the Supreme Court in Vidarbha Industries Power Ltd v Axis Bank Ltd[1] had made matters worse by holding that admission was discretionary even where debt and default stood established. The choke point sat at the tribunal's door. The IBC (Amendment) Act, 2026[2] now makes two fundamental changes.

For one class of cases it removes the AA route altogether. For the rest it takes the discretion out of the lock. The first is achieved by a new Chapter IV-A, the Creditor-Initiated Insolvency Resolution Process, or CIIRP, inserted as sections 58A to 58K.[3] The second is achieved by a single word substituted in section 7(5)(a), where the tribunal's "may" admit becomes "shall" admit, reversing Vidarbha by statute. Read together, these are one strategy aimed at the same disease from both ends, and that is why the Amendment is a welcome move.

It has been argued widely in media and in academia that the IBC has failed. It can be reasonably averred with conviction that it drastically improved upon the SICA and BIFR regime it replaced, dragging Indian insolvency from a world of indefinite reference into one of statutory deadlines. The difficulty was always the entry gate. Under section 7,9 or 10 nothing happens until the tribunal admits the application. Admission is what fixes the insolvency commencement date, what triggers the automatic moratorium under section 14, and what displaces the debtor's management under sections 17 to 20. Every consequence of the process hangs on a single judicial act, and so a delay at that act delays everything.

Vidarbha turned a queue into a very wide judicial discretion, something which the policy makers had planned against at the time of enactment of the IBC. The Court read the word "may" in section 7(5)(a) as conferring on the Adjudicating Authority a power to decline admission even where the financial creditor had proved both debt and default, inviting the tribunal to weigh the debtor's overall solvency before letting the case in. A defaulting debtor now had a reason to contest admission itself, and a further year or two of value could bleed out of a running business while it did so.

The 2026 Amendment answers this at the root by changing "may" to "shall" and requiring that applications be admitted or rejected within fourteen days, with written reasons if the tribunal takes longer. So the factual question that Vidarbha allowed to sprawl is closed at the outset.

CIIRP begins without the AA in the picture at all. The initiating creditor must belong to a class of financial institutions notified by the Central Government, so operational creditors and the debtor itself cannot start it, which already narrows the track to repeat-player institutional lenders. Before anything is commenced, that creditor must obtain the approval of notified-class financial creditors holding at least fifty-one per cent in value of the debt owed to such creditors, give the debtor at least thirty days to make a representation, and after considering it obtain the fifty-one per cent approval a second time within thirty days. Only then does the creditor appoint an insolvency professional as resolution professional, who makes a public announcement.

The process, in the words of the statute, "shall be deemed to have commenced from the date of such public announcement," and the Notes on Clauses are blunt that "no order or direction from the Adjudicating Authority or the Board shall be required for the same."[4] Commencement has become a private act.

This way the business remains preserved. Under section 58F the management continues to vest in the board. The resolution professional attends its meetings and holds a right to reject any resolution passed there, and a rejected resolution cannot take effect. This is debtor-in-possession with a veto, and it is the sharpest departure from ordinary CIRP, where sections 17 to 20 strip the board of its powers on day one. The moratorium, too, is no longer automatic. Section 58G confers no stay on commencement. The resolution professional must apply to the tribunal for one, backed by the creditors' committee or, before that committee exists, by notified-class creditors holding fifty-one per cent in value, and the moratorium runs only from the date of that application. A halt on the debtor's creditors has become a deliberate, justified intervention rather than an automatic incident of the process.

The clock is therefore much shorter and the exit is facilitated. Section 58D requires the resolution to be completed within one hundred and fifty days, extendable once by up to forty-five, against CIRP's one hundred and eighty plus ninety. Where no plan is approved in time, or the debtor fails to cooperate, or a plan is rejected, section 58H directs the tribunal to convert the process into a full CIRP. The design is easier to hold in view when the two tracks are placed side by side.

Table 1: CIRP and CIIRP compared (design parameters)

Design parameter	CIRP (Chapter II)	CIIRP (Chapter IV-A)
Who may initiate	Financial creditor, operational creditor, or corporate debtor (ss. 7, 9, 10)	Only a financial creditor of a notified class of financial institutions (s. 58B)
How it commences	Order of admission by the Adjudicating Authority	Public announcement by the resolution professional; no tribunal order required (s. 58B)
Who runs the company	Interim/resolution professional; board displaced (ss. 17–20)	Board continues; resolution professional holds a veto over its resolutions (s. 58F)
Moratorium	Automatic on admission (s. 14)	Discretionary; applied for, and runs from the application date (s. 58G)
Outer timeline	180 days, extendable once by 90 days, subject to the 330-day outer limit	150 + 45 days (s. 58D)
Plan approval	Committee at 66%; tribunal order under s. 31	Committee at 66%; tribunal order under s. 31 (mutatis mutandis) (s. 58J)
Exit or fallback	Liquidation	Conversion into CIRP, deemed a section 7 admission (s. 58H)

As can be read across the table, the two tracks converge only at the plan-approval stage and diverge at every point before it. CIRP is adjudication-led from its first act. The tribunal is its entry gate, the source of its commencement date, and the trigger of both its moratorium and its displacement of management. CIIRP is private in each of those respects and calls the tribunal in only later. Where CIRP fails into liquidation, CIIRP fails into CIRP, and that fallback is what holds the statutory design together.

The obvious but surface reading of CIIRP is that it means less court. That reading is not entirely correct, and the error is worth correcting because it misses what the Amendment actually does. CIIRP instead of abolishing judicial supervision relocates it. The Adjudicating Authority is removed from the threshold of the process only to be repositioned at its perimeter and its exit. It enters on the debtor's objection under section 58C, which may be brought within thirty days of commencement and can render a wrongly commenced process void ab initio. It enters again to confirm or reject the moratorium under section 58G and to approve the plan under section 58J. Subsequently it enters, most consequentially of all, to order conversion under section 58H.

The conversion bridge is where the design shows its intelligence. When a CIIRP fails, the conversion order under section 58H is "deemed to be an order of admission of an application under section 7," with the initiating creditor treated as the section 7 applicant, and it brings with it the automatic moratorium and the displacement of the board that CIIRP had withheld. The debtor who refused to cooperate inside the gentle track is delivered directly into the harsh one, having lost the thirty-day window and the void-ab-initio remedy that only the entry stage offered. It is pertinent that this arrangement does its most important work without ever being used. Because the in-court track is loaded behind the out-of-court track, the debtor's dominant strategy inside CIIRP is cooperation, and the resolution professional's veto is credible precisely because the alternative to accepting it is a full CIRP in which the board no longer sits.

None of this is to say the framework is beyond question, and a candid appraisal must name where the pressure will fall. Commencement is a private act, and the debtor's only pre-emptive safeguard is the section 58C objection after the fact. A creditor's assertion of default is not tested by any neutral authority before the public announcement goes out. That is a real shift of risk onto the corporate debtor. It is defensible only because the notified initiating class is confined to institutional lenders whose default records the Information Utility can corroborate, and because the void-ab-initio and conversion remedies stand behind the objection. Withdrawal under section 58-I opens only after the committee is constituted, closes at the first invitation for resolution plans, and needs a ninety per cent vote, and commentators are right that so tight an aperture may discourage settlements that ought to be encouraged.

The framework awaits the notification of the eligible creditor and debtor classes and the finalisation of IBBI's process regulations, of which only a discussion paper with draft rules presently exists.[5] It is important to note that the genesis of the scheme lies in the IBBI Expert Committee whose 2023 Report on a Creditor-Led Resolution Approach[6] proposed the out-of-court, debtor-in-possession model, though the enacted version departs from it in two respects worth flagging to any reader who consults the report. The Committee would have made the moratorium automatic, where the Act makes it discretionary. It also set the timeline at one hundred and twenty plus forty-five days, where the Act sets it at one hundred and fifty plus forty-five.

For the capital-markets reader the payoff is direct. Institutional lenders gain a resolution track whose start they control and whose clock is shorter than the one they know. A corporate debtor, for its part, is spared the decapitation of a running business on the first day and carries less of the stigma that a section 7 admission drags with it. Resolution applicants inherit going concerns that have not bled value in an admission queue. Bench time, the tribunal's scarcest resource, is recovered and spent on genuine disputes rather than on uncontested admissions it was always going to grant. And the corporate debt market gets what it most wants from any insolvency regime, which is distress resolution that comes earlier and prices more predictably, because predictable resolution is finally a pricing input for credit. What I diagnosed in 2022 as the choke point at the tribunal's door, the 2026 Amendment has answered from both ends. It remains to be seen whether the notifications and the regulations honour the design, but the design itself is sound, and that is more than the regime has been able to say about its doorway for a very long time.

The Family Office as the Engine Room of Governance

Dr.Nupur Pavan Bang
Founder & Chief Family Business Navigator
Bodhi Advisory & Nurturing Group

The number of family offices in India has grown almost sevenfold in six years, from about 45 in 2018 to nearly 300 in 2024, managing close to 30 billion dollars between them (PwC, 2024). Anecdotal evidence suggests that the actual numbers are much larger. The instinct behind the boom is sound. Though the understanding of what a family office is for is far too narrow. Ask most Indian families and they will describe an investment desk: a place to manage the wealth, optimise the tax, and park the surplus. Investing is probably less than a tenth of what a serious family office should be doing. The other nine tenths is the quiet, unglamorous work of holding a family together across generations.

That work has a name. It is governance. And the reason most Indian families struggle with it is that they treat governance as a document to be signed once and filed away, when it is really a set of meetings, decisions and records that have to keep happening, year after year, whether or not anyone feels like having them. About a third of family businesses reach the second generation, roughly 12 per cent reach the third, and only 3 per cent survive into the fourth (Ward, 1987). The families that cross that last threshold are rarely the ones with the cleverest patriarch. They are the ones who built a structure to run the governance and then resourced someone to keep it running. Whether that structure is formally called a family office, housed within a holding company, or handled by a dedicated unit or division, it is doing the essential work of a family office.

Governance is a verb, and somebody has to do it

The gap in Indian family businesses is not a gap in intent. Most owners know they should have a family constitution, a shareholders' agreement, a forum where the family talks about the business. The gap is that nobody owns the doing of it. Globally, only 30 per cent of family businesses have a constitution and just 19 per cent have a formal mechanism to resolve conflict (PwC, 2023). The Indian figures are almost certainly worse. The corporate side of the house has no such problem, because the law will not allow it. The Ministry of Corporate Affairs, SEBI and the Reserve Bank mandate boards, committees, audits and disclosures, so they get done. On the family side, nothing is mandatory, and so very often nothing happens.

This is precisely the vacuum a family office should fill. Someone has to convene the family council, take the minutes and circulate them. Someone has to schedule the family business board, the bridge that carries the family's voice into the operating company. Someone has to run the values sessions for the children, track the will and the holding structure, and keep the dividend policy alive. Merck of Darmstadt, in business since 1668 and now in its thirteenth generation, runs a family university with structured modules in family history, finance and governance that every young member must complete before they can stand for a board seat (Bhatnagar, 2019). That is the machinery of continuity, and it sits well outside the remit of an investment desk. A family office that does only the investing has built a treasury and called it something grander.

The expensive problems all live in the overlap

The three-circle model of family, ownership and business is familiar to everyone. The trouble sits where the circles overlap. A relative asks the founder to place an unsuitable son in the business; the founder knows the boy is wrong for the job, yet as a family member, he cannot say no, and the business quietly absorbs the cost. A founder used to drawing money on a need basis finds it difficult when the private equity investors on his board tell him that dividends have to be planned against profit and future investment. The conflict lies in the overlap between owner and manager.

Left unmanaged, these overlaps escalate along a predictable path: a dilemma becomes a deviation, the deviation invites scrutiny, scrutiny hardens into a difference of opinion, differences accumulate into a dispute, and the dispute ends in litigation, ultimately destruction of wealth and relationships. Governance interrupts that cycle, and it can do so at any stage.

Studying 530 Spanish family firms, Arteaga and Menéndez-Requejo (2017) found that those which adopted a written family constitution saw measurably stronger performance within two years, with the effect most pronounced in later-generation firms and those with several family owners, exactly the families where overlaps multiply. The family office is what turns those rules into practice: an owners' council where shareholders air their concerns, a dividend policy that pre-empts the next owner-manager-investor conflict, an employment policy that settles who may join the business before a relative asks. Rules written and then operated stop differences from becoming disputes.

The family must scale its governance as fast as it grows

A first- or second-generation family is easy to govern. There are one or two children, the business is expanding, and roles find themselves. By the third and fourth generation the family has moved from a sibling partnership to a cousins' consortium, with seven, eight, nine claimants, spouses from different backgrounds, and members living in different cities. Mobility and opportunity have scattered families that once shared a single roof and a single dining table where values passed down by osmosis. When the natural glue weakens, structure has to take its place, and the structure has to grow at least as fast as the family.

The danger is governance that calcifies. Murugappa wrote one of the earliest family constitutions in the country, yet it carried no clause on whether women could sit on the holding company board, and that omission erupted when Valli Arunachalam went to court for a seat after her father's death (The News Minute, 2020). A document is only as good as its capacity to be amended. Contrast the Godrej family, which in 2024 restructured a 127 year old group through a carefully negotiated Family Settlement Agreement and avoided the open warfare that has consumed many business houses (Business Standard, 2024). The difference is active stewardship of the governance, and that is a family office function. It runs the next generation forums and shadow boards that let young members rehearse a board meeting before they sit on a real one. It commissions the mentoring that decides which cousin is groomed for which vertical. It holds the liquidity to fund a next-generation member who wants to build something new rather than inherit something old. None of this happens by accident; it happens because an institution is actively working to make it happen.

Conclusion: from vault to engine room

John Ward made a simple observation that family businesses forget at their peril: families are so busy running the business that they neglect to plan for the family. While the business has its vision, strategy, capital and board, the family needs a vision, values, agreements and forums planned in parallel, and the ownership needs its own structure rethought as the enterprise grows. The family office is the only entity positioned to hold all three planning processes at once, the family, the ownership and the business, and to keep them aligned.

So the question for every chief investment officer and head of a family office is worth asking plainly. Of the pillars that carry a family across generations, the values, the communication forums, the ownership agreements, the conflict resolution, the next-generation development and the administration that keeps them all alive, how many does your family office actually operate today? If the honest answer is one, you have a long way to go, and the time to start the conversation with your family is now. Protecting the wealth is the easy part. Building the engine room that protects the family who owns the wealth is the work that decides whether there is a fourth generation at all.

10 Things to Revitalise INDIA's Corporate Bond Market

Connecting India's Growth Aspirations to Its Capital-Raising Constraints

Dr.V.Shunmugam
Partner
MCQube

India's goal to become a developed nation by 2047, known as the Viksit Bharat vision, depends on a financial and structural foundation: effectively channelling the country's extensive savings into long-term, large-scale investments necessary for development. Among all the tools within this framework, the corporate bond market is the most critical yet still underdeveloped. Currently, it constitutes about 18 per cent of GDP, remains chronically illiquid, is predominantly controlled by institutions, and is largely inaccessible to retail investors. This gap signifies a major shortcoming in the alignment of India's financial system with its developmental goals.

The diagnosis is sobering when compared to peers. India's corporate bond market is only one-fifth the size of Malaysia's and just one-quarter of South Korea's. While the government securities market is transparent, electronic, and T+1-settled, with a turnover ratio of 5.9, the corporate bond market — which settles on the same infrastructure — lags behind, with a ratio of only 0.27. It remains mainly voice-brokered over-the-counter, lacks a public real-time price feed, and has about 80,000 retail investors out of 155 million in equities. These are not natural market results but the outcome of specific institutional choices.

The financing case is equally stark. India's infrastructure investment needs from 2025 to 2035. However, the banking sector—constrained by maturity mismatches and capital constraints—can provide only 30 to 40 per cent of this funding. The rest must be raised through the bond market. Insurance companies and pension funds hold about ₹77 to ₹90 lakh crore in long-term liabilities, yet they invest less than 4 per cent in infrastructure bonds, despite an ideal asset-liability alignment. The necessary savings, issuers, and investors are in place; what is lacking is the institutional infrastructure to connect them.

> India's bond market is not underdeveloped because India is poor. It is underdeveloped because the institutional architecture to connect its savings to its investment needs has never been built.

The following are ten practical actions, each based on evidence from markets that encountered similar barriers and successfully overcame them. Most of these actions can be implemented through regulatory circulars and budget notifications rather than new legislation. They are organised into three waves: immediate steps to enhance price transparency and establish a functioning secondary market; near-term reforms to mobilise institutional and retail capital; and long-term, structural reforms to secure the market's future.

Wave One — The Immediate Foundations

1. Make Prices Public: India-TRACE

The most effective reform costs the least. Exchanges already collect data on every over-the-counter corporate bond trade under SEBI's 2014 mandate, but this simply is not public. A single SEBI circular requiring exchanges to publish all trade reports — for free, within fifteen minutes, on an India-TRACE portal and via API, with data shared from the central settlement system — would remove the main barrier to retail participation, institutional benchmarking, and market-making: price opacity. The 2002 American TRACE reform reduced bid-ask spreads by 30–50 basis points and saved investors billions annually. India already possesses this data; it just needs the will to publish it.

2. Create Market-Makers: The CBMM Regime

A liquid secondary market requires initial seeding. A regulatory notification appointing about fifteen Corporate Bond Market Makers, tasked with providing two-way quotes on hundreds of benchmark securities during trading hours, subject to specified maximum spreads, would establish the continuous pricing essential to other reforms. Incentives such as reduced risk weights on market-maker inventories, stamp-duty relief, and a modest fee per round-trip trade make this commitment feasible. Additionally, a monthly public scorecard ensures transparency. Without reliable two-way prices, neither retail platforms nor institutional mandates can operate effectively.

3. Lower the Door: A ₹1,000 Minimum Lot

For decades, the ₹1 lakh minimum ticket prevented ninety-nine per cent of India's potential bond investors from participating. While the recent move to lower the floor to ₹10,000 is a positive step, it does not go far enough. A ₹1,000 minimum—aligned with the Bharat Bond ETF—would make bond investing truly accessible to middle-class households, who already invest about ₹500 per month in equity systematic plans. Retail distribution platforms cannot effectively serve these savers until the investment minimum is small enough to be routine and unremarkable.

4. De-Risk Greenfield Projects: A Guarantee Facility
Much of India's infrastructure needs funding, with projects often starting as sub-investment-grade greenfield risks, which long-term investors typically avoid. A ₹25,000–50,000 crore India Infrastructure Bond Guarantee Facility—initially funded modestly by the government with contributions from multilateral partners, offering first-loss and partial credit guarantees—could upgrade BBB-rated project bonds to AA-rated, more attractive bond instruments. With a leverage ratio of eight to twelve times, a ₹50,000 crore fund could support ₹4–6 lakh crore of infrastructure bonds over ten years. No other public expenditure offers a higher multiplier effect for the bond market.

5. Revive Credit Hedging: New CDS Guidelines
India's credit default swap market has remained largely inactive since the restrictive guidelines of 2013. In the absence of active hedging, market-making involves significant unhedged credit risk, making it costly and vulnerable. Updated central bank rules—allowing banks to hedge bond portfolios via CDS without physical holdings and letting insurers and non-bank financiers sell protection on investment-grade entities—could reduce market-maker capital needs by approximately 30–40 per cent and foster a more liquid secondary market, which is essential for institutional investors.

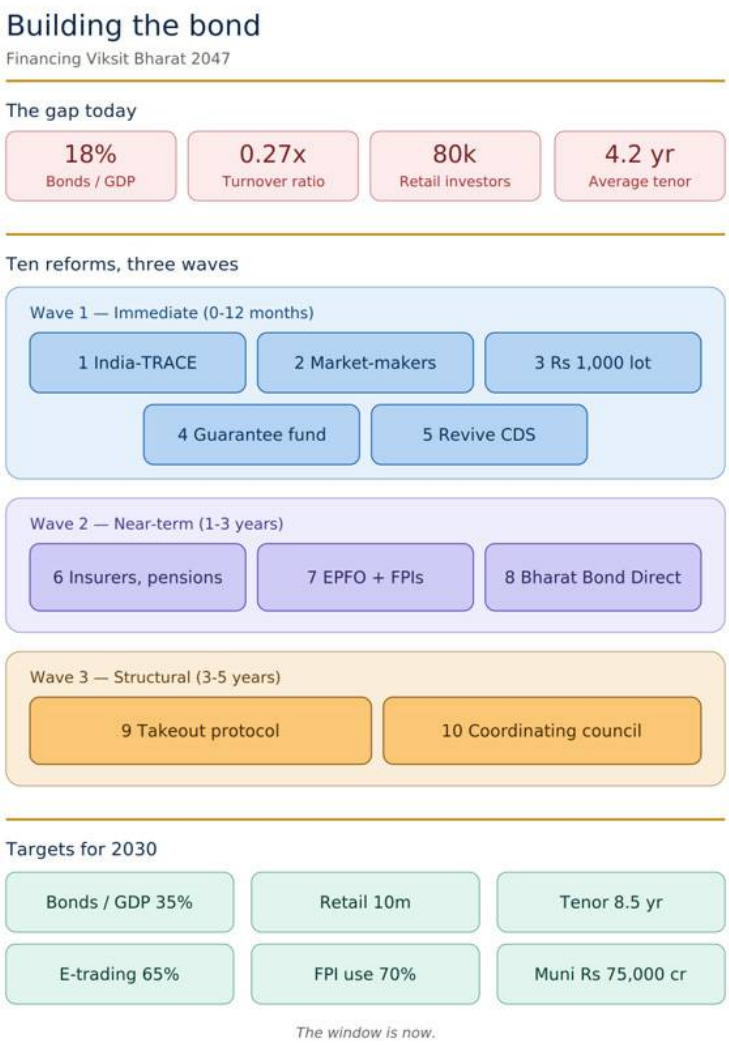
Wave Two — Unlocking the Capital That Already Exists

6. Open the Door for Insurers and Pension Funds
India already has a substantial pool of patient capital; the challenge is ensuring it flows to where it's most needed. A single joint initiative by the insurance and pension regulators to establish a dedicated infrastructure-bond category—permitting, for example, up to 10% of insurance assets and 5% of retirement funds to be invested in credit-enhanced, highly rated listed infrastructure bonds—could generate demand of around ₹6 lakh crore. The IL&FS default, often cited as a concern, was a governance failure of an opaque, unrated holding company, fundamentally different from credit-enhanced, AA-rated, listed infrastructure bonds that are transparently priced. One failure should not hinder numerous successes.

7. Move the Provident Fund Corpus
The Employees' Provident Fund organisation manages approximately ₹22 lakh crore, aligned with an average twenty-year liability—ideal for infrastructure bonds with a fifteen to twenty-year term. A notification from the finance ministry introducing a 3–5 per cent infrastructure-bond category, limited to eligible takeout bonds, could release ₹66,000 crore to over ₹1 lakh crore immediately. This represents the largest single institutional demand opportunity without new legislation. South Korea's similar national pension mandate of 2009 is credited with quadrupling infrastructure bond issuance within five years.

8. Put Bonds in Every Pocket: A Mobile-First Platform
India's advanced digital public infrastructure is globally admired, yet it remains underutilized in the bond market. A retail bond platform based on UPI—featuring a ₹1,000 minimum, Aadhaar-based onboarding, real-time India-TRACE prices, and a market-maker exit guarantee within a few business days—could transform the 800 million UPI users and over 1.3 billion Aadhaar-enrolled citizens into the distribution network for a retail bond market that currently does not exist. In contrast, the Philippines launched its mobile bond app with far less digital infrastructure, and its first retail bond was oversubscribed seventeen times, with most transactions under a few thousand rupees and the average investor just over thirty years old.

9. Make Indian Bonds Worth the Hedge for Foreign Investors
Foreign portfolio investors typically utilise only about a third to two-fifths of their available limits, primarily due to 3–4 per cent annual hedging costs rather than concerns about India's creditworthiness. These costs make an 8 per cent Indian AA bond less attractive compared to a 5.8 per cent US investment-grade bond when fully hedged. Enhancing the onshore three-to-five-year rupee-dollar swap market and reducing the voluntary retention lock-in could lower hedging costs by approximately one percentage point, making Indian corporate bonds more appealing to European pension funds. Notably, Korea's similar reforms tripled foreign corporate bond holdings within five years.



Wave Three — Anchoring the Market's Future

10. Recycle Bank Capital — and Coordinate the Whole Effort
The final reform has two main aspects, as the market's long-term stability depends on both a mechanism and an oversight entity. The mechanism is a National Takeout Financing Protocol: a standardised, regulator-approved framework for transforming construction-phase bank loans into listed infrastructure bonds at operational maturity, managed by a single development institution with a ninety-day processing goal. Every rupee of bank capital recycled through takeout creates three to four rupees of new greenfield lending. With an annual takeout of ₹50,000 crore, this results in about ₹2.5 lakh crore of new project finance capacity, generated not from additional public spending but from recycling existing capital.

The steward is a Bond Market Development Council, a formal sub-committee of the Financial Stability and Development Council. It is chaired by the Finance Secretary, with securities and central bank regulators as co-chairs, and it meets quarterly to achieve published targets. Without this council, each reform would proceed at different speeds and in various directions, resulting in the fragmented market ecosystem seen today. Malaysia's joint regulator masterplan, which served as a model for such a council, is credited with boosting that country's bond market from 60 to 95 per cent of GDP. Additionally, a futures market for benchmark bonds has been developed to provide market-makers with the tools needed for duration and credit hedging, completing the risk-management infrastructure.

> The bond market is not a luxury of developed economies. It is the infrastructure of economic ambition — as essential to Viksit Bharat as the highways, ports and power grids it finances.

The Window Is Now

India is currently in a growth phase that uniquely supports the development of this market. Corporate investment interest is increasing, infrastructure expenditure is at an all-time high, and foreign investment—spurred by inclusion in global bond indexes—is at its peak in ten years. Retail investors, motivated by their experience with systematic equity plans, are eager to participate in capital markets, and the digital infrastructure is in place to deliver bonds to hundreds of millions of smartphones. Importantly, the regulatory framework is effectively complete: the ten strategies outlined can be executed with existing legal authority—without new laws, extra budgets, or waiting for India to reach higher income levels before developing the market it urgently needs.

None of these barriers is unique. Bank dominance, price opacity, lack of market-makers, retail exclusion, and the absence of long-term instruments have all been addressed previously— in the United States, South Korea, Malaysia, Australia, and the Philippines—via reforms that India can readily replicate. The case has been made, and a plan is in place. The next step is effective execution.

> The window is open. The case is made. The plan is written. India's bond market is waiting to be built.

What Reforms are Needed to Improve the Capital Market?

Bhupen Dalal
Chairman
Foods & Inns Ltd.

1. History
The Bombay Stock Exchange (BSE) was established in 1875, three years before the Tokyo Stock Exchange, which was established in 1878. The capital market in India has undergone many changes since the inception of the Stock Exchange.

2. Regulatory History
Over time, about a dozen stock exchanges were established across the country. The regulator for all of them was the Ministry of Finance, through a department called the Controller of Capital Issues (CCI). With barely a dozen staff members, the CCI managed to oversee all stock exchanges in the country. At that time, any public issue of more than ₹25 lakh in a year required permission from the CCI. In the case of existing companies, even the valuation was carried out by them.

The Securities and Exchange Board of India (SEBI) was established in 1988 but derived its statutory powers in 1993. Today, it regulates all stock exchanges, brokers, and intermediaries, and exercises certain quasi-judicial powers. The total strength of the erstwhile CCI was only about a dozen personnel, whereas today SEBI's staff numbers over 1,000.

3. Issues with Over-Regulation
There is no doubt about the need for a regulator, given the considerable increase in volumes and activity in the capital market. However, SEBI has unfortunately been dubbed as a "circular-making machine." Some notable examples are discussed below.

3.1 Insider Trading Rules
The rules are so stringent that in one case, the husband of an HR manager, who dealt in shares worth just ₹1,000, was hauled up by SEBI for contravention of insider trading rules. This was indeed extremely disproportionate.

3.2 Definition of "Promoter"
The definition of "promoter" does not exist in the same manner in any developed country are promoters personally responsible for all acts of omission or commission by the company? SEBI and the stock exchanges have such wide powers that they can freeze the demat accounts not only of the primary promoter but also of family members who are treated as part of the "promoter group."

The fundamental purpose of a limited liability company is that a shareholder's liability is limited to the amount invested. However, merely by virtue of being a promoter or entrepreneur, one runs the risk of punitive action from both SEBI and the stock exchanges.

3.3 Trading Restrictions During the Shut Period
SEBI has issued circulars prohibiting promoters and key managerial persons from trading in the shares of their own company from the last day of the quarter until the accounts are adopted and for two days thereafter. The rationale is that promoters and Key Managerial Personnel (KMPs) are likely to possess inside information and should therefore be barred from trading.

However, if the shut period begins on 31 March, the KMPs would still have some indication of the company's profitability on that very date. Yet, they are barred from buying or selling shares from 1st April for the next 45 to 48 days. In my opinion, such a restriction amounts to an infringement of the right to property as enshrined in the Constitution of India and is unreasonable. Effectively the shut peroid to deal in shares is over 64 days in an year. This makes no sense.

3.4 Stockbroker Compliance
The compliance requirements imposed on stockbrokers by SEBI are so complicated and burdensome that many old and established brokers have chosen to exit the stockbroking business entirely. Sadly, a single "no-frills" broker is believed to control approximately 25% of the total market volume. The regulator is creating a monopoly against the old and established brokers.

This results in excessive concentration as well as a severe lack of advisory services, since it is the full-service broker with a dedicated research department who provides meaningful guidance to investorr, while the no frills brokers do only execute transacts without providing advice . The 1st time investor are attracted to trade with these type of brokers without any advice.

4. Capital Market Instruments
At present, the instruments available to retail investors are largely limited to equity shares. Products such as preference shares, compulsory convertible debentures, and optionally convertible debentures have virtually disappeared from the market. Debentures are now primarily the preserve of mutual funds and financial institutions, not retail investors.

The investor community needs a far broader range of instruments beyond equity alone. The issuance of bonds by a company currently requires them to be rated and secured by assets. Unsecured debentures, commonly called junk bonds, are not permitted beyond a maturity of 18 months. This law needs to be changed.

Junk bonds are widely prevalent overseas, particularly when a blue-chip company issues unsecured bonds to finance a corporate acquisition. India should also consider permitting such instruments in a regulated but practical manner.

5. Impact of the Landmark Budget of 21 July 1991

The landmark Budget of 21 July 1991, presented by Dr. Manmohan Singh, brought about the dismantling of the License Raj and opened the Indian market to Foreign Institutional Investors (FIIs) for the first time. This inflow, though sometimes characterized as "hot money," gave the market considerable depth and liquidity.

However, whenever FIIs sold en masse, the market slumped sharply. Earlier, similar disruptions occurred whenever LIC or UTI sold large holdings. The market would slump on their selling and surge on their buying.

With the growth of the mutual fund industry, now having an AUM of approximately ₹81 lakh crore, the market has developed a substantial domestic buffer. Mutual funds now serve as an effective counterbalance, moderating the volatility that once accompanied large institutional sell-offs.

6. Ease of Doing Business: Recommendations

In keeping with the stated objective of the Government of India to promote ease of doing business, the following reforms are recommended.

6.1 KYC and Documentation

The paperwork required to comply with KYC rules should be drastically simplified. It is quite daunting for someone entering the market for the first time to fill page after page of forms merely to open a demat account. The equally cumbersome procedure of registering with a broker should also be standardised and minimised.

6.2 Bond Market Access for Retail Investors

The debenture and bond market should be made accessible to retail investors. Even the Reserve Bank of India is attempting to sell government securities directly to the retail market. Therefore, all restrictions that currently impede retail participation in the corporate bond market should be reviewed and liberalised.

6.3 Unsecured Paper and Junk Bonds

It is desirable to amend the relevant provisions of the Companies Act and remove the 18-month ceiling on the issuance of unsecured paper. Junk bonds issued by blue-chip companies could offer retail investors better returns. At present, the bond market is almost entirely dominated by the mutual fund industry and domestic financial institutions.

6.4 Compliance Burden for Stockbrokers

The compliance burden imposed on stockbrokers by SEBI should be drastically reduced. The original objective of SEBI was to protect the retail investor. However, the ever-growing number of circulars and requirements has made life for brokers and investors far more difficult than originally envisaged.

In particular, the regulations imposed on Registrar and Transfer Agents (RTAs) concerning companies with non-resident investors based overseas are excessively onerous and are actively deterring NRI investment into India.

7. Taxation

7.1 Dividend Taxation

Dividends paid by a company should not be taxed in the hands of shareholders, as this constitutes double taxation, since the company has already paid tax on the same profits. For many years, dividend income in India was tax-free.

It is recommended that dividend income up to ₹10,00,000 be made tax-free. This would provide relief to small and medium investors without extending the benefit to the ultra-rich.

7.2 Capital Gains Tax

With the erosion of purchasing power over time, it is recommended that capital gains tax for investments held for three years or more be reduced to zero. This would ensure that long-term investors are not penalised for remaining invested in the market.

8. OTC and SME Platforms

8.1 OTC Exchange

The OTC Exchange was launched with much fanfare but soon became defunct, and its promise was never fulfilled.

8.2 SME Platform

The SME platform was a positive development. However, the concern is that while stock exchanges and SEBI permitted SME companies to make public issues, knowing fully well that these are inherently riskier than main-board listings, SEBI is now targeting companies, their promoters, and merchant bankers long after the IPOs have been completed.

Just as mutual funds are required to state, “Mutual fund investments are subject to market risk. Please read the offer documents carefully before investing,” the same principle should be applied to the SME platform.

A clear and prominent warning should be included in all SME offer documents, stating that SME issues carry higher risk, are less liquid than main-board listings, and may involve first-generation entrepreneurs or promoters without a long track record. Investors should be fully aware of these risks before investing.

Rather than conducting a post-mortem after the event, investors should be suitably cautioned at the time of the public issue itself. It must also be acknowledged that investor greed has contributed to many SME issues being heavily oversubscribed. The author does not oppose SME issues as such, but advocates for stronger investor warnings instead of punitive action after the fact.

9. Conclusion

In conclusion, India’s capital market has made great strides and has considerably deepened over the decades. However, the average retail investor, who was supposed to be the primary beneficiary of SEBI’s protection, is instead burdened with unnecessary paperwork.

The heavy compliance requirements imposed on brokers, and the severe punishment meted out even for minor infractions, have caused many long-established brokers to exit the stockbroking business entirely and become sub-brokers to larger firms.

It is the duty of both the Government of India and SEBI to genuinely become investor-friendly by simplifying processes, broadening the range of available instruments, rationalizing taxation, and ensuring that regulation serves its original purpose: protecting and empowering the ordinary investor.

The Evolving Interplay Between Commercial Banks and Capital Markets in India

Few relationships in finance are as well documented as the one between a country's financial development and its long-run growth. Cross-country evidence shows that financial deepening, whether measured by credit-to-GDP, market capitalisation or the breadth of intermediation, improves how efficiently an economy uses its capital, and with it the pace of growth. As economies mature, the shape of their financial systems change and that shape matters.

In India or financial system has evolved around Bank credit with most Corporates using Debt as a leverage to expand. It is only now as we evolve that we see that the deepening of Securities market tilts the system towards market-based intermediation. This does not make Banking obsolete; it modifies the Bank's role from sole originator of credit to several roles as originator, underwriter, market-maker and liquidity backstop across the capital-market value chain.

Disintermediation and the Strategic Adaptation of Banks

In India, the 1991 liberalisation set this shift in motion, triggering a pronounced phase of disintermediation, the process by which savers and borrowers deal directly through the markets, bypassing the Banks that once stood between them. The clearest symptom was a financialisation of household savings: money that had sat in low-yielding deposits moved into mutual funds, equities and other instruments, eroding the deposit franchise Banks had long taken for granted.

Banks responded by reshaping their business around fee and other non-interest income and a far more active capital-market role. The larger institutions set up dedicated merchant-banking and securities arms, SBI Capital Markets being the obvious example, to house debt syndication, equity and debt capital-market (ECM and DCM) origination, IPO book-running and wealth management. As three-in-one savings, demat and trading accounts and digital onboarding spread, market access reached well beyond the big cities. The lesson has held up: in a liberalised economy, a Bank that turns lending relationships into capital-market mandates does not just survive disintermediation, it makes money from it.

The Symbiotic Relationship with Nonbanking Financial Companies

Few things show how deeply Banks sit within the wider system better than their dealings with Non-Banking Financial Companies (NBFCs). NBFCs specialise in last-mile lending the formal banking channel tends to overlook, in commercial-vehicle finance, gold loans, microfinance and used-asset financing, where local knowledge counts and thin credit histories defeat standardised underwriting. But by and large NBFC's suffer from a lack a low-cost deposit base, leaving them at a structural funding-cost disadvantage to Banks.

To fund themselves, NBFCs rely heavily on wholesale markets, issuing non-convertible debentures (NCDs) and commercial paper (CP) to mutual funds and banks and borrowing term loans from banks. This may carry an asset-liability mismatch, with long-tenor loan books funded by short-tenor borrowings. In 2018, the default of a leading NBFC laid that fragility bare: as mutual funds stopped rolling over commercial paper, wholesale funding dried up and the sector faced a system-wide liquidity squeeze. Banks stepped in as the lender of penultimate resort, scaling up direct lending, buying out loan pools and, with the Regulator's help, channelling liquidity. The episode reshaped the operating model rather than ending the relationship: today the Bank-NBFC link runs through co-lending, priority-sector securitisation via pass-through certificates (PTCs) and direct-assignment pools, with Banks supplying Balance-Sheet capacity and priority-sector appetite while NBFCs supply origination reach. Through each cycle, Banks remain the system's shock absorber.

Deepening the Corporate Bond Market

Financing India's infrastructure pipeline and keeping growth high both need a deep, liquid corporate bond market. By developed-market standards the domestic market is still shallow: most issuance is via private placement rather than public offer, and demand bunches at the top of the rating curve. A deeper market would spread credit-concentration risk off Bank balance sheets, ease the fiscal burden of recapitalising stressed public-sector banks, and widen the funding base for long-gestation assets.

Banks are well placed to bridge these gaps. Because most corporate credit in India still originates within the Banking system, lenders hold a detailed, first-hand view of borrower creditworthiness that an arm's-length investor cannot match. On an originate-to-distribute basis, a Bank can credit-enhance an emerging issuer and bring it to the bond market as arranger and underwriter, while its treasury supports secondary-market liquidity through repo, market-making and buying when the market turns illiquid.

Regulators have also put bank balance sheets to work directly, through Partial Credit Enhancement (PCE), where a Bank provides a contingent, subordinated facility that lifts a bond's rating by several notches. By taking the first slice of default risk, PCE makes otherwise sub-investment-grade paper acceptable to long-only investors such as pension funds, insurers and provident funds, whose mandates restrict them to higher-rated bonds. It deepens the bond market and lets banks recycle capital, since a funded loan becomes a contingent line that frees balance-sheet room for fresh lending.

A Watershed Moment in Acquisition Financing

The single biggest change now reshaping the Bank-market relationship is the regulatory go-ahead for Bank-led acquisition finance. For several decades the stance was one of structural caution: the Banking Regulation Act and successive RBI master directions effectively stopped Banks to lend against Equty or fund acquisition, to curb speculative leverage and keep depositor money away from buyout risk. In practice this pushed Indian acquirers towards offshore syndicated loans, external commercial borrowings (ECBs) and structured private credit from AIFs, often layered through holding companies.

That stance has now shifted. After a draft Capital Market Exposure framework in October 2025, the RBI on 13 February 2026 amended its Commercial Banks (Credit Facilities) and (Concentration Risk Management) Directions to let Banks finance corporate acquisitions, effective 1 April 2026, with earlier adoption allowed under a Board-approved policy. This is a watershed for domestic M&A and for how leveraged and management buyouts (LBOs and MBOs) are structured. A Bank can now lend up to 75 percent of an independently assessed acquisition value, to the acquirer or a special-purpose vehicle (SPV), secured by a pledge of the target's shares. The sponsor funds the remaining 25 percent from internal accruals or fresh equity, keeping genuine skin in the game, and the post-acquisition debt-equity ratio at the acquirer, SPV or target is capped at 3:1. The opening up comes fenced in by prudential safeguards - A Bank's aggregate capital-market exposure (CME) stays capped at 40 percent of its eligible capital base, on a solo and consolidated basis, with acquisition finance held to a sub-limit of 20 percent of Tier-1 capital, doubled from the 10 percent first proposed after consultation. Eligibility is tight: acquirers must clear net-worth and three-year profitability tests, unlisted targets must carry at least an investment-grade rating, valuations must rest on two independent appraisals, and banks must run stress-testing, early-warning and disclosure frameworks. The aim is to open a channel for strategic, value-creating consolidation while keeping out purely speculative financial engineering.

Completing the Architecture: Adjacent Regulatory Reforms

Allowing acquisition finance is necessary but not sufficient; the new rules will not realise their potential in isolation. For a genuine domestic leveraged-finance market to take root, regulators must still clear related frictions across insolvency law, the tax code and permissible capital structures. In mature markets a buyout is funded through a tranched capital stack: senior secured Bank debt sits at the top of the waterfall, cushioned below by subordinated or mezzanine instruments, often with payment-in-kind (PIK) features, that take the first losses before senior lenders are touched. Because current rules keep domestic Alternative Investment Funds (AIFs) from this junior-debt role at scale, that tranche usually heads offshore, into structures governed by foreign-law intercreditor arrangements. A purpose-built domestic AIF category for buyout finance, with diversification and concentration limits, would let Indian banks syndicate alongside transparent local co-lenders, share risk through enforceable intercreditor and subordination terms, and lean less on offshore shadow banking.

Conclusion

India's experience suggests the rise of capital markets does not make Banks less relevant; it redefines what they do. The story is one of evolution, not displacement. From absorbing the early shock of disintermediation to supporting the NBFC sector , Banks have reinvented their model time and again. They are now central to deepening the corporate bond market and, with acquisition finance live from April 2026, are set to become direct engines of corporate consolidation. The next stage turns on alignment, joining up Banking norms with the IBC, the tax code and capital-market regulation. The way forward looks very interesting and India can build on the existent resilient financial system to fund its long-term ambitions.

The Market India Forgot

The future of the rupee depends on building a deeper bond market

Without going into the unresolvable debate on whether a strong or weak rupee matters, our ambition must be to ensure the rupee has a larger share of global foreign exchange reserves by 2047. At a recent ICAP India and NCAER Distinguished Lecture in Mumbai, economic historian Barry Eichengreen argued that currencies become international not because governments make them strong, but because investors find the financial systems behind them difficult to leave. Reserve currencies are not created by exchange-rate management but by financial development. The dollar's dominance rests less on America's GDP than on the unmatched depth, liquidity and credibility of its financial markets. Reserve currencies are built with trust, not intervention. Investors hold currencies backed by deep bond markets, predictable rules and abundant liquidity. If India wants the rupee to matter globally, the priority is not defending its price every day but building financial markets the world is reluctant to leave.

By almost every macroeconomic yardstick, India looks like a success story. Growth is strong, headline reserves exceed US$700 billion, inflation is contained and fiscal consolidation is back on track. India has built world-class digital public infrastructure, formalised millions of transactions and created one of the world's largest domestic savings pools. Yet every few years, markets remind policymakers of an uncomfortable reality that macroeconomics is necessary but not sufficient. The rupee comes under pressure. Government bond yields rise. Foreign investors turn cautious. Market intervention intensifies. The policy debate quickly turns to oil prices, geopolitics, portfolio flows, trade uncertainty and global risk sentiment. They explain the trigger, not the vulnerability.

The more important question is why a country with strong macroeconomic fundamentals, substantial domestic savings and growing global economic relevance still struggles to develop a fixed-income market capable of absorbing shocks and anchoring confidence. The answer lies in a less discussed reality—India built a world-class equity market but never quite finished building a bond market revolution. Yet before discussing what needs to be built, it is worth understanding how India arrived here. A reserve currency needs more than a large economy. It needs deep markets, abundant liquidity, credible institutions and the confidence that rules will not change when the rules become inconvenient. India has some of these ingredients in abundance. It has not yet assembled all of them into one financial architecture.

The Revolution That Never Happened

Over the past decade, India has transformed the way households participate in financial markets. The number of demat accounts expanded from fewer than 4 crore in 2020 to more than 22 crore. Monthly SIP inflows have crossed ₹32,000 crore, while mutual fund assets under management now exceed ₹85 lakh crore. Millions of first-time investors entered capital markets through digital platforms that made investing cheaper, faster and more accessible than ever before. This is one of the great success stories of modern Indian finance. But the transformation is asymmetric. Equities became accessible, visible and aspirational, fixed-income investing remained largely institutional. This was never an explicit policy choice. It emerged because taxes favoured equities, distributors sold what was simple and regulation prioritised safety over liquidity. The result is an unintended imbalance—a deep equity market alongside a shallow bond market.

For decades, India has also limited foreign participation in government debt markets. The memory of the Asian financial crisis and the Latin American debt crisis encouraged caution. India chose stability over openness and for good reason. The strategy largely worked, government borrowing remained funded by domestic institutions, currency volatility stayed contained and sovereign debt markets avoided the boom-bust cycles seen in several emerging economies. But every policy choice comes with a cost. The same framework that reduced vulnerability also reduced the urgency of building a broad, liquid and diversified bond market. India entered the twenty-first century with sophisticated equity markets but relatively shallow fixed-income markets. Today, that imbalance is becoming harder to ignore.

One Market, Two Symptoms

Markets are far less bureaucratic than governments. Policymakers debate exchange rates, bond markets, taxation, liquidity and capital flows in separate meetings. Investors price them together. This is also how international currencies acquire staying power. The dollar is not dominant simply because America is large. It is dominant because trade, banking, payments, reserves and the Treasury market reinforce one another. Financial networks have memory. Once liquidity concentrates somewhere, liquidity attracts more liquidity. A household choosing between equity and debt and a global fund deciding whether to hold Indian bonds both care about the same thing, the overall investment experience, not the institutional chart behind it.

This is why stress rarely remains contained. When one part of the system misfires, transmission is fast and rarely polite. India's inclusion in global bond indices has increased foreign participation in government securities. Foreign ownership of India's FAR-eligible government bonds has risen from roughly 4.6 percent a few years ago to nearly 7 percent today. That may still look small, but markets care about direction more than percentages. India is no longer on the margins of global fixed-income portfolios. As international investors actively hedge currency and interest-rate risk, bond and foreign-exchange markets increasingly move together.

Reading the Signals

The recent episode is not a macro crisis. India is not facing a 1991- or 2013-style external stress event. Reserve buffers are strong, banking balance sheets are healthier than they were a decade ago. Growth remains among the highest globally. Markets are not questioning India's trajectory. They are questioning the plumbing underneath it. That financial architecture matters beyond today's exchange rate.

The FY27 Budget promised fiscal discipline with a deficit target of 4.3 percent of GDP. Markets noticed the ₹17 lakh crore gross market-borrowing programme instead. That's because debt markets don't price aspirations; they price supply. Every additional bond issued needs someone willing to own it. The second signal is domestic demand. India has successfully created a nation of equity investors. It has not yet created a nation of bond investors. The distinction is not semantic. Equity markets are excellent at mobilising risk capital; bond markets are designed to mobilise patient capital. A large and ambitious economy, aspiring to finance infrastructure, housing, urbanisation, energy transition and industrial expansion, tends to eventually discover it needs both. Without broad participation, banks, insurers, provident funds, and regulatory mandates continue to absorb sovereign and corporate debt. The market continues to function, of course, just not with much enthusiasm.

India has no shortage of savings. The challenge is turning those savings into liquid financial assets and ultimately into rupee-denominated assets that foreigners are willing to hold. Internationalisation begins with transactions but ends with assets that foreigners willingly accumulate.

The third signal is friction. India has made government securities more attractive to foreign investors, but markets don't reward isolated reforms. They reward seamless systems. Investors look at taxes, documentation, settlement, hedging costs, liquidity and regulatory certainty together. The deepest bond markets were built not by offering the highest returns, but by removing the most obstacles.

The fourth signal is global participation. Daily turnover in rupee derivatives has risen from around US$38 billion in 2013 to more than US$130 billion in 2025. The rupee is no longer simply a domestic currency occasionally traded by global investors; it has become a globally traded risk asset. That changes the policy challenge. India's financial architecture can no longer treat the exchange rate, bond market and currency derivatives market as separate worlds. As global participation grows, the plumbing connecting them becomes more important and more visible. India should start building its financial markets for the currency the world is already trading, not just the currency it hopes to internationalise.

An Unintended Bias

Every financial system needs two engines. Equity funds risk. Debt funds time. India has become exceptionally good at mobilising risk capital but remains underpowered in mobilising long-term capital. And internationalisation ultimately requires something even more basic: foreigners need reasons to accumulate rupee assets, not merely reasons to transact in rupees. That matters because the next twenty years will be financed less by venture capital than by bond capital for infrastructure, housing, logistics, urbanisation, municipal finance, the energy transition and private credit.

Instead, corporate bond markets remain relatively small by peer comparison. Secondary-market liquidity is limited, market-making remains thin and credit-risk transfer mechanisms are still underdeveloped. As a result, the system continues to lean heavily on banks for intermediation. That works—until it becomes expensive. That's where the cost of capital quietly rises.

Firefighting Isn't Reform

Policymakers are not wrong to intervene in periods of volatility. Foreign exchange intervention has a legitimate role. Liquidity operations have a legitimate role. Open market operations and debt switches have a legitimate role. Regulatory restrictions on positions and capital flows also have a role. The problem begins when intervention quietly stops being a bridge and starts becoming a substitute for structure.

The RBI's recently concluded FCNR(B), ECB and OFCB swap measures are a good example. More than $70 billion was mobilised through these facilities, with FCNR(B) deposits accounting for the bulk of the inflows. The measure brought in dollars when the system needed dollars. But there is a familiar lesson here. India used a similar FCNR(B) mechanism in 2013, when the rupee was under pressure. It solved the immediate liquidity problem; it did not build the bond market that would make the next episode less dependent on intervention. The danger is that we become very good at moving the symptom forward without fixing the disease.

Markets work best when they price risk. They work less well when they start pricing the probability of regulatory intervention. They also price something harder to measure, whether the rules will remain predictable when the market becomes inconvenient. Reserve currencies require more than liquidity. They require institutional credibility. Liquidity dries up, price discovery weakens and private capital steps back. Gradually, the state becomes the primary market-maker, not because it wants to, but because private market-making has become too thin.

That is the difference between firefighting and reform. A subsidy can bring capital. An intervention can calm a currency. A swap can buy time. None of them, by itself, creates deeper markets, better price discovery or greater investor confidence. If the same problem keeps returning, perhaps the problem is not the absence of another intervention. Perhaps it is the absence of the market architecture that makes intervention necessary in the first place.

Finishing the Job

If the diagnosis is right, the prescription is straightforward. India needs less firefighting and more financial architecture. Stop treating exchange rates, bond markets, taxation, liquidity and capital flows as separate policy conversations. Governments regulate in silos. Markets invest in systems. A stronger rupee, lower borrowing costs and deeper bond markets are not different objectives. They are different outcomes of the same financial architecture.

Start with incentives. Household savings should move between equity and debt based on risk and return, not tax arbitrage. Deep bond markets cannot emerge if policy continues nudging discretionary savings overwhelmingly towards equities.

Next, reduce friction. Global investors don't evaluate taxes, settlement, documentation, hedging costs and exit liquidity separately. They judge the entire investment experience. Capital chases returns, but it stays for convenience.

Then build liquidity. India's bond market is still largely a buy-and-hold market. Deep markets need active trading, stronger market-makers, broader repo markets, better risk-transfer instruments and long-term institutional investors such as pension funds and insurers.

Finally, build trust. Deep markets cannot be legislated into existence. Investors need confidence in the rules, institutions and backstops behind those markets. The dollar's advantage was never just the size of the American economy; it was the combination of liquid assets, credible institutions and a financial system that the world learned to trust. India cannot copy that history. But it can learn the lesson.

None of this guarantees a reserve-currency rupee. Nor should India confuse ambition with inevitability. Local-currency settlement with Russia, the UAE and Bangladesh has shown that transactions can move into rupees; it has not yet created a strong appetite among foreign central banks to hold them. The difference matters. Internationalisation begins with transactions but ends with assets that foreigners willingly accumulate.

India's first generation of reforms liberalised the economy. The second digitised it. The third must deepen its financial markets. A reserve currency is not defended into existence; it is built into existence. The rupee's future will depend not on how aggressively India manages its price, but on whether the world has enough reasons to hold its assets. The market India forgot is the market it now needs to build.

XXXIV: ALERTS

ALERTS are intelligence services providing the subscribers with advance leads on forthcoming issues to help them market their services to prospective clients. These are also being used by subscribers to plan investments in companies entering the capital market.

The service provides details of companies (address, phone numbers, promoters, brief project description, issue type & size, investment bankers, instrument, etc.) proposing to enter the capital market in the near future or several months later. Instead of waiting to compile the complete data on a company, as much information as is available is released so that it remains timely and can help subscribers initiate work.

The data is continuously updated for addresses, issue details, appointment of investment bankers, filing with SEBI etc.

HOW ADVANCE IS THE INFORMATION

As an example, of the approximately 300 companies which made public issues in 2024-25, 31% were announced by IPO-ALERT more than 6 months in advance and 11% more than 12 months in advance. The following table illustrates the extent of advance information provided by IPO-ALERT relating to public issues of 2025-26:

No.of Days Announced in Advance by ALERT	%
Not covered by ALERT	-
Less than 1 month	-
1-2 months	2
2-3 months	12
3-6 months	55
6-12 months	20
More than 12 months	11
	100

XXXVI: ANNUAL REPORTS

PUBLIC ISSUES - EQUITY & DEBT

The data relating to all Public Issues which open between a financial year is aggregated and analysed in the Annual Report (Equity-IPOs, FPOs, SME IPOs, SME FPOs & OFS (SE) & Convertibles separately and Debt Offerings separately), which is in 2 parts.

PART I: STRUCTURAL ANALYSIS

An Executive Summary provides an invaluable insight into the Public Issues of the year. The Report includes structural analysis spread over various statements. It also provides league tables of various intermediaries (based on no. of issues and amount) like investment bankers, collecting bankers, underwriters, registrars, advertising agencies and printers.

PART II: RESPONSE ANALYSIS

This volume provides response data and analysis of all the Public Issues. This Report is in three sections:

a) Response Analysis

Response data is analysed on several parameters: size of issue, type of instrument, industry, state, status of companies etc. Ranking is done on various other parameters including times subscribed, number of applications, total amount collected etc.

b) Geographical Response Pattern

Geographical response pattern of issues offered to Indian Public is analysed in great detail by providing state-wise, state-wise city-wise and city-wise response data.

c) Performance-based Ranking of Intermediaries

This section deals with performance-based rankings of bankers (collections), registrars (applications processed) and brokers (procurement). Ranking of brokers is done on an all-India basis.

YOUR ORGANISATION & THIS DIRECTORY

More as a rule than an exception, people do not respond to the questionnaires but when the directories are published, errors are pointed out. This note is to urge you to provide us with updated information about your organisation.

☞ If your Organisation is included

If you find that the entry relating to your organisation is incomplete or needs some corrections, please write to us immediately. Use the Input Form printed after this page and send it to us at the earliest so that we can include the same in our next update.

☞ If your Organisation is not included

Though all efforts have been made to include all relevant organisations in this Directory, it is still possible that some may have been left out. If your organisation falls in the gambit of this Directory but your name is not included, please fill up the Input Form printed after this page and send it to us at the earliest so that we can include the same in our next update.

☞ Names of People in this Directory

The financial services sector is always undergoing a tremendous change. New organisations are being set up, existing ones are expanding while some are closing operations. Obviously, this is leading to massive job hopping by professionals. It is, therefore, likely that the names of some people are appearing at the wrong place in this Directory or are missing. Please do send us the corrections.

☞ About Phone/ Fax Numbers

If you cannot get through to a number listed in this Directory, it would be advisable to seek the assistance of Telephone Enquiries. Please also advise us of any changes in your phone/ fax numbers.

Send your response to:

INTRODUCTION TO SECTIONS 2 TO 9

SECTION 2 : REGISTRARS & SHARE TRANSFER AGENTS

PART I : REGISTRARS & SHARE TRANSFER AGENTS-SEBI REGISTERED

Criterion for Inclusion

All registrars who have handled any public issue between April, 1989 and August, 2026 and/or rights issues between April, 1990 and August, 2026, and who hold a valid SEBI registration as on 1st July, 2026 have been covered.

Also provided for each registrar are details of:

* Number of assignments and all-India ranking as well as issue amount and all-India ranking in public issues for each year from 2021-2022 to 2025-2026.
* Number of assignments and all-India ranking as well as issue amount and all-India ranking in rights issues for each year from 2021-2022 to 2025-2026.
* Number of applications processed and all-India ranking for public issues during each year from 2021-2022 to 2025-2026.

Note : Whenever an issue is handled by more than one registrar, full credit is provided to all the concerned registrars.

PART II : REGISTRARS & SHARE TRANSFER AGENTS-DEREGISTERED & OTHERS

Criterion for Inclusion

Registrars who were earlier registered with SEBI but have either been subsequently deregistered by SEBI or who have opted for voluntary withdrawal have been listed here.

Annexures of Section 2
